Cold Case Reopened

Story and Photos by Linda Cicaira

Long after the crops were harvested and hundreds of migrant farm laborers moved to greener pastures, the remains of a young man, whom police believe was probably a member of that workforce, were found in the woods off Big Farm Road between Painter and Pungoteague.

For more than six years, this Hispanic/Latino male — estimated to be between 17 and 23 years old — has not been identified. It was about noon on Dec. 31, 2004, when a hunt club member visiting the area discovered the skeleton.

"Any cases we thought may have been related, have come up with dead ends," Lt. Gerald Goga, an investigator with the Accomack County Sheriff's Office (ACSO), which is handling the inquiry, said last week. "Whether there was foul play is still under investigation. The primary goal is to ID the remains."

The lieutenant said the skeleton was found about 200 yards from the building that housed laborers. Police suspect that the man was a farm worker because he was Hispanic as are many laborers who tend the vast acres of tomatoes raised on the Eastern Shore.

Virginia Medical Examiner Dr. Leah Bush told reporters at a press conference last week that the victim's loved ones are likely wondering about his whereabouts and could be blaming themselves for his lack of communication. "They need closure," she said. And a combination of science and art could help bring it to them and the families of two others found in the Tidewater area in the last 19 years.

"The families ... agonize for years," Bush said. Once the remains are identified, "they no longer blame themselves for something they had no part in ... we allow them to move on with their lives. They can't move forward until they found out what happened."

Three clay sculptured heads with molded "facial approximations" and mostly guesswork ears and hair were displayed on three pedestals cloaked with black material in the corner of a health department library in Norfolk where the press conference was held last Friday.

The models are the first to be made available for the 220 unnamed skeletons in Bush's closet and were made of an off-white clay and marked with the cities and/or county where they were found. The neutral color was used to emphasize the facial structure. In the past, using the wrong skin tone or hair color thwarted identification.

In previous eras, wigs were used to humanize the models and often would cause people to focus on untrue aspects, Bush said. In most cases, it is impossible to know what the ears would look like since that cavity does not reflect shape, unlike eye sockets, which are generally deep when

Cheriton Man Found Not Guilty of Murder in Death of Harold Moses

By Ron West

A Northampton County Jury deliberated well into the night Wednesday and concluded that Trawn Levan Stratton was innocent on all counts stemming from the death of Harold Moses on the evening of August 28, 2010.

Stratton faced charges of first-degree murder, murder during the commission of a burglary, and use of a firearm.

Two days of testimony began Monday when Accomack Commonwealth's Attorney Bruce Jones promised the jury in his opening statement that evidence would show that Stratton planned to confront Moses about a mutual girlfriend, Quadrina Ellis.

In his opening statement, defense attorney Eric Korslund contended that it was Moses who had set a trap for Stratton and had attacked him with a field-hockey stick once he reached Ellis' home that evening. In the ensuing struggle, according to Korslund, Stratton was forced to defend himself with the gun he carried. Stratton was treated at Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital for a head wound, which was closed with several stitches.

Northampton County Sheriff's Investigator Sgt. Michelle Hallett testified that the room in which Moses was found dead showed signs of a struggle, with furniture in disarray and blood splattered in several locations. She said evidence indicated that the front door had been kicked and two .40-caliber shell casings and a bloody field-hockey stick were found near the body.

Dr. Elizabeth Kinniston, an assistant medical examiner from Norfolk, testified that the victim died as the result of two gunshot wounds, one to the abdomen and one to the groin area. She noted that the wounds fractured the pelvis and caused extensive bleeding from the aorta and spleen. Dr. Kinniston said she recovered two .40-caliber bullets from Moses' body and they appeared to have been shot from very close range.

Denise Meyers with the Virginia Department of Forensic Science testified that tests of the DNA from bloodstains found at the scene determined that the blood was Stratton's, not Moses'.

Forensic scientist Robert Hart testified that the residue found on Moses' gloves showed that the gunshots had been fired from one inch or less.

Day two of the trial began with Northampton County Deputy Sheriff Roger Pike testifying that when he arrived following the shooting, he found Moses dead on the floor. Pike said Stratton was not there.

Jones played the recording of the 911 call made by Ellis following the shooting at her home. Ellis informed the dispatcher that a man had been shot at her home and the shooter had left.

Testifying about the night of the shooting, Ellis said she had been at a party and had seen Stratton briefly. She testified that she and Stratton had been in a relationship for approximately 13 years, but she had ended it in February of 2010 and later began to see Moses. Ellis said that on the evening of the shooting, she left the party about 8:30, picked up Moses, who lived near Cheriton, then drove him to her home, where she was with him for approximately two hours.

Under cross-examination, Ellis stated that when she picked up Moses, he was wearing gloves and carrying a field-hockey stick, which he normally did when he walked along the railroad tracks. Ellis testified that when she prepared to return to the party to pick up her children and to take Moses back to Cheriton, she left her home from the front door and locked it behind her. Moses was still inside and was planning to go out the back door. Ellis said she did this whenever Moses, who was married, was at her home so neighbors would not know he was there. Ellis said that as she went to her car, she saw Stratton come around the side of her home, carrying a gun and then she heard a loud crash which she assumed was the front door being broken in. She

Onancock Clerk Charged with Embezzlement

By Linda Cicoira

The Town of Onancock has a cash flow problem. But it's not the typical financial woes of government. In this case, the greenbacks allegedly flowed into a worker's pocket.

Town officials debated Monday night whether Onancock Town Office should stop handling cash and accept only checks, money orders and debit/credit cards to help alleviate the "temptation." They also bickered over strengthening policies to alert town officials about the goings on and to allow members of Town Council to attend closed sessions held by the Personnel Committee.

The town's clerk/cashier, Patricia Colleen Reiber, 47, of Waterfield Street in Pungoteague, was charged April 19 with embezzling Onancock funds "multiple" times between March 18 and April 14, 2011. The charge is a Class 4 felony. She is free on $7,500 unsecured bail, may not leave Virginia or "be on any property owned by, leased or rented by the Town of Onancock," according to a warrant. She did not attend Monday's meeting. A June preliminary hearing is scheduled in Accomack General District Court.

The charges resulted from a sting operation conducted by State Police Special Agent Albert R. Ashby. On March 17, 2011, he installed a hidden camera and VCR in the Town Office. The recordings allegedly show the accused removing money from the cash register and the petty cash drawer/envelope and then concealing the funds and "other documents on or about her person. On at least one occasion, in excess of $200 paid to the town for personal-property and real-estate taxes were embezzled by the accused," the warrant states.

Town Manager Sandy Manter said the town hired Reiber on March 30, 2007. Court records show she is a native of Colorado who has lived on the Shore for about four years.

"I do not believe that documentation has gone missing regarding payment of bills or taxes," Manter wrote in an e-mail on Tuesday. "However, the town will be mailing past due notices for unpaid real-estate and personal-property taxes soon and if residents receive a past due notice for taxes which have been paid they should contact the town office and bring in proof of payment so the records can be updated."

This is the second time an embezzlement charge has been made against a town worker. In 2003, an employee was convicted of the 2001 crime and paid $8,125.97 in restitution. In the current case, town officials said they can't disclose details about the case because it is still under investigation.

Manter is moving away from the area and has resigned, effective June 1. Her administrative assistant also is leaving.

At the meeting Monday, Councilman Travis Bradley complained that he wasn't told about the alleged embezzlement. He said he had to hear about it from a friend who saw it on TV. "I had not at that point heard anything about it and still have not had any official communication or notification regarding this issue," Bradley said. "It is my understanding that members of the Personnel Committee knew about this days in advance. While I certainly understand the sensitivities of the issue, I am shocked that as a member of Council, I did not receive ... communication of any kind before this story was picked up by the news media, and still have not."

"Additionally, last Monday I was informed minutes before the public that the town manager was resigning and I understand that members of the Personnel Committee knew of this for much longer," Bradley said. "I find the withholding of information on what I consider to be a crucial issue to be troublesome."

Councilman George Miles was equally concerned about the lack of communication. He said he learned about the embezzlement charge while attending church.

In the end, a 4-2 vote directed Council and the mayor to review rules on alerting members about such matters. Members Michelle Marsh and Fletcher Fosque joined Bradley and Miles in that quest. Councilmen Richard Pearsall and Chris LaMontagne were opposed. LaMontagne is the Personnel Committee's chairman.

Bradley also wanted Council to be allowed to attend closed sessions of the Personnel Committee where hiring discussions are conducted. "The other members of Council are given no information of this process but are asked to vote on the choice of the Personnel Committee" after reviewing someone's resume "for a few minutes prior to the vote," Bradley said, reading from a prepared statement.

That motion passed, 3-2, with Pearsall and LaMontagne opposed and Fosque abstaining, saying the vote was being rushed.

As committee chairman, LaMontagne was offended. He wanted the responsibilities of council vs. committee to be made clear. "If you want the job, Travis, just tell me; you can have it."

In unison, the gallery of town citizens booed the comment. At the end of the meeting, both Manter and LaMontagne apologized for not alerting the others after Reiber was charged. "Sorry if that causes any embarrassment to you," said Manter. "It was just an oversight on my part."

LaMontagne explained that he also found out about the charges when the TV news reported it. "I did not know (at that time) that an arrest was made." He admitted to being privy to the investigation, but had to remain mum about it until the probe was completed.

"I think that the apologies offered by Councilman LaMontagne and the town manager were reluctant and too little too late," Bradley said Tuesday. "However, I think the motion I made regarding council notification of pertinent personnel issues and the motion I made to allow all council members to attend open and closed sessions of Personnel Committee meetings, will prevent such circumstances from arising again."

The town is hoping to receive public comment about the best way to receive cash payments. While some want to stop taking cash in June, others see it as a problem for residents who don't have checking accounts.

Resident Liz Omph suggested the town keep the cameras in place. "The motivation to steal would be less," she said.

Shirley Zamora was mayor in 2001. She said it was suggested then that money be put in a locked drawer after every transaction. Zamora was opposed to eliminating cash payments. "You're not understanding the culture," she said. "You cannot be that cavalier. You can't penalize" the public "because you don't have your act together."

That speech caused LaMontagne to withdraw his motion until the next meeting.

Council also set a public hearing for the town's budget, which includes a 2 percent hike in the real-estate tax rate, and granted a special-use permit to Realtor Nancy James, who wants to renovate the former Social Services building. Her plans include four upscale upstairs apartments, with business space below.

The next council session will be at 6:30 p.m. May 9 in Town Hall.

Plea Deal Offered to Court in Gun-Running Case

The Eastern Shore of Virginia has long been known for its wild ponies, acres of farmland and great fishing spots. But among the gangsters of New Jersey's capital city, the area is recognized now for another sought-after commodity — firearms.

Trayle Beasley, 30, of Trenton grew up on the Shore. His Facebook profile says he once attended Northampton High School. On Monday in Mercer County (N.J.) Superior Court, Beasley pleaded guilty to gun running and possession of weapons.

According to reports, Beasley solicited others from the Cape Charles, Townsend and Eastville areas to provide him with the weapons. One accused accomplice would either purchase or gather weapons for Beasley or would coordinate meetings. Beasley, also known as Lawrence Upshur, Dread and TT, was accused of buying the guns with money, marijuana or other narcotics.

One of the weapons has been linked to the 2009 murder of a 13-year-old girl. The shooting was considered retaliation by a gang on behalf of a member who was disrespected by another gang, according to Web site www.trentonian.com

Beasley's plea was part of a deal with prosecutors that could land him up to 14 years in prison. Sentencing is set for May 31. He remains in the Mercer County Correction Center on $250,000 cash bail.

Charges against Beasley involved 50 guns, including an AK-47 assault rifle. Prosecutors said he preferred to sell the revolvers because they don't leave shell casings at crime scenes. He was originally charged with leading a gun trafficking network, second-degree conspiracy and unlawful possession of a firearm. The maximum sentence is 20 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

According to Trenton Police Department Detective Gary Britton, Bobby Lee Henderson, 25, of Townsend and Larry Nottingham, 29, of Eastville pleaded guilty recently to illegal transfer of firearms charges in agreements with New Jersey prosecutors. The detective says he expects the two to get probation.

Two other men wanted in connection with the gun-running operation are Johnathan Johnson, also known as J-Rock, 29, of Cape Charles and Amoie Smith, a citizen of Jamaica, who was living in Trenton and has returned home. Britton said Johnson is "still on the run. He has a lot of questions to answer to." The detective said once the charges were filed against Beasley, retaliation violence on both the Shore and Trenton has been suspected.

Britton said Smith "would accompany Beasley on many trips" between Virginia and New Jersey. "Laws in Virginia are a lot less stringent," the detective said. There is "no accountability of personal sale of a handgun." He explained that in his state, one cannot legally sell a gun to a friend without a criminal history and screening being done.

Accomack Circuit Court

According to court records, last week in Accomack Circuit Court:

•Leroy Handy, 62, of Payne Road in

Beasley

Bloxom was acquitted of stealing a filtration system on June 17, 2010, that belonged to Lynn Gayle and was stored in a farm shed.

•Dijon Ryheem Smith, 18, of Tunnels Mill Road in New Church was sentenced to a total of 13 years in prison for the robbery of Shane Stambaugh and use of a firearm in the Oct. 10, 2010, crime. Seven years were suspended. Restitution of $106.05 was ordered.

•Johnny George Abbott Jr., 60, of Estate Lane in Parksley was sentenced to three years in prison for driving after being declared an habitual offender. All but a year and six months of the term was suspended. He also was sentenced to 12 months in jail for a second offense of DUI, to run consecutively. All but six months was suspended and his driver's license was suspended for three years.

•Keenen S. Goodwine, 18, of Nocks Landing Road in Atlantic was sentenced to seven years for robbing Patrick Thomas of money, with all but 1.5 years suspended. He also was sentenced to three years for use of a firearm in the April 13, 2010, incident. The terms were set to run consecutively. Restitution of $133.33 was ordered. The incidents occurred at Thomas' home on Groton Town Road in Mappsville.

•Jernell Andre Pettit, 19, of Nelsonia Road in Nelsonia was sentenced to a total of 18 years for two counts of robbing José Gomez and Benigno Ontiveros Martinez of property, and two counts of use of a firearm. The incidents occurred on July 26, 2010. Ten years of the terms were suspended and an indeterminate probationary period was given. Pettit also was ordered to pay Gomez $133.33 and Martinez $10 in restitution.

•Bonnie Lou Thompson, 50, of Seabreeze Drive on Chincoteague pleaded guilty to possessing cocaine on Nov. 4, 2010. Judgement was withheld under First Offender's Status. She was ordered to do 100 hours of community service and her driver's license was suspended for six months.

•Storm Carter, 59, of Second Street in Keller and Joseph Lamont Washington, 33, of Exmore were convicted of grand larceny in connection with the June 20, 2010, theft of property from A to Z Furniture Store. Presentence reports and guidelines were ordered.

the eyes are set farther back in the head.

"It's based on science but it's basically art," she said, adding that computer imaging plays a big role. In other cases, after an ID was made, the sculptures and photos taken before death turned out to be remarkably similar.

The slope of the nose can often be determined by bone in the bridge. The chin was considered an important characteristic of the Accomack subject.

Bush said many times when skeletons are found, the heads are missing because scavengers (raccoons and rodents) drag them off or they become detached over time and roll away from the scene. She said the new sculpture process is also superior because a plastic skeleton replica is made so the real skull can be preserved. "They're clean. They're dry. They don't smell," she said. And when "predetermined markers" are filled with clay, they don't damage the bones, which may be needed as evidence in criminal trials, she added. Only a third are suspected homicides.

Another case that was presented involved an African-American male, also estimated at between 17 and 23 years old, and found on Aug. 2, 1996, in an abandoned cinderblock factory at 2236 Randolph St. in Portsmouth. "The mostly skeletonized partly putrefied remains were found ... by children playing in the area." One or both hands were not recovered. The victim was wearing a hooded green, white, and maroon, short-sleeved T-shirt, imprinted with "RUBA"; striped blue and white Levi Strauss Silver Tabs denim shorts; gray socks; and Fruit of the Loom size 30-32 brief-style underwear. Officials said his unusual teeth could help in learning the victim's identification. Portsmouth Police Department is handling the case.

The third sculpture was that of a 35- to 50-year-old woman recovered on April 7, 1992, adjacent to a warehouse at 231 Enterprise Dr. in Newport News. That city's police department is investigating. One or more of her limbs were not recovered. Officials are unsure of her race. The victim was wearing a light colored short-sleeved shirt and boxer shorts and black and white size 7.5 tennis shoes. Found nearby were a pair of Jordache blue jeans.

The cause of death in all three cases was not made available. Information also was gathered from DNA taken from the bones.

The efforts made by the FBI's Forensic Anthropology Services at Quantico were only half of the presentation. The event was aimed at pushing public awareness of the National Missing and Unidentified Persons System Web site www.namus.gov. This free database system is available to everyone interested in solving missing- and unidentified-person cases, but is geared toward families of missing persons, law enforcement, medical examiners/coroners and victim advocates.

Rochelle Altholz, the medical examiner's statewide administrator, urged relatives of missing persons to give their DNA to police using a mouth swab that would only be included in the identification databanks.

In the Accomack case, the database revealed that the man was healing from a fracture of the nasal bones before he died. He also had signs of a spinal condition.

He was wearing boys' size 16 Open Trails blue jeans, a yellow shirt with the sleeves torn off, green brief-style underwear size 34-36 and blue flip-flops. With the remains was a "red patterned wool blanket," wooden prayer beads (a rosary), a gold-tone chain with a gold-tone square pendant of Jesus Christ and a gold-tone half-a-heart charm.

One or more limbs were not recovered, according to the Web site and one or more hands were not found. He was estimated to be 5 feet, 2 inches tall. His hair color is listed as black.

Goga said he is not certain why the Accomack case was selected to be included in the presentation. "I assume it was just the luck of the draw since they were focusing on Tidewater cases this time around."

Ironically, the focus brought the case to the public for the first time as local media were never given information about the remains when they were found. The case were first posted on the Web site on July 9, 2009, and last updated on March 30, 2011.

Goga said not all the workers and crew leaders return to the same camp every year, which makes identification even more difficult.

Northampton Proposes Budget

By Ron West

The Northampton County Board of Supervisors Monday hammered out a county budget to be sent to public hearing.

The supervisors agreed to hold the line on the budget overall to prevent a tax increase. While the final figures for each department were not available, the bottom line is level funding with some minor changes. Under the proposed budget, the school budget would include an increase of $107,000 over the current budget.

Bay Blue Crab Population Improving

Virginia and Maryland fishery managers have announced that the Chesapeake Bay's blue-crab population is at its second highest level since 1997 and well above the target for the third year in a row.

The results of the 2011 Blue Crab Winter Dredge Survey indicate that management measures put into place in 2008 to conserve female crabs are working. Overall crab abundance, however, declined due to this past winter's deep freeze that killed as many as 31 percent of Maryland's adult crabs, compared to about 11 percent in 2010.

"Clearly, we're on the right path and this drop in crab abundance just means it will take a bit longer to completely rebuild the stock," said Virginia Secretary of Natural Resources Doug Domenech. At 460 million crabs, the Chesapeake Bay's blue crab population is nearly double the record low of 249 million in 2007.

"The bay's blue crab population is healthy and now is showing signs of resiliency, thanks to our stock rebuilding efforts with our Maryland partners," said Virginia Marine Resources Commissioner Steven G. Bowman. "Some stock management challenges remain, but the evidence shows we're going in the right direction."

Public Notice

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) – Baltimore District
Soliciting Interest in the Formation of Restoration Advisory Board (RAB)
for Wallops Flight Facility (WFF)

CHINCOTEAGUE, VA – The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE), Baltimore District is seeking input from stakeholders (residents, tenants, and interested parties) regarding the establishment of a Department of Defense (DoD) Restoration Advisory Board (RAB) to enhance the public involvement in the ongoing environmental studies and restoration activities for the Wallops Flight Facility (WFF) Formerly Used Defense Site (FUDS). The FUDS restoration effort is focused on specific sites within the WFF where U.S. Navy operations were conducted between 1942 and 1959.

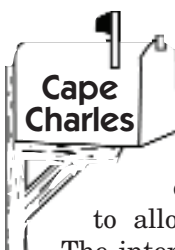

The purpose of a DoD RAB is to create a forum for exchanging information between the community and the Army Corps of Engineers regarding the environmental restoration projects for the site in accordance with the Defense Environmental Restoration Program (DERP). The Department of the Army recognizes the importance of stakeholder participation in DERP; therefore, USACE Baltimore District is soliciting people interested in working with USACE for the establishment of a RAB.

The RAB will include community members who reflect the diverse interests of the local community. RAB members will be asked to review and comment on plans and technical documents relating to the ongoing environmental studies and restoration activities at WFF. RAB members will have the opportunity to provide comments that may accelerate the restoration. Members will also be expected to serve as voluntary liaison between the community and the USACE Baltimore District and be available to meet with community members and/or groups. RAB members will receive no compensation for their service. RAB meetings will be open to the public. RAB members will be expected to serve a 1- to 2-year term and attend RAB meetings regularly.

Forms from interested parties will be reviewed by a selection panel. The selection panel will make recommendations to the USACE District Commander for approval of RAB members. The selection panel members will be representatives from the USACE Baltimore District, National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), Virginia Department of Environmental Quality (VADEQ), the community, and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The initial meeting to form the RAB will be held on May 26, 2011 from 6-8 pm at the Wallops Visitors Center, located within Building J-20 on Virginia Highway Route 175 (near Chincoteague Island). For more information, or to obtain a community interest form, please contact Joyce Conant, USACE Baltimore District, Public Affairs Office, at 410-962-2809 or by e-mail at Joyce.Conant@usace.army.mil.

As part of the maintenance process for the Cape Charles water tank, the Public Utilities Department has drained the water tank to allow for its maintenance. The interior of the tank also will be painted.

Water has been stored in reserve tanks at the water plant. The work is expected to last through May.

During this period, residents may experience some fluctuations in water pressure.

The water system has been tested and monitored to ensure that the town's water supply would not be compromised during this period. Even though the town is confident that there will be an ample water supply, officials are asking residents to conserve water during this time.

Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge Manager Lou Hinds has announced that both the Woodland Trail and the Herbert H. Bateman Educational and Administrative Center will close temporarily during May.

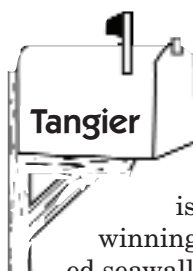

A paving project has been approved to resurface the Woodland Trail, which will close beginning Monday, May 2. Depending upon the weather, work is expected to be complete before Memorial Day.

The Herbert H. Bateman Educational and Administrative Center will be closed to public access all day on May 3. During this time, seasonal cleaning and maintenance will occur, resulting in the dismantling and reassembly of some indoor plumbing and public use facilities. The visitor center will reopen on Wednesday, May 4.

The 3rd Annual Spring Fling in Onley will be held May 28, with a rain date of May 30. There will be lots of yard sales (spaces can be rented from Onley Fire & Rescue Co.) and SPOTS will be selling coffee, water, pastries and plants as well as having a train display for the children.

For more information or to be included on the participant list, contact Onley Town Office at 787-3985.

Tangier is competing with cities and towns with populations exceeding 500,000. Tangier has approximately 500 residents and just a handful of those residents own a computer.

The Town of Eastville will hold a public hearing on Monday, May 2, 2011, at 7:00PM at the Town Office located, 5248 Willow Oak Rd. to solicit public comment on the Town's proposed budget for the 2011 budget. Everyone is welcome. Jonny Stevenson, Town Clerk.

TOWN OF EASTVILLE
Proposed Budget
Fiscal Year 2011

Expenses		Revenues
Office	$ 13,650	Taxes & Fees	$ 32,720
Administration	58,100	Fines	96,000
Public Safety	97,900	Fire Programs	8,000
Water System	89,140	Interest Income	32,000
Contingencies	2,930	Water Revenue	44,000
		Principal	49,000
	$261,720		$261,720

The proposed budget reflects an increase of $53,370 over the previous fiscal year. The majority of the increase is attributed to the mandatory DEQ water system permit application and a reduction in Meals Tax revenues as a result of closure of the Eastville Inn. There is no intent on the part of the town council to raise any tax rates or fees to meet the proposed fiscal budget. A more descriptive analysis is available at the Eastville Town Office, 5248 Willow Oak Road, Eastville, VA 23347.

a very fitting word since in each case my gift was the bequest of a person who had died. My gratitude for their impact on my life has been infinite and inexpressible.

I have since tried to impress on anyone who will listen to what I say, or read what I write, how important organ donation is. I have met recipients whose very lives have been saved and I have heard from families whose loss was lessened a bit by the knowledge that their loved one, now gone, had enriched another's life.

I myself unexpectedly joined that Donor Category 18 months ago when my husband died suddenly.

And yet ironically, the reason he was at a heart hospital at all was because he had been told by a cardiologist after he was admitted that he would be needing a heart transplant. We joked for a few days about how he and I could take our dual transplant show on the road. Of course, I gave him a hard time about having the more elaborate procedure, always needing to outdo me.

We began meeting with a multi-faceted transplant team to prepare us for the procedure and its aftermath. But within days — in fact, as my husband underwent the extensive battery of physical tests to clear him for the transplant — it became apparent that his heart had a problem only as a by-product of cancer.

And so it was, that as I listened to the devastating news that my husband had but days to live, I told the doctor that I wanted, and I knew my husband wanted, any and all of his organs to be donated. But alas, the only tissues that a body invaded by cancer can donate are corneas. Ironic. Even in death, my husband was repaying my debts, replacing the two corneas I had withdrawn from the eye bank years before.

And now it is perhaps appropriate that during this special month I have learned that I probably will need to have my right cornea replaced again. It seems the corneal disease from which I suffer — keratoconus — has rendered the transplant pretty useless. But it has served me beautifully for over 20 years, longer than was expected, and I couldn't have asked for more.

However, this upcoming withdrawal will leave me in debt to the eye bank yet again. My balance will show a deficit, one I can never repay.

Tomorrow marks the end of National Organ Donation Month, which has long been significant to me for purely selfish reasons.

In 1988 I received a corneal transplant in my right eye and five years later, my left eye was the beneficiary, testified that she heard what sounded like a scuffle inside the house, followed by two gunshots, then re-entered the house and saw both men on the floor. She said Stratton got up and kicked Moses, who was still facedown on the floor. Stratton then left the scene, Ellis said. She told the court she called her sister and 911 to report the shooting.

Hallett was recalled to testify about the interview she and investigator Raymond Gunter had conducted with Stratton. The entire interview was recorded and played for the jury. During the interview, Stratton said he did not go to Ellis' home with the intent to harm anyone and he was not aware that Moses was there.

Phone records introduced as evidence showed that Stratton had attempted to call Moses and Ellis repeatedly that evening, but had not reached them. Questioned about carrying a gun to the home, Stratton replied that while he did not have a permit for it, he always carried one for his protection as he lived in what he described as a dangerous location. He said he had it in his waistband, not his hand, when he arrived at Ellis' home. Stratton said he did not break down the door; it was open a crack and he saw Moses inside. He said he and Moses began to fight and Moses struck him in the head with the field-hockey stick, after which he shot Moses in self-defense. Stratton went on to state that he left for his mother's home in the Bayview area and on the way, tossed the gun out of the car.

Later that evening, Stratton was seen at the hospital Emergency Room, where he received stitches for his head wound.

Hallett testified that the Sheriff's Department attempted to locate the gun, but it was not found in the area where Stratton had indicated he had disposed of it.

The defense did not introduce any witnesses, but asked Judge Patricia L. West to dismiss the charges as Jones had not proven that the home was broken into and no evidence had been introduced that showed premeditation on Stratton's part. The judge denied the motion.

We Need Our Own Judge

Dear Editor:

I read a recent article in the Post that was, in essence, a report from the General Assembly by our Del. Lynwood W. Lewis Jr. and I was interested in particular about the information he provided in regards to the Circuit Court judgeship for the Eastern Shore of Virginia that now has been funded by the General Assembly and approved by the governor. Del. Lewis reported that W. Revell Lewis III has been certified by the House of Delegates for the Circuit Court judgeship on the Eastern Shore. Lewis is also the candidate supported by a majority of the attorneys in the Eastern Shore Bar Association.

Apparently there is a dispute in regards to the selection of a Circuit Court judge in Virginia Beach and the State Senate has made the selection of our judge a part of that dispute and has refused to accept an offer to remove our judgeship selection from that dispute. There is no reason why our judgeship needs to be tied to the judgeship in Virginia Beach and I urge our Sen. Ralph Northam to see that our judgeship on the Eastern Shore is not held up by the disagreement on the judgeship in Virginia Beach. If there is a deadlock because of the lack of agreement, the governor of Virginia would appoint someone to serve, but that person would only serve until the General Assembly meets again next January. A gubernatorial appointment would not be a suitable solution for the Eastern Shore nor for anyone who is appointed by the governor. Being in limbo and not being permanently elected is not fair to the Eastern Shore nor to the person selected.

I ask Sen. Northam to do his best to end this impasse and get us a Circuit Court judge because the Eastern Shore needs and deserves it.

J. Nicholas Klein III, Keller
