Judge Rules 'Not Insane'

Tyvon Tyler didn't speak to his lawyers about the murder and related charges that were filed against him two years ago.

The 23-year-old Accomac resident continued to be silent Thursday when an Accomack Circuit Court judge questioned him as he stood in a white jail jumpsuit at the defense table, his wrists and ankles cuffed and chained. He wouldn't say if he was satisfied with his lawyers, ready for trial or preferred his case to be heard by a jury.

Tyler would not identify himself. He stood and sat at the appropriate times, and didn't express opposition when his attorneys entered pleas of not guilty by reason of insanity for counts of premeditated murder, use of a firearm in that felony and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon.

In the end, Tyler was convicted of the March 17, 2007, murder of Sentae Nock, 23, of Melfa and the related charges. Nock was shot in the head at the Wachapreague home of his aunt and uncle on Drummondtown Road.

Judge Glen Tyler (no relation) said there was no evidence of insanity, a burden required of the defense since the law states "a person is presumed to be sane at the time ... of a crime." The judge said, "I think the commonwealth here has made a ... case."

The judge said he had no doubt the defendant

This accident on Lankford Highway claimed the life of a Delaware woman.

Local Woman Charged in Fatal Accident

A crash involving two motorcycles and a car in lower Northampton County Friday afternoon resulted in the death of one cyclist and the serious injury of the other.

According to State Police spokeswoman Michele Cotten and Northampton County Emergency Medical Services Director Hollye Carpenter, the incident occurred at approximately 2:45 p.m. in the southbound lane of Lankford Highway just south of Kiptopeke Elementary Schools when the driver of a 1999 Ford Taurus failed to yield the right of way as she was exiting a driveway and was struck by two Harley-Davidson motorcycles which came to rest beneath the car.

The first motorcycle rider, Karen B. Fortner, from Newark, Del., was declared dead at the scene. The other rider, her son, Justin Fortner, also of Newark, was flown to Sentara Norfolk General Hospital.

The driver of the Taurus, Dawn Marie Williams of Apricot Lane in Cape Charles, was not injured. She was charged with failure to yield the right of way.

Responding to the scene were units from Cape Charles, Cheriton, Exmore and Northampton County Emergency Medical Services.

Northampton Supervisors Look To Cut $1,751,469

By Ron West

Northampton supervisors continued to trim away at the proposed FY 2010 budget Tuesday.

County Administrator Katie Nunez noted that she had asked each county department to begin the process by submitting a request based on a 10 percent decrease from what it is receiving this year.

Nunez indicated that departmental requests reflected in the original draft FY2010 budget would have generated a deficit of $1,751,469. To combat this projected deficit, Nunez recommended that the supervisors investigate:

- reducing the county contribution to the school budget and the Social Services budget by 5 percent, compared with this year's funding;
- replacing the Merchant's Capital Tax, which raises $92,520 with a new Business License program;

- leasing rather than purchasing new Sheriff's Department vehicles, which reduces the sheriff's budget by $75,000;

- holding the line on county contributions toward health insurance, based on the FY2009 budget;

- eliminating merit and cost of living increases for staff;

- adjusting fuel, electric, postage and phone accounts, which saves an estimated $41,700.

The supervisors are expected to continue their budget work sessions before presenting the budget and any adjustments to the tax rates at a public hearing prior to voting on the budget in June.

The supervisors discussed establishing a public service authority (PSA) for waste treatment facilities. Supervisor Spencer Murray said he believes a PSA would have the authority to assess the need for wastewater treatment systems in the county. "I want the county to grow, but in a systematic way and to protect our natural resources," said Murray. "I don't want to see uncontrolled growth and sprawl. I am concerned about the prospect of seeing lots of little sewer systems and mass drainfields all over the county."

Supervisor Larry Trala pointed out that the towns and the area immediately surrounding them need public wastewater treatment systems and that without them, the towns would not be able to grow.

Murray noted out that the last thing the county needs is to have a lot of little wastewater facilities with people who didn't know how to properly run them.

Supervisor Richard Tankard remarked that some of the towns do not have the population nor customer base to support a costly wastewater treatment system.

Board Chairman Jeff Walker recommended that the county ask each town what it wants with respect to a wastewater system and estimate what it would cost to implement such a system.

In other action of the evening, the supervisors voted 6-0 to purchase property in the Cheapside area at a cost of $59,500 for the use of a waste collection facility. The county currently has waste collections centers in Birdsnest, Wardtown, Cheriton, and Hare Valley. Yet to be decided is a site for a waste collection center in the Eastville area.

Rifles and Pistols and Shotguns, Oh My!

By Linda Cicaira

The majority of Accomack and Northampton County residents say they were taught the proper way to handle a firearm and regard gun ownership as a right under the U.S. Constitution.

Those who participated in an Eastern Shore Post e-mail survey said that their rifles, pistols and shotguns are used primarily to hunt for food, for target practice and for protection.

The survey asked about the nationwide rise in firearms sales since President Barack Obama was elected. National news sources have indicated that the increase is due to the president's plan to ban some types of weapons.

"It doesn't matter where you live," wrote Harry Rivell of Cape Charles. "Only honest citizens are affected by gun bans. The criminal won't turn his in and he'll be the only one with a gun.

Rivell said, "Banning gun ownership has not worked in England or Australia as unarmed citizens are assaulted by armed felons. Citizens owning firearms are what gave this great nation its independence."

"I think you might have some problems with the questions for this survey," said Al James of Q u i n b y .

"Most folks would be reluctant to say how many guns they own since it might be an invitation to a theft."

But the answers came in. Participants own an average of three guns. About 5 percent of respondents did not specify the number of firearms they own. Slightly more said they do not own a gun. About 4 percent admitted to owning 10 or more firearms. Less than 2 percent want all guns banned.

"They (White House staff and special-interest groups) are misleading the public on national and international issues so they can construct laws," said Tom Schwartz of Melfa. "The current method ... is to drum up crisis situations and then create a response to the crisis."

"Criminal activities involving gun running and trades is the straw man that the White House has created and has been sending false and misleading information via their friends in the media to stop, restrict and track normal law-abiding citizens from gun ownership," Schwartz continued. "Virginia is one of the four targeted areas most mentioned by the media."

James said, "There is a collective paranoia among many gun owners that somehow the government is trying to identify all the gun owners out there so at some point they can confiscate their weapons. ... As a retired police officer, I have several handguns as well as some hunting long guns."

"There are plenty of good reasons to want comprehensive regulation of firearms," James continued. "The problem is there are so many extremists on both sides of the issue that it leaves little room for a reasonable solution. Clearly the new administration has many members who would support a total ban on handguns or at the least, registration of all other weapons. This realization is not lost on gun owners or those who support gun rights and has prompted the current surge in gun sales."

"Gun rights activists see any attempt at regulation, no matter how reasonable on its face, as an assault on their rights," said James. "Frankly, there is no chance was guilty since he was seen running out of the room with a gun after the "shot rang out." Additionally, testimony revealed that Tyvon Tyler told a psychologist at Central State Hospital, "Yeah, I shot him in the head. No court, no case."

Commonwealth's Attorney Gary R. Agar contended that the defendant was faking mental illness. Two mental-health evaluators agreed he could be.

Dr. C. Arthur Nalls III of Nasawadox originally wrote that Tyler "appeared to be acutely psychotic" and "desperately needs medication." He later admitted he "may have jumped the gun" in an attempt to pave the way for a more intense evaluation.

Tyler, who was previously convicted of receiving stolen property in an unrelated case, sat slumped in his chair beside defense lawyers Terry Bliss and Thomas Northam Thursday. The judge denied their motions to dismiss the case.

Bliss contended that Tyler was insane when he was arrested. He told an officer, "My mother's dead; they chopped her up. There's a bullet in the back of my head - you can feel it."

One doctor testified that someone faking a mental illness was unlikely to make up such a statement.

Agar's evidence showed that there was gunshot residue on Tyler. He also presented a jail nurse who said Tyler was very cooperative and admitted he used cocaine and smoked marijuana daily.

Nock's brother, Breon Harris, 17, said the defendant was among several people who gathered in a back bedroom of the Wachapreague trailer to listen to music. Harris said he was getting CDs from another room when "I heard the gunshot."

He was in the hall on his way back to the bedroom when "Tyvon came out of the room pointing a gun" and cursing before running out the back door.

Harris said he then found his brother on the floor. "He was bleeding from the head. I ran out to the living room and told them to call the cops." Harris said he heard that Tyler had been holding his hands up and talking of Satan and Jesus, but he did not see it himself.

Mary Fitchett, 31, of Birdsnest, was also there when the gunshot rang out. "Tyvon was running through the living room ... he put the gun to my little boy's head" and said "get ... out of my way."

Fitchett said Tyler's behavior was different before the shooting. "I never saw him acting that way before." She said he was staring and throwing his hands in the air before the shooting. "I knew he was not acting like his normal self."

Former Accomack Deputy David Smullin, who now works for Onley Police Department, said that after securing the house for rescue workers, he went looking for Tyler. He found the defendant walking south on Drummondtown Road. "He ran from me into the woods," said Smullin. "I told him stop ... we had to chase him into the woods. I placed him on the ground and took him into custody."

Smullin said Tyler was between three and four miles from the trailer, walking toward Wachapreague. "He was carrying on a conversation basically with himself."

Tyler's mother said she sought help for her son days before the incident, after he stopped eating and sleeping and continuously paced the floor. She said authorities were looking for him and he had not returned home. She said she knew nothing of drug use nor his having a gun.

Cape Charles and Chincoteague Projects Get Stimulus Funds

By Ron West & Cheryl Nowak

The State Water Control Board and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers have approved the final list of localities that will receive federal stimulus money from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

Among these is the Cape Charles water treatment program, which will receive $4,463,973, and Chincoteague Bay dredging, which will receive $328,000.

Cape Charles Acting Town Manager Heather Arcos said she was very happy to hear that the town will be the receive close to $4.5 million in the Federal Stimulus program.

Arcos noted that the stimulus funding, along with a previously awarded DEQ grant for $6.8 million, will go a long way toward paying for the $16.5 million wastewater treatment facility that has been planned for the town. The project is slated to begin construction by late summer or early fall, with completion anticipated by 2011.

Said Cape Charles Vice Mayor Chris Bannon, "To say the least, I am extremely happy about the news that we will be receiving the federal funding. It will help take some of the pressure off of the residents, knowing that we will only have approximately $5 million left to pay on the project. This is just a tremendous shot in the arm for the town."

Cape Charles Mayor Dora Sullivan also expressed her pleasure upon hearing the news.

With respect to Chincoteague, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers noted that dredging of the channel and harbor will restore the authorized five-foot depth of this harbor of refuge used by the area commercial fishing industry.

for legislation on firearms and the Obama Administration is not going to spend political capital on an issue that has no chance of succeeding.”

“I learned to shoot from my father and in the Navy,” said Harry Brough of Onancock. “But have not done so since. I feel it is very important that ... all citizens retain the right to buy and own a gun. That right is an essential protection against tyranny and oppression from any source.”

Pete Wallace of Wallops Island used to sell firearms. He wrote, “I think it should be illegal to sell guns anywhere without a background check. I think that you should have to reregister your gun every year for the first three years and every five years thereafter by bringing it to your local police station.”

“I will always have a gun for my protection,” Wallace said. “I don’t believe anyone needs or should own an assault rifle; the term ‘assault’ alone should tell you why. For those that say they want to collect them, find another hobby. For those that say they may need them to protect themselves from our government taking our weapons, seek mental help.”

“Every time there is talk of any gun regulations, gun sales go up,” said Wallace. “Maybe they should let it slip out that they are going to regulate car sales. That could save GM (General Motors).”

Eleanor Drewniak, executive director of the Eastern Shore Coalition Against Domestic Violence, said, “My ex-husband taught me while we were married and bought the gun for me after I left him!!”

Drewniak said she has “not had (or taken) the opportunity to practice. My grandson lives with me and has been taught gun safety from my father and a male mentor that is an avid hunter.”

She said she owns the firearm for protection. “I want to have the right to protect myself and I want that for my family.”

Jack Smith of New Church wrote, “Guns don’t kill people. People kill people. That is a fact. And raising taxes and making guns hard to get is only going to make it difficult for the law-abiding citizens. The criminals will still be able to get any kind they want for cheap prices on the street.”

He said he hasn’t had any problems finding ammunition, but “the prices have jumped and it is almost too expensive to shoot them.”

Delsheta Griffin of Parksley wrote, “I feel that it is a right that shouldn’t be dictated by someone that doesn’t know each individual owner ... I pray that lawmakers will see that if they decide to ban gun ownership, it isn’t going to hurt the unlawful, but the law-abiding citizens of this nation.”

Linda Regula of Machipongo “used to hunt with my Dad, practice with a pistol.” She said, “I think everyone has the right to own a reasonable weapon (not assault rifles, etc). Shotguns for hunting are okay. I really don’t see a need for pistols because if you need a weapon to defend yourself, you won’t miss with a shotgun.”

“I completely support firearms that are used for sport and recreational purposes as this is a vital aspect of the Eastern Shore culture,” wrote David Schwab of Cape Charles. “The only firearms I do not support are those that have no practical purpose in society. You do not need to protect yourself or shoot a deer with a semi-automatic machine gun.”

Second Amendment: “A well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed.”

“I am a woman 36 years old who can fire a weapon,” wrote Jo Ellen Ellis, a resident of the northern part of Accomack County. “I was raised in a family that believes that firearms are to be used mainly for putting food on your table or for keeping predators away from your livestock and fowl. We were never to use a firearm on another human being unless we had absolutely no choice.”

“We were not allowed to play with toy guns and if we did, we got in trouble,” she continued. “I wasn’t even allowed to play with squirt guns because my father said that would lead us to believe that pointing a real gun at someone could be a joke.”

“Gun ownership is a serious responsibility,” Ellis added. “By owning a gun you always have someone’s life in your hands ... a gun will only kill when operated by a human being. It has to be loaded by a human, cocked by a human and more times than not, the trigger has to be pulled by a human.”

Thomas (Beef) Berry of Parksley brought up another subject when answering the survey. “It is my right and duty to my family to be able to protect them if necessary,” he contended, especially while “living in an area where the average response time for law enforcement is very high ... this is not a smear at law enforcement. I understand that with the area they are faced with covering they do the best they can.”

Town Meeting Focuses on Jobs, Development and Education

By Ron West

Del. Lynwood Lewis Jr. and state Sen. Dr. Ralph Northam were in Cape Charles Thursday evening to conduct the fourth in a series of town hall meetings on the Shore.

Earlier in the week, Northam and Lewis had conducted meetings in three locations in Accomack County and will be holding a fifth in Hampton Roads.

Northam opened the meeting by recapping the major events from the 2009 General Assembly session. He noted the major issue confronting the state leadership this year was the budget and emphasized that without the Federal Stimulus Program, cuts would have been much more severe. Northam said that even with the federal funds, 1,500 state employees were laid off and major cuts were made to a number of state programs.

On the plus side, Northam listed a number of local projects that will provide opportunities for employment. Of note are new projects at Wallops and the broadband initiative, which will soon connect most of the Shore with Hampton Roads and areas to the north.

Lewis spoke of the need to encourage students to take advantage of educational opportunities. Many of the jobs that are making their way to the Shore will require either college or vocational training beyond high school. Both Lewis and Northam emphasized the need to focus local and state funding on education, from Pre-K through high school.

Cookie Francis quizzed the representatives regarding their position on development or, more precisely, the lack of it, in Northampton County. Lewis said it is not an either/or choice regarding economic development versus quality of life. He said both can exist side by side.

Lewis noted that the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) is being reshaped and soon will be a much leaner department.

A question was raised regarding the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel's (CBBT) current toll structure. One member of the audience suggested that a reduced toll would encourage additional growth at Bay Creek by making it affordable to live in the county and commute to work across the bay. Lewis reminded all present that the CBBT is a private enterprise and that much of the funding raised by tolls will go toward construction of new tunnels. Additional higher-end housing could detrimentally affect the Composite Index that the state uses to calculate the local share of funding for education. The recent influx of higher end homes, much of which is in the lower end of the county, had a negative impact on the Composite Index last year, resulting in serious financial consequences for Northampton the school system. Lewis noted that tampering with the Composite Index formula would likely help schools in northern Virginia and hurt rural systems. The formula for the Composite Index involves looking at residential real-estate figures. The higher the value of real estate, the less funding from the state. Approximately 50 percent of the formula is based on local real-estate values.

Emergency Items To Be Distributed Saturday

On Saturday, May 2, Accomack County needs help from the community to test whether the county can effectively assist county residents after a disaster strikes. Accomack County will be conducting a Point of Distribution exercise in the parking lot at Nandua High School. Commodities will be given to citizens who drive through the site.

From 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday, each vehicle coming to the site will receive a case of bottled water, a roof-size tarp, MREs (Meals Ready to Eat), and a disaster preparedness information packet. The county's goal is to provide these commodities quickly and efficiently to the first 400 vehicles that pass through the site. Such an exercise allows the county to measure its effectiveness in distributing commodities after a disaster using county, state, and volunteer personnel. It also gives citizens an opportunity to learn about recovery efforts in the county after a major disaster. The commodities being distributed are very typically the same as would be distributed after a real disaster. Items received by residents on Saturday can be placed into their hurricane emergency supply kits.

Residents will enter the site at the southern end of Nandua High School's parking lot. Upon entering the front parking lot of the school, residents will be directed to a loading point. Site workers will load the water, MREs, tarp and information into citizens' vehicles. Having the vehicle's trunk or hatch latch open will speed the process. Citizens must make sure they have room in their vehicle for the commodities before they visit the site. After filling out a very brief survey, citizens may exit the site.

For residents of Chincoteague, on the same date and time, the same exercise with the same commodities will be conducted at the Chincoteague Community Center.

VMRC Addresses Local Issues

By Cheryl Nowak

Virginia Marine Resources Commission Fisheries Chief Jack Travelstead briefed the commission Tuesday on the scientific findings of the winter blue crab population survey, which shows the number of female crabs in the Chesapeake Bay has doubled since the VMRC enacted harvest restrictions last year. The commission also unanimously approved a May public hearing on proposed changes to the 2009 crab regulations.

The VMRC also approved unanimously a memorandum of understanding with The Nature Conservancy regarding the restoration, management, and protection of oyster reef sanctuaries adjacent to or on riparian lands of The Nature Conservancy on the seaside of the Eastern Shore, and approved a May public hearing on sanctuary designations for some Eastern Shore oyster reefs.

The VMRC also unanimously approved a request by the Town of Cape Charles for authorization to install four 400-foot long offshore breakwaters and one 430-foot long offshore breakwater along the Chesapeake Bay, approximately 2,000 feet west of Cape Charles Harbor, marked and lighted in accordance with Coast Guard regulations. The proposed breakwaters are to protect vessels inside Cape Charles Harbor from wave damage.

And the VMRC approved a request by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for authorization to hydraulically place approximately 20,000 cubic yards of dredged material, per dredge cycle from the maintenance of the Chincoteague Inner Channel on a previously used 103-acre overboard site situated northwest of Lewis Creek in Chincoteague Bay.

The VMRC also approved a request by the Corps of Engineers for authorization to hydraulically place approximately 160,000 cubic yards of dredged material, per dredge cycle from the maintenance of the Metompkin Bay Channel, in a previously used overboard placement site in the surf zone off Metompkin Island. Applicant agrees that no dredged material will be placed in the surf zone between April 1 and Sept. 15 to avoid impacts to sensitive bird species in the area during this period.

The Eastern Shore Broadband Authority requested authorization to install 3,478 linear feet of fiber optic cables across Mosquito Creek, Cockle Creek, Queens Sound, Wire Narrows, Black Narrows and Chincoteague Channel. The VMRC approved the request with no royalty assessment and only a $100 permit fee.

Health Matters Swine Flu

Following confirmation by U.S. health officials that cases of swine flu have been identified in several states and Mexico, the Virginia Department of Health (VDH) is asking health-care providers across the state to be highly suspicious of influenza-like illness.

Swine flu is a respiratory disease of pigs caused by type A influenza virus. Due to the ability of the virus to mutate, sporadic human infections can occur.

The symptoms of swine flu are similar to seasonal influenza and typically include fever, cough, sore throat, nasal congestion and runny nose. Additional symptoms may include diarrhea, vomiting, headache, chills, fatigue, pneumonia and respiratory failure. Persons with swine flu are contagious for up to seven days after the onset of illness and possibly longer if they are still symptomatic.

"There have been no cases of swine flu virus reported in Virginia," said State Health Commissioner Karen Remley, MD, MBA, FAAP. "We are contacting health-care providers ... and asking them to test individuals who have flu-like symptoms and have traveled to affected areas up to seven days before becoming ill."

People planning to travel outside of the U.S. should consult the CDC's Web site or contact their toll-free hotline at 800-CDC-INFO for the latest travel guidance and outbreak notices.

CDC has determined that this virus is contagious.

VDH encourages anyone with influenza-like illness to follow these standard guidelines:

- Stay home from work or school and limit contact with others;
- Cover your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze. Throw the tissue in the trash after you use it.
- Wash your hands often with soap and water, especially after you cough or sneeze. Alcohol-based hands cleaners are also effective.
- Try to avoid close contact with sick people.
- Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs spread that way.

Four different antiviral drugs are licensed for use in the U.S. for the treatment of influenza. At this time, CDC recommends the use of oseltamivir or zanamivir for the treatment and/or prevention of infection with swine influenza viruses.

More information on treatment recommendations can be found at Web site www.cdc.gov/flu/swine/recommendations.htm

Local U.S. Congressman Glenn Nye has launched a new feature on his Web site to help Eastern Shore residents learn about swine influenza. The Swine Influenza Information Center Web site can be found at:

New Agriculture Figures Released

The just-released Census of Agriculture for 2007 reflects a decrease in the number of farms in both Accomack and Northampton counties.

From 2002 to 2007, the number of farms in Accomack County dropped from 318 to 248. Northampton County lost 36 farms, from 187 in 2002 to 151.

Although the number of farms decreased in Accomack County significantly, the amount of land in farms actually increased from 91,056 acres to 93,764 acres, a 3% increase or by 2,708 acres. In Northampton County, the amount of land in farms increased greatly, from 52,459 to 63,760 acres, a 22% increase of 11,301 acres.

The market value of agriculture production in Accomack County increased from $109,133,000 to $153,040,000 and in Northampton County from $44,192,000 to $90,069,000 over those five years. The average size farm increased from 286 acres to 378 acres in Accomack and from 281 acres to 422 acres in Northampton.

Accomack County is number one in the state for soybean and corn production, number two for wheat, vegetables and snapbean production and number three in total value of agricultural products sold. The average age of the Accomack County farmers is 58.3 years.

Northampton County is now number one in the state in wheat production, vegetables and snapbean production. It is number two in soybean production and number seven in corn production for grain. The average age of the Northampton County farmer is 56.4 years.

Grow Your Own Delicious Herbs

By Belle Hopkins

An easy and satisfying way to begin growing more of your own food is to start a culinary herb garden. Herbs not only please the palate, they are often picturesque, sinfully easy to grow — and can be extremely important in promoting good health.

Herbs can be perennial, biennial or annual. Here on the Eastern Shore, many useful herbs are perennial — coming back reliably year after year. Some, like rosemary and thyme, do not even lose their leaves in winter and can be used fresh in the kitchen year-round. Several other perennials — chives, lovage (with its strong celery taste), oregano, peppermint and spearmint — die back to their roots only after an extended period of cold weather each year, and then send up new shoots early the following spring.

Biennials are plants that live for only two years. Parsley is one of the favorites. Buy young parsley plants locally every year though, because it takes a long time to germinate. The returning second-year plant will provide early leaves for the kitchen before it flowers, by which time the new plants will be producing well. Another biennial and parsley relative is caraway, grown for its aromatic seeds. Harvesting begins in the second year, but first-year plants provide beautiful foliage for flower bouquets

Annuals die after the first year. Many are easily grown from seed, including basil and sweet marjoram, tender annuals that should be started indoors for the earliest use. Subsequent plantings can be made directly in the garden after the soil has warmed and all danger from frost has passed. Cilantro and dill are hardy annuals that also grow very easily from seed, are prolific, and happily reseed themselves. They often last well into the fall and beyond. Two other annuals included in my own “essential culinary herb list” are nasturtium and calendula (pot marigold). Nasturtiums have edible flowers that look lovely in salads. Dried calendula petals provide a beautiful garnish for autumn soups. Nasturtium is a tender annual, while calendula is hardy and will reseed itself — sometimes popping up in surprising places.

cess to fresh, healthy herbs in abundance. Fresh, unprocessed herbs maintain the plants’ original flavors and active ingredients, the latter working synergistically for the greatest healthful effectiveness. Another positive attribute of herb cultivation is that the very flavors that make them so attractive to us deter damage from deer, so a small unprotected garden outside your kitchen door is possible. Incidentally, because of their aromatic defenses against most insects, most herbs can be grown organically.

What makes herbs so easy to grow is that they thrive in ordinary garden soil and tend to be quite tolerant of different soil types. Most do quite well in full sun to partial shade. Indeed, many herbs are prolific, some to the point of being a nuisance, but not if properly and easily contained. Spearmint, for example, is best grown in a very large plastic pot (e.g., like one a nursery tree comes in) sunk into the ground right up to within a few inches of the rim; otherwise you will have spearmint growing everywhere! Another mint, catnip, if allowed to bloom, will freely self-seed, as will chives.

Many herbs (e.g. basil, thyme, and sage) come in varying flavors and growth habits. Many dry well and can be kept and used until the next growing season.

The health benefits of herbs are impressive. They contain vitamins, minerals and antioxidants. Many herbs, such as oregano, have many times the amount of antioxidants of the celebrated apple! Culinary herbs also help control weight by giving one a feeling of fullness and satiety.

From a cook’s perspective, the biggest reward from an herbal garden is the instant, affordable ac-

When planting, consider how large it grows and how much you will be using. Rosemary and sage will grow so large that a single specimen will suffice for the average cook. Most other herbs are best grown in groups of three: one plant for picking, one to recover, and one nearly ready for picking. Recipe favorites like dill, cilantro, and basil may require an entire row of their own. Herb seeds and plants can be bought locally from farmers’ markets and commercial nurseries.

"MISSY" BIRCH

First Anniversary in Heaven
May 1, 2009

It's been a year - doesn't seem like it. I miss you so very much. There isn't anyone waiting at the door for me anymore. And I don't have anyone to help me eat my food. I miss you so much! When I take my bath you aren't there waiting for me. Most of all, when I get in bed at night, you aren't there to keep me warm or to wash my feet. I miss you so very much. I will never forget you. I talk to you as though you were still here with me, but I know in my heart that you are gone. I have a hole in it where you used to be! No one will ever fill it. A day doesn't go by that I don't think about you and all we did together! I love and miss you more and more each day. I hope you will never forget me. I know I can never forget you! I love you so very much. One day I hope to see you again. I love you.
Sadly missed by your "Mommy"

I would like to express my heartfelt "Thank You" to all who brought food to my home, sent beautiful flowers and cards, called and checked on me, and the nurses who took such good care while I was sick. Also, I want to thank everyone for all the prayers and all the churches up & down the Shore who prayed for me. The prayers are so important. Prayers are so strong & I still feel them. I still need them as I have one more surgery.

Thank You to All
Love, Sherry L. Morgan

Soon the Eastern Shore Post will be X-rated.

Don't be alarmed (or excited). We're going to be 10 years old! The X is the Roman numeral. Yippee!

We'll still have photos of cats and dogs in attire. Maybe we'll throw in a few pictures of humans too. Our anniversary is June 2!!

The celebratory edition will hit the streets on June 5. The cost is probably the only thing that has stayed the same in the last decade. FREE!!! And advertising specials are being planned. Just one more reason to live it up! Can we say P-A-R-T-Y?!

Better yet, perhaps a day off is warranted. Hint.

Editor and Chief Cheryl Nowak, Advertising Manager Troy Justis

and the oldest paperboy on earth Bill Massey have been here the whole time. Three cheers!!! Since I wrote a Letter to the Editor back in 1999, I'll attempt to expand my three-year association. Ron West has been with the Post for four years! Salute! Angie Crutchley has been hanging around for more than a year.

The only sad thing about our anniversary is that Troy, my "twin brother," forgot to save the date and is planning on going with his family to Dollywood. He won't be here. Maybe he can do a live broadcast from there.

I remember when I turned 10. Yeah, I can still go back that far. I was wearing some tie-dye pants and a crocheted vest that Mom made for me. We've got pictures. And I got a bicycle. There is a Brownie movie of me riding it. And no, that's not X-rated either. But, looking back at the first few issues of the paper reminds me of those days. They were exploring and making history.

"Sometimes it feels like a hundred years," Cheryl reminisced. She loves it. Why else would she have recently become the major stockholder?

"We had a lot of good times in the little building," said Troy of the original office.

"Bob Bloxom (our former delegate) helped us decorate our first Christmas tree," said Cheryl. "He stopped by and was tall enough to put the star on the top."

The premiere issue of the Post was supposed to be 16 pages. But, the four-member ad staff was so enthusiastic, it sold 16 pages of advertising. That issue was a whopping 32 pages.

"We did it all on the slowest computer," Cheryl remembered. "We lived there. We never went home."

Troy said, "Candy Farlow (now retired but then the publisher, writer and bookkeeper) was asleep in the back room and Cheryl's hair was all sticking out when the papers came. We flew in a huddle to get them," Troy said.

The circulation was then only 9,000 strong. Now it's 13,000. Whew!

"We all went to Little Italy to celebrate," said Cheryl. "Then we realized we had to do it all over again. We stayed all night most nights for a long time."

"There were seven or eight of us in one little room. There was so much noise going on you couldn't hear anything," said Troy. "We had a phone booth in there and a great big wooden Indian statue." Cheryl remembers that a Superman cape was put in the phone booth.

I think they all must have transformed into caped crusaders.

Snoop and Scoop, brother and sister feline Post mascots, were just kittens back then. They are still just lounging about our desks and chairs, allowing visitors and customers to rub their heads.

In the more recent years since I've been here, we've had some wonderful friends. There's a woman we call the "Candy Lady" who brings us each a bag of chocolates, usually on Fridays, our publication day. We love her. She also makes delicious macaroni and cheese. A couple of months ago, we feasted on Smith Island cake that was delivered for our enjoyment, compliments of an advertiser. After all, it is all about the food.

Thanks to all for helping make us a success!

Supervisors Would Like Us To Think Their Sacrifice is Equal

At a time when they should be absolutely devastated to have to cut back on county health benefits, our supervisors continue to hold themselves above the rest of us.

It is with absolute incredulity that we heard the recent so-called compromise arrived at by Accomack County supervisors with respect to their health insurance. Whereas they had been receiving paid insurance for themselves and their families, now they will have to pay one-fourth of the cost.

Favoring this new arrangement and opposing elimination of spouse and family benefits were Supervisors Steve Mallette, Phil McCaleb, Grayson Chesser, Sandy Hart Mears and Ron Wolff.

How do they have the nerve?

In the same financial sweep, they forced county employees to start paying one-fourth of a SINGLE SUBSCRIBER cost. No assistance for spouse or family is available.

And don't even factor in school employees, who already were paying 20 percent of a single-subscriber premium.

In other words, the supervisors still have retained for themselves better health-insurance funding than they offer any employees, except the county attorney (the county administrator will no longer receive it), and if they didn't offer it to him, the law says they wouldn't be able to offer it to themselves. So, no altruism there.

We applaud Supervisor Donald Hart, who spearheaded the move to abolish the luxury family-inclusion plan and now says he is opting out of the entire plan for himself and his family. Said Hart, "After what the majority of the board did, I could not live with myself taking the benefit with employees unable to afford health insurance on their families."

On Jan. 29, 2003, long before this latest uproar, the Eastern Shore Post published a front-page story on the compensation which is paid to supervisors — including fully funded health insurance for themselves and their families.

At the time, there was no public outcry, no call for change, no righteous indignation.

Looks like it just might have taken a recession to activate the public's disgust.
