Shore Residents Learn About Opioid Abuse

By Linda Cicaira

With the growing numbers of local residents becoming addicted to drugs like heroin and fentanyl, officials who are dealing with the epidemic offered signals Tuesday to watch for.

Brian Moran, state secretary of public safety and homeland security, was at the drug forum and warned parents and others about keeping old prescriptions in their medicine cabinets. He urged them to turn the extras over to police collections.

If you don't think your children might use them, a friend of theirs could," Moran said. His daughter had her wisdom teeth pulled and was given "cherry flavored hydrocodone. We were appalled," he added. "I had Bayer aspirin when mine were extracted."

"Ultimately, there will have to be the community coming together ... to start seeing those numbers (of overdose victims and addicts) decline," said Moran.

Dr. David Matson, director of the Eastern Shore Health District, noted a woman in Croatia accidentally killed her 2-year-old grandson when she confused a fentanyl patch for a Bandaid. Fentanyl paralyzes as well as gives a high, he said. "It is so powerful it can be given through the skin" not by injection.

Scott Wade, director of the Eastern Shore Drug Task Force (ESDTF), urged parents to look in their kids' bedrooms but not to become alarmed simply because a teenager is messy, although disarray can be a sign of drug use.

However, if you find a needle cap on the floor, there was probably a needle somewhere, he said. Cotton from the filters of cigarettes are used for heroin. Other small pieces of cotton can be suspicious, along with little plastic bags, laxatives, a spoon with a bent handle and money missing from purse or wallet.

Even a container of noodles or coffee creamer container may look "normal" but if it has a $25 or $35 price tag sticker on it, it could be a storage unit for drugs. A mock bedroom at the event showed a lipstick with a false bottom and a screw-apart soda bottle.

Heroin is usually smoked, snorted or injected. Depending on the method being used, one could find remnants of the drugs or paraphernalia including powdery, sticky or crumbly substances, from off-white to dark brown and syringes, small glass or metal pipes, small belts or rubber tubing.

Physical symptoms include flushing of skin, bloodshot or glazed eyes, covering arms with long sleeves regardless of temperature, avoiding eye contact, distance field of vision, more time sleeping, sudden or worsening of school performance, expulsion or loss of job, financial woes, poor hygiene and physical appearance, behavioral changes, depression, insomnia, muscle weakness, memory and motivation loss, withdrawal from family and friends, lack of interest in hobbies or other favorite activities, weight change, runny nose, track marks, dilated or constricted pupils, abscesses, scabs, profuse sweating, muscle and bone pain, intense cramps, legs kicking, cold sweat and chills.

Heroin will cause the user to have a dry mouth, skin

Virginia House Candidates Face Off at Citizens' Forum

By Stefanie Jackson

Candidates for the 100th District of the Virginia House of Delegates faced off Tuesday night at forum at Northampton High School sponsored by Citizens for a Better Eastern Shore.

Del. Robert Bloxom Jr., who is prioritizing economic growth and jobs, and challenger Willie Randall, who wants expanded Medicaid and universal pre-K, fielded written questions from the audience on a variety of issues on voters' minds.

Bloxom stated that redistricting "is political, and always will be." Randall favored redistricting specifically because it has been political. He said district lines have been drawn so that "the politicians pick the voters and not the other way around," and that needs to be changed.

Randall supports increased funding for the Department of Environmental Quality, which has remained flat since 1999, and is needed for the rapid expansion of poultry farms. He was concerned about pollution caused by chicken waste. Bloxom would not increase DEQ funding, since doing so could decrease school funding. He said that under best management practices, poultry farmers have already contracted where the manure goes, and extra money would be better spent on cover crops.

On creating new legislation to control gun violence, Bloxom said, "it's hard to make an illegal weapon more illegal than it already is." He asserted that new laws will not prevent gun violence. Randall disagreed and said that automatic weapons should be more difficult

Northampton State of the Schools Is Hopeful for Future

Northampton High School hosted the county's first annual State of the Schools Community Forum Oct. 17, where dozens of stakeholders gathered to celebrate the school district's successes and identify opportunities for improvement. The forum's purpose was to initiate a "strategic partnership" between the school district and the local business community to achieve "positive student outcomes."

The event was the brainchild of Andy Teeling, board member of the Northampton County Education Foundation, whose mission is "to engage the community and mobilize resources to promote student performance and excellence in teaching in our public schools."

Stakeholders included NCEF board members, current and former Northampton school board members, administrators, and educators, local politicians, county supervisors, business owners and chamber of commerce representatives.

Though the forum was dotted with prominent community leaders and educational professionals, the brainstorming session held in the NHS gym had the character of a grassroots initiative. Stakeholders participated in informal, small group discussions, each lasting fifteen minutes, timed by the basketball scoreboard overhead. Ideas were jotted down in marker on colored paper and taped all over the front wall of the gym after being shared with the whole group.

The successes noted were programs for robotics, fine arts, and writing contests. The standout was the county's dual-enrollment program with the Eastern Shore Community College. The Access College Foundation, which awards scholarships, was also recognized.

According to stakeholders, teachers and parents are the two groups most in need of community support to create a foundation for student success.

Superintendent Eddie Lawrence reported Northampton teacher salaries are the lowest in the region, making it difficult to attract educators who have hundreds of teaching positions available to them as Virginia continues to experience statewide teacher shortages.

Higher pay and better housing options for teachers were the two most common stakeholder recommendations to address for teacher retention. Career support for spouses of newly recruited teachers was mentioned. Teachers should also feel more valued, stakeholders said. They suggested a PTA-sponsored "adopt a teacher" program.

Stakeholders encouraged more parental involvement in school, which is positively correlated with student achievement, research indicates. Exmore businessman Willie Randall, who is running for a seat in the 100th District seat in the Virginia House of Delegates, pointed out that for many parents, especially English language learners, the "school system is intimidating." Mozella Francis agreed that "trust is a big issue" for parents wanting to become more involved in their children's education. Focus groups to determine classroom needs should be composed of parents and their peers, Francis said.

School and parent communication should be improved, stakeholders agreed. Text messaging should be used more frequently, since the majority of parents have cell phone service. Newspaper and radio announcements can provide further outreach. Major employers and public service providers could post important school communications.

Hiring communications officer was recommended to improve overall communications. Teeling added, "The county needs to do a much better job of broadcasting our successes."

Because the composite index is "broken" in Northampton, Lawrence said, the county essentially must match every dollar the state spends on the school district. The composite index is the formula used to calculate each county's ability to pay for its children's education. Communication with state legislators will be needed to initiate reform.

Several stakeholders volunteered to circulate a petition to change the composite index, which would be presented to Virginia's new governor. Spencer Murray, chairman of Northampton's board of supervisors, asked the school board to write the petition.

Stakeholders discussed the symbiotic relationship between local economies and schools: Good schools attract new businesses, which in turn attract graduates with offers of employment. Stakeholders stressed the need to build on the success of partnerships like NHS and ESCC's dual enrollment and career and technical education programs, as well as the new career mentor and job shadowing program at the high school that Teeling initiated.

Though there has been concern in Northampton about population decline and what that means for the future workforce, Lawrence reported that last year, student enrollment rose from 1505 to 1570, the first increase in 14 years. While Lawrence was not yet ready to call it a "trend," he said it was a positive sign.

Northampton Historical Society to Salvage 1914 Jail Locks

By Stefanie Jackson

Northampton supervisors Spencer Murray and Oliver Bennett may soon be able to end a long-running joke about who will drive the bulldozer and who will drive the truck to finally demolish the county's dilapidated 1914 jail building.

The jail has been a source of contention for supervisors for roughly a decade. The demolition project has been extended numerous times, and Murray is adamant about eliminating the "eyesore" with missing molding and a sagging roof, among other safety issues.

Two demolition bids were presented to supervisors Oct. 10, but a dispute with the Northampton Historic Preservation Society threatened to delay the project yet again.

The society had requested the bids include estimates to salvage historical artifacts from the jail, including a unique cell door system with working locking mechanisms, which was "cutting edge technology for its day," Murray said, similar to the system used at Alcatraz and the Indiana jail where John Dillinger was incarcerated.

Murray was "torn" because he felt it was "an artifact that belongs to the county" but questioned whether taxpayers should fund the salvage, considering Northampton's financial struggles with "teachers to pay" and "schools to build."

Bennett added, "All history is not good history for everybody ... for some folks, that may not be the history they want to remember."

Supervisors informed historical society president, Joyce Kappeler, that her organization would be responsible for the cost of removing the artifacts from the jail.

Chris Thomas, director of public works, reported to supervisors Oct. 23 that the historical society had received two offers from local welders to salvage the jail artifacts; one had contacted the historical society through its website and volunteered to do the project at little to no charge.

Murray made clear the artifacts would remain the property of Northampton and no sale of the items had been considered. There was some citizen concern following the Oct. 10 supervisors meeting, when it was discovered that a locking mechanism similar to the ones in the 1914 jail was reportedly valued at $15,000.

Murray said supervisors would vote on jail demolition bids Nov. 21, and the historical society would have until then to complete the artifact salvage project.

Thomas updated supervisors on Morley's Wharf. All three docks, or fixed piers, and seawalls at the site will be demolished. Two floating docks and new seawalls will be built, similar to those found at Willis Wharf and Oyster.

The high bid received from a Fredericksburg contractor was $212,903. The low bid, from a Chincoteague contractor, was $82,450. There is $105,126 in Virginia Port Authority grant funds likely to be transferred in November from the Willis Wharf project to pay for the Morley's Wharf project. Any unused funds can be transferred back to the Willis Wharf project.

Supervisors Oliver Bennett and Robert Duer, whose respective districts include the towns of Exmore, Belle Haven, and Nassawadox, wanted to make sure the larger, Willis Wharf project would still be accomplished. Deputy County Administrator Janice Williams said there were some county funds set aside, but she needed to determine the amount. County Administrator Charles Kolakowski said funding options would be available for review at the board's Nov. 21 meeting.

Vehicle Inspections

There are 16,100 vehicles registered in Northampton County, but only three inspection stations, down from eight previously. The business is costly and offers little profit. Citizens have been complaining about the inconvenience of keeping vehicle inspections up to date. Murray suggested three possible solutions, all of which require legislative action: raising the inspection price, exempting vehicles under two years old from inspection, or eliminating vehicle inspections altogether. He said he would speak to Sen. Lynwood Lewis and Del. Robert Bloxom about the concern.

FILMS DRIVE HOME PERSONAL TOLL OF OPIOID ABUSE

A seven-minute film featuring a local mother's nightmare will break your heart and open your eyes about opioid abuse on the Eastern Shore of Virginia.

Katelynn Sterling, of Saxis, was only 20 when she died in July 2016, from complications of heroin addiction. Her story and that of Allegheny County Sheriff Kevin Hall's son, an injured football star, who got hooked on painkillers and eventually heroin, were featured during two sessions of a drug forum attended by about 150 concerned residents Tuesday.

Before drugs, Katelynn Sterling's mother, Holly Sterling, described her daughter as a fun-loving, bright cheerleader and student. The changes began when her daughter was 15. Over more than five years, she started smoking marijuana, dropped out of high school, got into harsher drugs like cocaine, and then began doing heroin, sniffing and eventually intravenously, "until she was a full-blown heroin addict."

"I would speak to her and she would cry out to me," Holly Sterling said in the film. "There were physical changes in her body." When Holly Sterling was called to the hospital, the drugs were eating her daughter "from the inside out."

"She was so sick," her mother remembered. Now she is convinced "weed can be a gateway to other hard drugs. I didn't get that chance to say good-bye. My life will never be the same without her," Holly Sterling said. "You only have one life here on earth and its precious ... There is no second chance ... She went from the Katelynn we knew to someone my Dad couldn't recognize."

Her daughter "did not know how deep she was getting into the mess," Holly Sterling said. "Her friends were bad influences ... you have to change people, places and things."

Sheriff Hall held back the tears in his film, also made by Gunther Friedrichs, and urged people not to do this to their families. His son, Ryan, survived, but struggles with the constant fear of using heroin again and going through rough withdrawal again.

"Save some other family from having to go through this," he said to those thinking about using these drugs. "Do not try this stuff. This stuff ... is so bad. It's so powerful.

You're going to ruin your life. Please don't put yourself or your family through that," Hall added.

Addicts can't get the "effect of the drug out of their brains," local psychiatrist Dr. John Ogram told the crowd. Addicts fear the law and discovery. "They operate on shame. They are ashamed of what they've gotten to."

Opioid addiction can affect everyone and anyone. "It's like somebody shows up with a convertible and everyone else says, 'I want a ride,'" Dr. David Matson, director of the Eastern Shore Health District, told the crowd.

"We're a pill-taking culture," he continued. "If you go to a doctor's office and you don't come out with a prescription ... you are probably dissatisfied. Regarding street sales, he added, "You used to have to go somewhere to get them, now you can get pizza delivery of pills."

Opioids can be prescription pain medications like Percocet or Dilaudid or synthetic drugs like heroin and fentanyl, the latter of which was initially made to allow patients to be put on respirators so their bodies could gain strength before taking back over.

"Fentanyl kills you in four minutes," said Matson. He complained modern technology makes it easier with encrypted text messages that add ####, which means "come and get it."

Figures show 24 people died in the two-county area from drug overdose in 2014. Five other local residents died while visiting other areas in Virginia and seven were in another state when they were overcome from opioids.

Brian Moran, state secretary of public safety and homeland security, said restrictions on prescription drugs have helped to bring mortality rates down a little but heroin and fentanyl abuse is rising as they continue to be "affordable, cheap and accessible." In addition, state forensic labs are "overwhelmed" and "backlogged."

Accomack Commonwealth's Attorney Spencer Morgan agreed. He sometimes has to wait six to seven months for a report that helps "bring a person to justice."

Moran said he is hoping for six additional analysts but it will take a while to catch up. He called the epidemic a health care crisis.

The referrals for drug rehabilitation has doubled locally. Matson said some seek treatment when they become pregnant and desperately need help because a mother would go into labor in withdrawal.

flushing, constricted pupils, nodding off suddenly, unclear thinking, poor decision making and self-control, itching, nausea, vomiting, skin and other infections.

Younger children also need to be observed for behavioral changes, said Shenay Wharton of the Eastern Shore Community Services Board

(ESCSB). Those kids may also be robbing the medicine cabinets. “We see multiple substances, hyperactivity ... and anxiety in social settings.”

A lot of family members want to clean up the scene of a drug overdose, said Wade. “You are risking your life, fentanyl will go right through your skin.” Wait for authorities to arrive and let them handle it, he said. “I know there’s somebody in this room right now that has a family member or themselves... and need help,” said Wade. He urged them to get it.

Both Accomack Commonwealth’s Attorney Spencer

Morgan and Wade say they are looking to arrest dealers not those simply possessing the illegal substances. But use often comes with thefts and burglaries, which are considered violent crimes.

Dr. John Ogram, a local psychiatrist, noted the first month an addict gets out of jail, is the hardest. “They will shoot up again. That’s when they die. They have no tolerance” after being clean in jail.

Judge Recuses Self From Case of Forged Traffic Summonses

Judge W. Revell Lewis III, who regularly presides over Accomack Circuit Court, recused himself earlier this month from hearing the case of a former state trooper indicted on six counts of forging traffic summonses.

"I am so situated in respect to the above-styled case to render it improper for me to preside so therefore I recuse myself," Lewis wrote in a court file on Oct. 6. One could presume the trooper had come before the judge in other cases in his job capacity or that Lewis might personally know the defendant. Lewis did not offer an explanation in court documents.

The move came four days after former Trooper Johnny Godwin, 43, of Jolly Rogers Drive in Greenbackville, was indicted on half a dozen counts of forging Virginia Uniform Summonses, in November 2016.

On Oct. 16, Chief Judge William R. O'Brien, of the 2nd Judicial Circuit, designated Judge Stephen Mahan to preside over the case.

Court records show two days later the bond for Godwin was amended to allow him to travel outside Virginia so he could visit his ailing father-in-law in Salisbury, Md.

Godwin was indicted on two counts of forging summonses on Nov. 25, 2016, in the name of Kevin Cooper Leslie; two counts of forging summonses on Nov. 26, 2016, in the name of Mitra Elizabeth English; and two counts of forging summonses on Nov. 26, 2016, in the name of Larry Gordon Marsh II.

Sarah C. Berning, a prosecutor in the Prince William County Commonwealth's Attorney's office, was assigned to the case.

Godwin joined the force in October 1996. He resigned in April 2017. Special Agent J. Steven Pruitt gave information to the grand jury about the allegations.

A trial date has not been set.

Man Sentenced for Tyson Bomb Threats

A Pungoteague man was given prison terms last week in Accomack Circuit Court for making bomb threats to Tyson Foods in Temperanceville in February 2016.

Danny Jurmell Robertson, 33, of Pungoteague Road, was sentenced to three years each for two counts of threatening to bomb a building. The terms were set to run concurrently with all but seven months suspended. Five years of good behavior was also ordered.

Robertson pleaded no contest at a trial in March 2017.

A clerical worker at the chicken plant testified at a preliminary hearing that the calls came in around 9 a.m. Officers testified that only two calls were received between about 8:50 a.m. and 9:10 a.m. The owner of one phone number was eliminated as a suspect because he had applied for a job at the business and was calling to inquire about his status. The other call came from the cell phone of Travis White, of Melfa, who was working at the plant when the threats were made. White told the court that he was working with Robertson that day and let the defendant borrow his phone so he could call his girlfriend. He said Robertson left the freezer, where they were working, so he could get phone service.

Police searched the plant that day and no devices were located.

In another case, Summer Leanne Jones, 22, of Bayside Drive in Bloxom, pleaded guilty to distributing heroin in December 2016. A presentence report was ordered. Sentencing was set for February. The maximum punishment for the crime is life in prison plus a $500,000 fine.

Romar Lamont Reid, 33, of Edward Street in Norfolk, pleaded guilty to distributing cocaine in November 2016. Sentencing will also be held in February. The maximum sentence for the offense is 40 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

Lawrence Walter Nalls III, 27, of Nancock Gardens Road in Onancock, pleaded not guilty to receiving a stolen gun and possession of a firearm by a felon between July 22 and Aug. 9, 2016. He was convicted of the charges.

Records also showed probable cause was found on Oct 18, in Accomack Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court to certify more than a dozen charges of forgery, uttering and larceny against Tina Cole, 59, of Hopkins Road in Parksley, to a grand jury. She was arrested in August and freed on unsecured bond of $2,500.

FORMER COUNCILMAN RAISED FLAGS ABOUT HALLWOOD CLERK

By Linda Cicoira

A former Hallwood councilman told the Eastern Shore Post this week that a decade ago he “raised flags in that town over Angela Taylor,” the clerk whose car recently caught fire along with all the municipality’s records just prior to an audit, and “was basically told to mind my own business.”

The clerk’s stepson, Joshua Taylor, also denounced her on the Post’s Facebook page. In addition, records disclose she has firefighting experience. Taylor, 44, of Hall Street, said last week she wouldn’t comment while a state police investigation is ongoing.

“She shouldn’t have kept those books at her house,” said ex-Councilman James Dean, who lives in Kentucky now with his family. “Angela used to record the meetings. I would request a copy. She would deny my request. She would deny my FOIA (Freedom of Information Act) request. I was ridiculed because I accused her of cooking the books. They had council members call out sick so I wouldn’t have a quorum. It’s like the wild west in that town,” Dean said. He moved to the Eastern Shore from Hampton Roads and even though he was on the council, he felt like an outcast.

“The place was just getting too hostile for me,” Dean continued. “We bought a farm in Kentucky and we left.” They purchased the property via the internet. “I’m glad I left Hallwood, probably one of the best things I’ve done in my life.” He said he was also glad they had Mayor Jackie Poulson because “he has a little bit of backbone.”

“I wasn’t allowed to see the books,” Dean said. So, he asked the state police to investigate. “A trooper came and got the books,” he said. Dean never got the results of that probe.

He partly questioned what Taylor was doing with the town’s money because she had acquired property that she shouldn’t have been able to afford with her being the only member of the household with a job at that time.

“This woman is my step mother. ... This Christmas will mark the fourth year I haven’t said a word to her or my father” for a disagreement over his tax return, Joshua Taylor said. “In fact if I hadn’t been so gracious and pursued it like I should’ve it probably would’ve been mentioned in the Post right along with my taser incident.” Taylor insinuated the car fire was “in hopes of mercy and sympathy and they think everyone else are the dumb asses but everyone can see what the deal is here.”

Dean was also suspicious of happenings at the Taylor house. “A lot of cars were coming and going and four-wheelers would go down the railroad tracks” close to their residence. Dean lived on Marshall Street and could see the back of their house from his door.

Angela Taylor’s husband, Greg, was recorded in a video in 2009, using Hallwood Police Chief Wilson Glenn’s taser to stun Joshua Taylor, who was then 15. A video of the incident circulated on social media. At that time, all involved said it was a joke and that the boy was never really hit.

Mayor Jackie Poulson said it was swept under the carpet when Glenn claimed the taser belonged to him even though the town had paid for the weapon. The mayor said Glenn later paid for it with compensation time he was owed. But, now the proof of that is lost with the rest of the records. The police department, which consisted only of Glenn, was later dismantled.

Dean said he called the taser company and learned the town had bought the weapon. So he says it did not belong to Glenn to loan to anyone. Dean said child services should have gotten involved.

Angela Taylor resigned from the town job this month in a letter she left in the town office, in which she apologized for the fire. Poulson said the blaze occurred a couple of days before the town documents were to be turned over for a long-overdue audit. He noted that Taylor lives about 350 yards from the town office and mostly did the town work at her home. The fire occurred about five miles from Hallwood on Wessells Farm Road, which is on the other side of the road.

She said she was on her way home from work when smoke started coming from the dashboard. Work was also closer to the other side of town. The vehicle was hauled to a local salvage yard, crushed and taken away before the town found out about it, Poulson said.

The mayor also says she refuses to return the town’s laptop. He met with state police earlier this month. The agency is investigating the matter. The burned records included minutes of town meetings and Taylor’s work schedule.

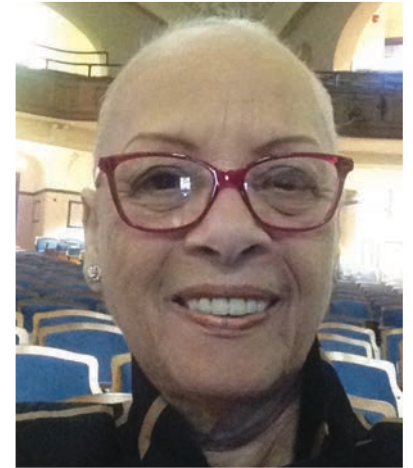

Poulson was not available for comment at press time Thursday.

More Details Disclosed in Case of Former Kegotank PTA President Accused of Embezzling

By Linda Cicoira

Details were disclosed in Accomack Circuit Court this week regarding embezzlement charges made against Jennifer Brook Stapleton, an outspoken former president of Kegotank Elementary School's Parent Teacher Association (PTA).

Stapleton, 37, of Pond Road in Temperanceville, was indicted on two counts of embezzling more than $200 from the PTA between Jan. 1, and Dec. 31, 2015.

Commonwealth's Attorney Spencer Morgan filed a bill of particulars in the case in response to discovery questions requested by Stapleton's lawyer, Thomas L. Northam.

The bill is a detailed formal written statement of charges or claims. A list from one of the charges shows a debit card that Stapleton used: for $20 at Exxon Mobile in Westover Md., on Jan. 16, 2015; $15.88 at Rite Aid in Pocomoke, Md., on Jan. 16, 2015; $20 at Exxon/Mobile in Fruitland, Md., May 14, 2015; $14.17 at McDonald's in Salisbury, Md., May 15, 2015; $25 at Exxon/Mobile in Fruitland, May 15, 2015; $23.04 at McDonald's in Snow Hill, Md., June 8, 2015; $8.25 at McDonald's in Salisbury, June 11, 2015; and $150 at Beach Bounders in Fruitland, June 15, 2015.

Beach Bounders is a gymnastics training facility.

"Similarly the commonwealth is alleging that there were three purchases which constitute an embezzlement during the period outlined in count two of the ... indictment," Morgan wrote.

On July 2, 2015, a charge for $22 at Sunoco in Temperanceville was made. "No receipts or disbursement requests were submitted in conjunction with this purchase," Morgan continued. On July 20, 2015, an amount of $20 was charged at Royal Farms in Nelsonia, also with no receipts or disbursement requests. Stapleton is accused of spending $131.52 at Food Lion in Oak Hall for items that included dog food and breakfast cereal.

In August 2015, money was embezzled from receipts collected at a bingo event held at the Parksley Volunteer Fire Department, the document stated. "Witnesses ... will testify that there was over

$2,000 collected at this event, a fact remarked upon by those present because the amount was greater than that collected by the Kegotank Beta Club at a similar fundraiser," Morgan wrote. "Shortly after the event, the treasurer's report was filed for August and corresponding bank records show a deposit of $1,561. However, the Kegotank PTA receipts and disbursements through Feb. 29, 2016, document provided to the PTA by the defendant show receipts of $2,016 for the August bingo event."

"Additionally, the event listed costs of $100 on the defendant's own accounting in the aforementioned document dated Feb. 29, 2016 which is corroborated by check #1778 made to the Parksley VFD on Aug. 28, 2015," the bill states.

A "check had only one signature, a violation of the PTA bylaws," according to Morgan.

There was also "embezzled money from receipts from an event where Krispy Kreme donuts were sold by the PTA in September of 2015. The treasurer's report for September 2015, bank deposit slips and the executive register from the 2015-16 school year all indicated that there was $3,323 collected from the event. PTA and bank records also indicated that the cost of the sale was $2,821.50. However the summary of Kegotank PTA receipts through February 16, 2016, indicated $4,624."

"The record should have reflected more than $5,000," the court records said. "This is a projected figure that does not include the more than 70 dozens of glazed donuts comped to the PTA by Krispy Kreme. Copies of the Krispy Kreme order sheet and additional supporting documentation is attached to a true copy ... and forwarded to counsel for the defendant."

Morgan also noted that unrelated to PTA business, a purchase at Walmart in Snow Hill was made on Sept. 3, 2015. "Those items included 409 carpet cleaner, rice and hairstyling products."

An event called Fall Grams held in October 2015, shows $730 in receipts through actual bank deposits show only $595, the record showed.

Stapleton is also accused of embezzling $356 for a movie event held on two nights in November 2015. “Based on movie night rosters, the total amount collected should have been more than $500. Each child was charged $5 with a total of 104 students. There is no record of any deposits made for that event.”

“Embezzled from a December 2015 Winter Day Event, Kegotank PTA indicates $455 was collected but deposits made on three dates afterwards only show $135.” The December 2015 Holiday Shop event, the defendant reports receipts of over $1,795.” Actual deposits reflect only a single deposit of $409.05,” Morgan wrote.

In addition, the PTA had 115 members. But records show “the defendant only paid dues for just over 40 members for $157.50.” The dues owed should have been $435, the records stated.

Stapleton is free on $5,000 unsecured bond. She has denied the allegations to authorities and was granted permission to travel to Salisbury, Md., Pocomoke, Md., Wilmington, Del., and Elizabeth City, N.C., “for the purpose of attending her daughter’s dance class, softball games and for shopping purposes.”

Record also show Stapleton’s husbands income at between $8,000 and $14,000 monthly.

The case has been continued a couple of times. No trial date had been set at press time Thursday.

Phase III of Cape Charles Trail Set to Start

By Stefanie Jackson

Ten years after the Cape Charles Community Trail Master Plan was created, the town is ready to begin phase three of the project that will eventually connect all of its major destinations for pedestrians, bicyclists, and other non-motorized traffic.

The trail system will benefit residents and visitors alike, linking the town’s residential, commercial and public lands while allowing travel, exercise, recreation, and natural observation stops throughout the town.

The bicycle-friendly, hard surface trail is being built from the town’s center outward. Phase one established the trail in and around Central Park. Phase two extended the trail from the park along north Peach Street and adjacent Washington Avenue, and phase three will extend the trail from the park along south Peach Street. Phase four will target Bay Avenue, along the west side of town. Future phases of the trail will include Mason Avenue, to the south, and Fig Street, to the east, bringing the trail full circle around the town’s perimeter. Connections to the town harbor and other nearby areas are also possible.

According to the community trail master plan, its intent is assisting “in the preservation and protection of the town’s historic character through the understanding and incorporation of various historic elements into the design of the trail.” At a recent meeting of the town council, several south Peach Street residents disapproved of narrowing the median to make room for the community trail, altering the street’s character.

Edward Brinkley disagreed with the notion of removing “green space” to put in “eight foot sidewalks,” saying he originally chose to live on Peach Street for its “verdant” median. However, he agreed that the portion of the street approaching the park requires proper sidewalks and parking.

Joe Fehrer said narrowing the median would negatively affect the historic, 70-year-old crepe myrtles growing there, possibly causing damage to their root systems and bark.

Erin Harvey asked if Peach Street’s two residential blocks, near Central Park, could be left untouched, rehabilitating only the commercial block, off Mason Avenue. After much debate, council agreed and passed a motion limiting phase three of the community trail project to south Peach Street’s commercial block. Its residential blocks must be addressed in a future phase of the community trail plan, as all sections of the completed trail must connect in order to be approved by VDOT.

Any leftover funds from phase three of the trail’s construction will transfer to phase four.

The council permitted beginning the application to fund phase four of the trail, at Bay Avenue, for a cost of $1.3 million. The town pays about 20 percent of the cost for each phase of the trail, with the remaining 80 percent funded by the federal Transportation Alternatives Program (TAP).

Improvements at Bay Avenue, by the beachfront, will include a plaza, handicapped entrance, crosswalks, sand control measures to stabilize dunes, and the removal of poles and other “visual clutter.” Council would like to provide electrical hookups for vendors, eliminating the use of noisy generators.

The Northampton Yellow Jackets picked up a win over the Chincoteague Ponies, 32-6, on Friday, Oct. 13, as the team celebrated homecoming on Hamilton Field in Eastville. This would mark the Yellow Jackets' first district win since 2009.

Northampton's points were accumulated by Corey Johnson, who had a four-yard run; Carlton Smith with a two and six-yard run; Tamaze Brisco with a 42-yard pass from Trip Wescoat, and he ended the night with another 37-yard touchdown pass from Wescoat. Leading the Yellow Jackets were Wescoat, who had 132 passing yards; Smith totaled 91 rushing yards and Brisco led with 109 receiving yards.

Chincoteague's lone touchdown was the result of a five-yard pass from Dustin Holloway to Drevon Johnson.

The Yellow Jackets lost last Friday night's away contest to Colonel Richardson, 43-0, to give them a 3-5 record heading into tonight's (Friday) district matchup in Eastville against the Nandua Warriors (4-5).

Chincoteague grabbed a win last Friday night against Richmond Christian, 44-13, giving the Ponies a 4-4 overall season record. They will be back in action Nov.

3, as they host Greenbrier Christian.

The Warriors suffered a shutout at Colonel Richardson Oct. 13, 45-0, but returned home to Onley to host the Arcadia Firebirds last Friday night, in a district battle that kept everyone on the edge of their seat.

After a thrilling back-and-forth effort, Nandua would take the W with a game-winning touchdown run by William Gunter with just 12 seconds left on the clock. With the PAT good, the Warriors rested the final score in their favor, 46-39.

Gunter also scored on a five-yard run in the first quarter; Jaden Davis, Damai Baines and Jaheim Bailey also combined in the Warriors' scoring efforts.

Arcadia's Jakori Dickerson, Lethan Williams, Cam Downing and William Scarborough all earned touchdowns for the Firebirds, with Williams and Dickerson scoring twice, each.

The Firebirds, now 3-6, will host the Yellow Jackets in Oak Hall, Nov. 3.

Broadwater dropped a 39-0 loss in Exmore Oct. 14, against Portsmouth Christian. The Vikings hosted Hampton Roads Academy last Saturday for their homecoming festivities and suffered a 49-22 deficit. The boys will be back on Bynum Field Saturday, Oct. 28, at 2 p.m.

A total of 27 local youth, ages 8-18 years old, enjoyed a free shooting experience at the annual Youth Sportsfest Event this past Saturday, Oct. 21, hosted by NOAAWIVA Sportsmen Inc.

The focus of the event was on gun safety and shooting education, while giving the kids a chance to have fun.

On a beautiful fall day, a number of girls and boys with little experience in shooting competition, shot high scores. Trophies were presented to the top shooters in junior and senior divisions.

All safety and shooting equipment was provided, along with free food and drink. The activities included target shooting with CO2 and .22 rim-fire rifles, breaking clay birds with a 20-gauge shotgun and junior high power rifle competition.

The NOAAWIVA Club hosted the shooting education event as a free community service in conjunction with a Brownells/NRA grant.

Fishing from the Shore

By Bill Hall

Red drum of all sizes continue to make a strong showing in local waters, with catches coming from the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay, the barrier island surf, and along the marshes on both the bay and seaside. The opening of the black seas bass season has produced some impressive catches in both size and numbers. The first large striped bass of the season have just started to arrive but it will be a few weeks before the drop in water temperatures ushers in decent numbers of larger fish.

Chincoteague – Donna Rae, at Captain Bob's Marina, reported that the autumn flounder run only continues to get better with 17- to 22-inch flatties boated in Assateague Channel and the deeper water in front of Tom's Cove Campground. Mariner's Point (Marker #15) was also mentioned as producing keeper flounder, live minnows has been the productive bait of late. Other local catches have included undersized striped bass and puppy drum. Small bluefish are still plentiful in Chincoteague Channel.

Jimmy Vasilou, at Captain Steve's Bait & Tackle, reported that the Assateague Surf was still producing kingfish, red drum of various sizes, small bluefish and even keeper flounder. The flounder were hitting Berkley Gulp and minnows, Chincoteague Bay continues to produce some late season flounder action.

A nice population of striped bass has moved into Chincoteague Bay and around the marsh islands of Queen Sound, averaging 20-21 inches. They are still well shy of the 28-inch minimum size limit for seaside stripers. Wreck fishermen have brought in their limits of black sea bass, tilefish catches were made by bottom dropping in the deep, and offshore trolling was producing catches of dolphin (mahi mahi) and even a late season white marlin release. Kyle Krabill, of Coastal Killers, has been catching puppy drum and releasing lots of undersized stripers in the marshes of Queen Sound.

Lower Shore – Chris Snook, of Chris' Bait & Tackle, reported there are "plenty of puppy drum" on the seaside. The concrete ships off Kiptopeke State Park produced catches of tautog and sheepshead, while catches of flounder were coming from the park's pier. Berkley Gulp was the top bait for flounder at the pier. Bay-side speckled trout action was described as "spotty" with lots of undersized trout among the catches.

Local anglers Robert Lambertson and John Crockett were able to land over a dozen speckles, a few flounder and a bluefish on a recent trip out of Kiptopeke. Speckled trout catches were also reported from the waters around the little bridge, though most of the fish were on the small side. Pods of small bluefish were also hitting artificial baits intended for the trout. The first reported decent-sized striper catches were reported this week near the fourth island of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, with a couple of fish in the 20-30 pound class.

Upper Shore – Captain Matt Abell, of the SeaHawk Sports Center, reported that a mixture of red drum and small black drum were recently found in the Assateague Surf, with loyal customer Rob Price able to cash in on the combination of species. Jerry Murphy limited out on puppy drum in Chincoteague Bay. Mike and Brooke Geesman and party boated 75 black sea bass and 10 flounder on a recent trip to an unidentified offshore wreck. On the bayside, shallow water catches consisted of a few puppy drum and lots of small stripers. Bass Assassins in the Albino Ghost and chartreuse color patterns were the top artificial patterns with the best action coming from near heavy bottom structure such as stumps.

AMSA Surf Fishing Tournament – The Assateague Mobile Sportsman Association sponsored its 13th Annual Ronald Bounds Memorial Surf Fishing Tournament last weekend on the Assateague Island National Seashore. The Fish Hogs, an Eastern Shore of Virginia-based team, came away with the $2,000 top prize. The team was paced by Brian Hill, of Parksley, who won the individual awards for most points and top male fisherman categories. Other members of the team included Jamie Logan, Danny Kidd, Clark Crockett, Ray Willett, and Marty Bull. The team also won the 3rd Session award. The Assawoman Anglers, another local team finished in third place and were awarded $500 for their efforts. The team consisted of John Conquest, John Hickman, Dean Carroll, Karl Haugh, Claude Bain, and Ron Wolff. The Anglers also captured the Second Session Award.

Bill Hall was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Salt Water Master Angler Status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year. Bill is an I.G.F.A. International Committee Representative and a long-time member of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament Committee. He is the Virginia Recreation Fishing representative on the ASMFC Striped Bass Management Panel and is a past recipient of the CCA-VA Virginia Outdoor Writer Conservation Leadership Award.

ESY&CC Club Championships

Tom Watkins won the men's club championship at the Eastern Shore Yacht and Country Club recently, while Margie Byrd won the ladies' tournament. Both tournaments were match play events.

Byrd won the ladies' tournament with a 3&2 win over Barbara Murphy, a champion from 2015. Because the women had a double elimination tournament, Byrd and Murphy met three times in the tournament, including their opening match. Margie, with a 17 handicap, said that match started badly for her. "I was four down after five holes to Barbara and just wanted to make it respectable before the round was over. Somehow I managed to tie it up on the 18th hole. Then we played three extra holes before I was able to win."

In Byrd's second match with Carolyn Davis, she was two down with two to play before winning on the fourth playoff hole.

"I could have easily been out of the tournament after two matches," said Byrd.

Byrd and Murphy were the last two golfers left in the tournament before Murphy beat Byrd 3&2 to set up the championship match.

Byrd, 62, of Folly Creek, joined the club this year after a long hiatus and said she was both humbled and appreciative by winning the club championship. "The women were so welcoming to me and are so much fun to play with. I would recommend to anyone who likes golf to join the club."

Watkins beat 16-time club champion Jeff Shield 3&2 in the men's championship match. A repeat winner, Watkins said with a chuckle, "I would like to think I could win it as many times as Jeff, but I don't think I will live that long."

Watkins said neither he nor Shield played up to their potential.

"I was able to get ahead and hang on. I knew if Jeff got the lead, he would be tough to beat. I made a few putts at key times to make the difference."

Watkins, 59, has a 6 handicap and works for the United States Postal Service. He lives in Pungoteague.

Tom Watkins, left, and Margie Byrd are men's and ladies' club champions at the Eastern Shore Yacht and Country Club.

Delmarva Heritage Days Promises Education and Fun

By Linda Cicaira

The 2nd Annual Delmarva Heritage Days promises to be educational and fun with tales being told by award-winning decoy carvers and barrier island hunt clubs and incidents from market and outlaw gunners being admitted.

The two-day event is set for 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 28, and noon to 4 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 29, at the Discovery Center and Museum at 2 Market St., in Pocomoke, Md.

Youth art activities will be offered and the center's otters will be fed and observed both days. An Oscar-nominated filmmaker's production will be offered Sunday.

"Every exhibitor that I talked to had a great time last year," said renowned carver, Grayson Chesser of Jenkins Bridge, who plans to be there this weekend. Chesser fondly remembered the 2016 event because it was the last public appearance of Delbert "Cigar" Lee Daisey, a native of Chincoteague who left a legacy of decoy carving across North America. Daisey, died at the age of 89, in April 2017.

"To see him get the Heritage Award, it mean a lot to him, but it meant just as much to us," said Chesser. "We were all friends of his. It was amazing to watch him. The longer he was there the brighter he got. It meant the world to us. For most of us it was the last time we got to see him."

Chesser compared the event to the Smithsonian Folk Life Festival. "It was really neat because most of us had known each other for years, but were hearing guys discuss things that you really didn't know about them. It was a little different story for the most of us. But a very similar story about how we started carving. I thought it was really, really good. Everybody who participated felt the same way."

The Pocomoke Indian Nation will give a talk at 10:30 a.m., Saturday; a discussion on Assateague Island Hunt Clubs will be offered at 11:15 a.m.; at noon the otters, who live in a huge aquarium, will be fed; and at 12:30 p.m., heritage awards will be presented.

The Legendary Carvers' Symposium, at 1:15 p.m., will include:

- Cameron McIntyre, of New Church, who works exclusively with hand tools in the manner of the great decoy makers of the 19th and early 20th centuries.
- Cork McGee, of Chincoteague, who makes hand-carved decoys and shorebirds.
- Rich Smoker, of Marion Station, Md., who had his first experience carving decoys at 16.
- D. Bennett Scott, of Berlin, Md., whose interest in carving was born out of his love for nature and hunting, which he began doing with his father when he was 8.

- Don Briddell, of Crisfield, Md., a carver, who began his art career in the second grade selling drawings to classmates, one cent for a black and white and three cents for color.

- Oliver Lawson, of Crisfield, a master carver who's famous swan decoy was among the works in the collection of John Maddox.

- Grayson Conquest Chesser Jr., of Jenkins Bridge, one of the most respected decoy carvers of his generation, having learned carving at the feet of masters like Cigar Daisey and Miles Hancock.

At 2:30 p.m., a discussion on market hunting and the conservation movement will be offered.

Sunday's program starts at noon with the otter feeding.

At 12:30 p.m., a Carvers' Symposium will be offered with Carroll Lee Marshall of Sanford, Marty Linton of Pocomoke, Harvey Dize of Crisfield, Willie Jackson of Pocomoke, Russell Fish of Public Landing, Md., Chincoteague Mayor Arthur Leonard, Herb Watson of Pocomoke, and Doug Fisher, George Stump and Jim White, all of Maryland.

At 1:30 p.m., The Barrier Island Center will show the film, "The Last Hunt Clubs," by Jim Spione. The academy award nominated director provides "an extraordinary journey through the evocative ruins and little-known history of the great hunting clubs of Virginia's barrier islands. Between the Civil War and the Great Depression, hundreds of sportsmen's lodges, built by wealthy industrialists and staffed by Southern locals, dotted the American coastline. In this intimate recounting, regional historians, as well as Shore residents with deep family connections to the clubs, bring their heyday to vivid life. But the shifting sands of these dynamic islands are no place to build a permanent structure, and Spione's film details how powerful storms and economic stress brought the era of the clubs to a close."

The day will be finished with the Ward Museum Carving Club's demonstration and discussion at 2:30 p.m. and Willie Jackson's talk on taxidermy at 3:15 p.m.

Concerts in Memory of Beloved Musicians

Submitted Article

This weekend the Orchestra of the Eastern Shore will dedicate performances to two musicians whose lives touched many on the Shore. The concert on Friday, Oct. 27, 7:30 p.m., at Cokesbury Church, Onancock, is dedicated to Rev. Kirk Mariner, who died after a long illness in June 2017. The second performance on Sunday, Oct. 29, 4 p.m., at Hungars Episcopal Church, Bridgetown, is dedicated to Stefan Dulcie, who died unexpectedly in March 2017.

Under Paul Kim's direction, Gabriel Faure's Requiem in D Minor, Felix Mendelssohn's "It is Enough" from "Elijah," and Franz Schubert's "Salve Regina" will be performed.

According to Kim, who leads the orchestra, "The pieces were chosen for their beauty, power to lift the spirit, and touch the eternal. The orchestra is honored to perform in memory of musicians who spent so much of their lives lifting others up through their music and service to the community. It is our hope we will convey gratitude for their lives."

Mariner, beloved by many, served as a Methodist minister for 37 years in churches throughout Virginia. He was an historian and author of numerous articles and books about Eastern Shore history. Upon his retirement from full time ministry, Mariner continued a "music ministry" by composing (often humorous) songs and performing at many charitable events. His legacy of giving to the community continues through a grand piano which he bequeathed to Cokesbury Church.

Dulcie was known for his gentleness and giving his whole heart to the music he performed according to those who knew him. A graduate of the Juilliard School, he shared his love of music and skill through years of teaching piano and strings at the ESO. He accompanied many performers and groups such as the Madrigals and Franktown Players. The congregations of Hungars Episcopal Church and Christ Church, where Dulcie served as the organist, were privileged to hear Stefan play for more than 15 years.

The Orchestra of the Eastern Shore has been bringing the beauty of classical music to the Shore since it was founded in 1999. All concerts are free. Donations to the orchestra are welcomed.

to obtain; laws should require those purchasing firearms to be subject to more thorough background checks, and they should be mentally sound. Had these safeguards been in place, the Las Vegas shooting earlier this month may have been prevented, he said.

Randall would have voted to accept Affordable Care Act funds to expand Medicaid, saying 30,000 health care jobs could have been created. Bloxom voted “no” on the ACA funds because Medicaid was intended to provide a “limited safety net.” Medicaid was 5 percent of the state budget in 1985, and 23 percent today, which is “unsustainable at this rate,” he stated. Bloxom does not want to draw any more funding away from education.

On guaranteeing medical care, Bloxom suggested the guarantee is already in place. “Hospitals cannot deny care,” he said. He commended Eastern Shore Rural Health System, with its sliding fee program, for making health care more affordable than most insurance companies do. Randall said ESRHS CEO Nancy Stern is in favor of expanded Medicaid, and the ACA money is actually state funding, not federal funding.

Randall supports legalizing medical marijuana, and asserted that it could help with the opioid crisis. He also believes marijuana should be decriminalized, and mentioned that hemp has many practical uses.

Bloxom does not support legalizing medical marijuana. He clarified that hemp does not contain THC and said legalization is not necessary, since there are already legal prescription drugs available with the same chemical effect as marijuana. He would like to see more research on marijuana before deciding whether it should be decriminalized.

Bloxom said there was no need to require a water meter for every single chicken house sharing the same well, creating an unnecessary expense; one meter could accurately determine the amount of water used by each house within a 10 percent margin of error. Randall said there was no way to tell exactly how much water each chicken house uses without its own meter.

Randall would consider merging Accomack and Northampton counties, saying, “we need to come together in some form” and create “economies of scale,” and save money. Bloxom said a merger would be “chaos from the start,” as each county has a distinct character and different priorities. He mused about what would happen at an Accomack-Northampton zoning ordinance meeting.

On increasing school funding, Bloxom said he already helped get teacher raises on the books. In his opinion, education, transportation, and safety are the core functions of government. Randall said he would work to change the composite index.

Randall would reduce the “school to prison pipeline” with universal pre-K, placing children in a positive environment and instilling them with good study habits early on. Bloxom stated that universal pre-K would create an “unfunded mandate.” He would prefer to support career and technical programs that teach kids skills.

Bloxom's position on Roe vs. Wade is pro-life, with the acknowledgment that the Supreme Court decision likely won't be overturned. Randall is pro-choice and believes in “women making their own health care decisions.”

Randall would support legislation to ensure that lottery proceeds fund education; Bloxom said the amount has already been increased and efforts are being made to get that figure back to 40 percent.

Bloxom is in favor of cooperation between Northampton High School and Eastern Shore Community College for vocational-technical education as long as the two schools don't duplicate their efforts. He recommended “full immersion” vocational training, with students spending the entire instructional day in a vo-tech high school. These students are exempt from the SOLs. Randall also approved of the partnership between schools and suggested creating a dual enrollment program for vocational training.

Randall favored restoring voting rights to convicted felons after they have served their time. Bloxom prefers the process which is already in place to restore voting rights to convicted felons, which requires them to make full restitution.

School board and board of supervisors candidates were also included in the forum. Their responses will be summarized in an article next week.

Metompkin Fourth Graders Send Essentials and Encouragement to Puerto Rico

Metompkin fourth graders wanted to help hurricane victims, so they planned and carried out a fundraiser for the school called "Pumpkins for Puerto Rico." Any time that a student or faculty member donated an item or dollar they would receive a paper pumpkin in return to decorate with their name and put it up in one of our hallways.

The school was able to donate more than 149 cases of water and hundreds of cans of food with a total value of more than $650.

NASA had a relief effort of its own planned for Puerto Rico, and offered to deliver the students' donations, along with letters of encouragement, such as the one shown to the right.

Health Department Says It Has Traced Source of Salmonella Outbreak

By Linda Cicoira

A sample of the Crab Shack restaurant's clam chowder offered at the 18th Annual Chili Cook Off and Car Show on Chincoteague in September was found to have Salmonella javiana.

That announcement was made Tuesday by the Accomack County Health Department and state's Foodborne Disease Epidemiology Team. The sample "was obtained from an attendee" and is "consistent with the exposure results of the online attendee survey," according to Larry Hill, a spokesperson for the state health system. About 180 people reported getting sick. Around 500 survey responses were received from both ill and well attendees in 18 days.

The Crab Shack, a restaurant on Maddox Boulevard on Chincoteague, has had good health inspections, Dr. David Matson of the Eastern Shore Health Department said Tuesday. He planned to meet with the managers at press time Thursday. The business is listed as a "seasonal full service restaurant."

The last two health inspections at the business were done in May and August of 2017, and showed non-critical violations. Before that, in October 2016, no problems were found at the restaurant, two non-critical problems were found in July 2016, and no issues were found in April 2016 or September and April of 2015. According to the health department, non-critical violations are those "not directly related to the cause of food-borne illness, but if uncorrected, could impede the operation of the restaurant. The likelihood of food-borne illness in these cases is very low."

On Aug. 11, 2017, an inspector observed "nonfood contact surfaces of the ware-wash and the stove/oven" with "accumulations of grime and debris." The business owners were told to "clean the surface at a frequency necessary to preclude accumulation of soil residues that become encrusted or attract insects and rodents."

An inspector also observed the kitchen and walk-in cooler floors were "in need of cleaning." The owners were told, "All floors, walls, and ceilings must be cleaned as often as necessary ... cleaning of the physical facilities is an important measure in ensuring the protection and sanitary preparation of food. A regular cleaning schedule should be established and followed to maintain the facility in a clean and sanitary manner."

On May 17, 2017, a repeat observation regarding "no disposable towels ... at the hand washing lavatory in the kitchen" was made and corrected during the inspection. The health department worker noted, "A clean towel or heated air hand-drying device must be provided at all hand washing lavatories to encourage proper hand washing and avoid employees ... drying their hands on ... clothing or other unclean materials." The inspector also noted "Excellent datemarking" and "Clean and good temps."

Details for an inspection that was done on Oct. 6, 2017, were not available.

When reached by phone, owner Renee Waldner said, "I can't make a comment at this time."

An investigation into the salmonella outbreak following the event on Sept. 30, is continuing, the announcement stated. The Division of Consolidated Laboratory Services in Richmond first identified Salmonella javiana in human specimens that were submitted by healthcare providers and officials from event attendees who reported gastro-intestinal illness.

"Accomack health officials are addressing issues that may have contributed to the outbreak by engaging event sponsors and vendors," Hill said. The laboratory analysis continues, as does analysis of the survey results. A final epidemiological field report will be drafted locally within 30 days.

NOV. 3 PROGRAM TO HIGHLIGHT FRANCES BIBBINS LATIMER COLLECTION

Well before grant funding was awarded by the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities in June, a growing team of volunteers had been hard at work organizing and cataloging the collection of the late historian, Frances Bibbins Latimer. With the support of the Eastern Shore Public Library, The Center for Community and Family Development and many community members, the entire collection is being archived. Over time it will be available both online and at the new Eastern Shore Regional Library in Parksley.

The first in a series of educational programs highlighting aspects of the Frances Latimer collection will be offered Nov. 3 at the Barrier Island Museum from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Brenda Holden will share information related to the importance of preserving family and community history and will provide resources to help participants get started on their own collections. Karen Hatch will provide an overview of the collection and will bring documents and artifacts for participants to view, some of which predate the American Civil War. All reflect the Shore's rich multi-ethnic heritage with an emphasis on the Health officials will continue to assemble reports from Virginia and nine other states where event attendees live. The online survey has been closed.

About half of the 180 who reported illness, sought medical care, with 20 percent or 36 receiving emergency room care and 10 percent or 18 being hospitalized for one or more night. No deaths were reported.

The health officials acknowledged the event sponsor, the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company, and its event coordinator, and all the food vendors who participated in the event, "for their cooperation and assistance in the investigation." They also thanked all the local and regional healthcare partners and laboratories from others states who assisted.

African American community.

Volunteers are working to identify the people in hundreds of photographs, are preparing files for digitalization and will help sort out the extensive genealogical information specific to Eastern Shore families. The grant enabled the hiring of Nicholas Granville, an assistant archivist who began working on the Latimer collection in August. Granville, a graduate of Virginia Tech, also works with the Mariner's Museum in Newport News, and the public library in Williamsburg. He eagerly joined the Eastern Shore team in spite of his two hour drive to Onley where the Latimer collection is currently housed. "The history of the Eastern Shore and the stories and records of the African American residents Mrs. Latimer researched and acquired are really a treasure. I am very excited to be a part of this important project," he shared.

Currently, examples from the collection are displayed in the foyer of the Accomack branch of the Eastern Shore Library. In the Eastern Shore Room are photographs exhibited those working on the project hope the community can identify. AT HALFWAY MARK FOR EASTVILLE HEALTH CENTER, IT'S A GOOD TIME TO SAY "THANKS"

By Dr. David Riopel and
Dr. Cathy Riopel, Pediatricians

The Campaign for the Eastville Community Health Center has crossed the halfway point, with $1 million raised. Some may say it is premature to celebrate, so we will be patient and wait. But it has been our experience that there is never a bad time to be grateful and offer thanks. And this milestone seems like a good time for that.

From the very first freezing-cold yard sale at the Atlantic Community Health Center, to the Bridge Tunnel car wash, bake sale and every raffle, oyster roast and paint party in between, the staff of Eastern Shore Rural Health spurred the campaign with energy and creativity. Then George McMath stepped in to lead our campaign, helping us to reach an extensive network of generosity. What a pleasure it has been to meet and work with the committee members and the leaders in our community who continue to support our goal. Finally, we thank our patients, like the Zodun children, who sold lemonade for our center. And all of those who continue to purchase paper bricks that line the walls of our existing centers.

The dream of a new center in Northampton County is getting closer to becoming a reality. Once that dream is realized, our dream of better health care for the Eastern Shore community will be, too. We look forward to improved patient flow, partnerships with children's specialists from CHKD, increased opportunity for preventive care, pharmacy partnership, dental care and mental health services. The new center will offer digital x-ray services in Northampton County.

The future of community health is in wellness. Simply treating sickness is costly and debilitating. This future is going to depend on collaboration: doctors and patients working together to combat chronic illness, and community partners acting in unison to maximize valuable resources. The new Eastville center, a center built by the community for the community, will help us on this journey to wellness that we all need to take together.

Thank you all for your ongoing support.
Drs. Riopel are pediatricians at Eastern Shore Rural Health, Franktown Community Health Center, and honorary chairs of the Eastville Health Center capital campaign.

Vote 'YES' for Elected School Board

Dear Editor:

I am no longer a resident of Accomack County. Selling our Parksley home was one of the most difficult decisions we could make, especially after spending so much time working to make Accomack County Public Schools a place where all children can succeed. The teachers, staff and administrators my children were lucky enough to know are dearly missed. They alone keep the district's head above water.

Residents of Accomack County, please vote YES in favor of an elected school board on Election Day. I believe the current board wants to see the children succeed and is well intended. But it is time for change. The definition of insanity: Doing the same thing over and over again and expecting a different result.

How many times have we seen hours cut for key school staff (e.g.: individual aids for students with special needs) only to see a position added to the central office? How many years was Metompkin's septic system failing while other schools received sports related items? How many years was implementing upgraded security systems discussed, only to have a principal violently attacked by a parent that never should have been on school grounds?

The "selection" process of board members is broken. When a person appears at the public selection hearing, runs unopposed, has several people endorse her, and has a room full of educators supporting her, only to have the selection commission vote unanimously against her reappointment, something is seriously wrong. A second example is the embarrassing spectacle at this year's hearing. Multiple board members spoke against someone wanting to serve on the board — an open critic of the current board. The hearing was full of character assassination and condescension. The selection commission also voted unanimously against her and reappointed the board member whose seat she had challenged.

The school board is not Delta House. It's not a fraternity to be comprised of like-minded people. Different perspectives are necessary to accurately represent Accomack County. This individual brought the experience of raising a child with special needs to the table. With the epidemic of autism and other developmental issues, that demographic needs representation.

Friends, if you want change, vote YES!

Accomack Should Adopt North Carolina Poultry House Setbacks

Dear Editor:

In 2015 the Accomack County Planning Department announced that there may be as many as 100 new individual industrial poultry houses permitted to accommodate expansion for our local poultry processing plants. Two years later, we are experiencing double that amount of expansion or even more. County records I've reviewed show at least 250 new poultry houses in construction or application process. Increased property line setbacks are the County's only option for regulating the number of industrial poultry houses located here. At risk is air quality, surface water quality, and most importantly our supply of fresh drinking water. It is time to amend the Industrial Poultry Ordinance in Accomack County, providing for increased setbacks.

In Accomack County we need to adopt the industrial poultry house setbacks as set forth in North Carolina. Statewide, the new setbacks are 1,000 feet from occupied dwellings, and 1,500 feet from schools and churches. Even the poultry industry officials in that state have agreed to this. Accomack's setbacks are 500 feet from adjacent residences, and that would allow poultry operations very close to the property line if a residence was located 400 feet into its own adjoining lot.

Each 12-house large-size poultry operation will consume around 7 million gallons of groundwater per year. I am concerned that the poultry industry will deplete our fresh water resource, and cause salt-water intrusion into the deep aquifer. Has the planning commission really done the math on groundwater withdrawal? The aquifer knows no county boundary; will Northampton's groundwater also be depleted due to Accomack's excessive consumption?

I am hereby asking the Accomack County leadership to revisit industrial poultry density by increasing industrial poultry house setbacks to 1,000 feet from occupied residences, and 1,500 feet from schools and churches. It is time to address the critical groundwater situation here in Accomack County, and to follow the precedent of our neighboring state of North Carolina. Yes, we need industry, but we also need a balance of interests, so that aquaculture, tourism, and conventional farming can also continue to flourish here.

Remembering our Friend and Co-Worker, Candy Farlow

Posted at Sea Level

By Linda Cicaira

Candy Farlow was a founder of the Eastern Shore Post. She served as the paper's publisher, reporter, writer, columnist, photographer, classifieds manager and anything-else-that-needed-to-be-done-person, for around a decade. Her ability to work for and with the team helped make the paper what it is and for that I am most thankful.

Candy was one of the hardest workers I've ever known. She was a generous, generous woman who could tell the greatest story, usually about the family she so loved. Nothing was better for her than to be surrounded by her children and grandchildren. That crowd could toss a ball over her head and she would keep typing while reaching out to catch it.

She had a strong Christian faith and knew without a doubt that one day she would get into heaven. Last Sunday, that sad day came for her family and friends.

Candy tried her hand at everything. She was the first electric company line woman on the Eastern Shore. Her male contemporaries were not happy when she got hired and made her life miserable on the job. But Candy was tough. She always persevered.

She had lots of other jobs over her lifetime too. She told me she stuffed sausage casings at Young's Meat Barn for a while. There wasn't a challenge that Candy wasn't up for. She had a great radio voice and worked at the old radio station WKRE in Jamesville and later at WESR in Tasley.

Those who didn't personally know Candy, easily allowed her into their homes. She definitely was a local star with name recognition. She could improvise in a second in any given situation, and could carry on a vigorous conversation with anyone.

Candy also worked at Jaxon's in Parksley, her hometown. She served on the Accomack School Board, was the principal of Shore Christian Academy, reported for another newspaper before the Post was founded, labored at the local hospital in marketing and tried and succeeded at a lot of other things. Oh, yeah she was an EMT driver for Exmore Fire Department for a while too.

I first met Candy when she was reporting news for WESR and I was working for a Norfolk newspaper. She was a great companion to have at a boring meeting. We used to name all the players after cartoon characters to pass the time. I won't mention who George Jetson and Mr. Magoo were. But it gave us a good laugh.

She could strike up a song and would start singing it if you said a phrase that funniest woman I ever have known. She could tell a story or recount an escapade with more wit and humanity than anyone.

And yet, while she never failed to make me laugh, she also was the friend I turned to when I needed advice — or empathy — or a recharge. She held my secrets.

Today, I learned she had died this morning. But she was my comforter; where do I turn?

Our friendship goes back decades, but for those of you reading this, perhaps the most pertinent aspect of that relationship is that she was the partner who made it possible to start the Eastern Shore Post.

Allow me to take you back to that Monday morning in 1999 when several of struck her right. Candy could write catchy headlines. And she had a pistol in her desk drawer and was ready to protect us if anyone threatening came in.

I will miss her columns, "From the OutPOST," and her enthusiasm and will never forget walking down Assateague Beach with her and Cheryl Nowak (now Sterling) to interview nudists whose sunbathing habits became an issue in the 1980s. And for those of you who may be wondering about that, they tried to get us to join them but we kept our clothes on and trudged back to civilization.

On the Post's 10th anniversary, Candy wrote a column that I've saved and will read over and over in the years to come.

my colleagues at the Eastern Shore News had agreed to join me in giving our notice, with the ultimate intent of starting a new newspaper. Turns out everyone but me decided at the last minute to forgo the risk and stay with the News.

But I was determined.

And so I called Candy, who had covered news for WESR while I did the same for the News, and then worked in public relations at the local hospital while I recruited doctors. Always something of a maverick, Candy presented for me a potential kindred rebel. And by the end of lunch that very day, she had agreed to join me in this ludicrous dream that became the Eastern Shore Post. Among the myriad organizational

Soon after she sold her shares of the Post, she did exactly what she wanted. It was called "Nanny's Summer Camp," which included "lessons, crafts, field trips, and lots of hugs" for her grandkids and a few others.

"In order to facilitate those field trips, I recently purchased my dream vehicle," she wrote. "Okay, so it's more than 20 years old, but the point is this Chevy conversion van has plenty of room for kids, a built-in cooler for juice boxes and a little cubby hole where I've stashed the same enameled potty my own mother toted around for years."

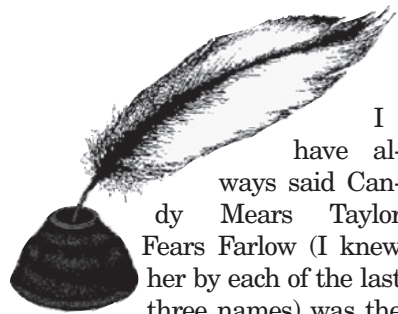

That was Candy, she tried to be prepared for everything! I know the kids had a blast.

Enjoy Heaven, Candy! I hope to see you again up there someday.

tasks that confronted us at the outset was the determination of our own titles. While it was understood that I would be editor since Candy never could spell correctly (more on that later) and I knew all the rules, her official title was a bit more dubious. In the end, we settled on "publisher" because neither of us ever knew what that entailed. Now UNofficially, I was princess and she was queen.

Those first few editions of the Post have become the thing of legends. We virtually lived at the office (pre-laptops) while our families brought us meals, and 10 p.m. meant bras could be removed.

In those early days, she and I would postpone our paychecks if needed to ensure the rest of the payroll. We each cov-

In my opening sales pitch to recruit Candy, I had told her that with our experience, publishing the Eastern Shore spell-right gene. In fact, she proudly displayed a T-shirt behind her desk that proclaimed “Untied We Fly” and often quoted Mark Twain: “Anyone who can only think of one way to spell a word obviously lacks imagination.” The first news story of hers

Post would be a “piece of cake,” something she enjoyed reminding me many times at about 1 a.m. For several subsequent Christmases, I presented Candy with a piece of cake in various incarnations, from a tree ornament to a pendant.

Candy never denied that she totally lacked the that I ever read was one she had already used on radio and kindly allowed me to see for the newspaper. I assumed that the unbelievably elementary spelling was a means of ensuring correct pronunciation for radio. But alas, it was Candy’s unique spelling. Yet ironically, that was, in part, what made her writing so readable. She wrote exactly the way she spoke, unaffected and humanizing.

I believe Candy acquired her love of words from her mother, who often was the arbiter of our literary “discussions.” Candy and I particularly enjoyed eliminating the redundant words in phrases such as “12 noon,” “continue on,” and “past experience.” But by far, the redundant phrase which caused Candy the greatest irritation was “hot water heater.” “Why would anyone want to heat hot water?” she would lament.

Candy stayed with the Post several years, but then, as was often the case with her, be it with her career or marriage, she grew restless and needed a new challenge. And our loss became Shore Christian Academy’s gain, for Candy became its principal.

But she did return to the Post years later to oversee one more edition. My husband had died suddenly and I told the staff we would just have to forget about that week’s issue. There was no way I could do it, despite the fact that our status as a newspaper of record that could take legal ads required that we never miss an issue. Well, unknown to me, Candy stepped in and provided me with the most meaningful compassion imaginable.

As Candy’s health began to fail over the past several years, her faith became only stronger. And it is that thought that has comforted me today as I attempt to absorb the shocking news of her passing from this world to the next. I believe it is something to which she truly looked forward. I can only hope it has been everything she dreamed.

Cheryl Nowak Sterling is the former owner and editor of the Eastern Shore Post.

ANEC Internet Makes Sense

Dear Editor:

We all get the monthly magazine Cooperative in the mail from Accomack and Northampton Electric Cooperative (ANEC). In the October 2017 edition, on page 32, you will find this:

“Mike Keyser, CEO of BARC Electric Co-op in Millboro, says Raphine “is like a microcosm of our entire service territory.” BARC, which serves Bath, Alleghany, Rockbridge, Augusta and Highland counties, is making a Phase I $20-million investment to provide broadband fiber-optic internet to homes and businesses, plus phone and cable TV service, beginning in Raphine and Rockbridge County.

“Our electric facilities need it [broadband], so why not do it for customers at the same time? If we don’t do this, who will?” Keyser notes.

Keyser says customer density per mile of line translates to high upfront costs, noting that “for-profit” companies see it as “not worth the investment.”

“It parallels the 1930s rise of [member-owned] co-ops, when for-profit utilities cherry-picked densely populated areas and rural areas [were left out],” he says. “The feeling of bringing [broadband] to homes will be as close as I can get to what it felt like in the ’30s to bring electricity to homes for the first time.”

In a place historically linked with innovation, locals are excited about the coming broadband service. As Mike Sandridge says, “It will give kids the same technology urban areas have ... hopefully it will open up jobs [here] so they can come back home after college and get good-paying jobs in their own communities.”

Why there and not here? Is ANEC one of those “for-profit” companies Keyser mentions? Does ANEC’s system not need broadband? Or is ANEC’s board and management just too complacent and happy?

And why is our much-vaunted Eastern Shore of Virginia Broadband Authority (www.ESVBA.com) such a disappointment? Its board and management are also acting like a for-profit utility, happy to cherry-pick densely populated areas, as Keyser observes.

ANEC has right-of-way to every electric meter in ESVA. ESVBA has bandwidth to spare. Broadband is this century’s indispensable utility. Come on, what’s it going to take? Terry Malarkey, Wise’s Point, Accomack County

Parksley Monument Obscures Truth

Dear Editor:

Sometimes commentary clarifies truth. Sometimes it obscures it. The commentaries engraved on the Confederate monument in Parksley obscure truth by revising history.

Truth is well served by accurate accounts of what happened and what words were said. When the Virginia legislature debated seceding from the United States in 1861, these words were said:

“The principle of slavery is a leveling principle; it is friendly to equality. Break down slavery and you would with the same blow break down the great democratic principle of equality among men.” (Accomack’s Henry Wise, congressman and future governor)

“There is not a respectable system of civilization known to history whose foundations were not laid in the institution of domestic slavery.” (Senator Robert Hunter)

“What was the reason that induced Georgia to take the step of secession? . . . that a separation from the North was the only thing that could prevent the abolition of her slavery. . . . If things are allowed to go on... it is certain that slavery is to be abolished. . . . the black race will be in a large majority, and then we will have black governors, black legislatures, black juries, black everything. . . . our men will be all exterminated or expelled to wander as vagabonds over a hostile Earth, and as for our women, their fate will be too horrible to contemplate even in fancy.” (General Henry Benning)

Contrast their words with the commentary on the Parksley monument:

“They fought for conscience sake and died for right.”

“They died for the principles upon which all true republics are founded.”

Is there a “right” to own another human? Are “all true republics” founded on that principle?

The South’s economy in 1861 was utterly dependent on slavery. Its four million slaves were worth $4 billion (in today’s dollars, $13 trillion), more than the value of everything else – land, homes, equipment – in the South. That economic reality, not states’ rights, not a “way of life,” drove us into the Civil War.

Commentary claiming otherwise obscures the truth.
