Fire Sweeps Bayview Office

By Linda Cicaira

About 50 firefighters from eight companies battled a blaze in a Bayview Circle office Wednesday that resulted from a lighting strike.

Cheriton Chief Eddie Stockton said the fire was reported at about 3:50 p.m. The three-story house is about two miles from town and was converted for business by owner Alice Coles about three years ago.

It took between 35 and 45 minutes to control the blaze, the chief said. Firefighters managed to contain the flames to the top floor. Stockton said it would cost about $100,000 to repair the building.

Initially, companies from Cheriton, Cape Charles, Eastville and Nassawadox were called to the scene. Stockton said more tankers were needed, so volunteers from Exmore, Painter, Wachapreague and Melfa also were alerted.

No one was in the office when the incident occurred and no firefighters were injured. "It was a very safe scene," Stockton said.

Crash Kills Shore Native

A 24-year-old Shore native was killed Saturday morning in a Virginia Beach crash.

According to police, 24-year-old Mathew Mason was speeding west down Shore Drive when he lost control of his 2001 Honda CBR motorcycle and went through a grassy median.

Mason hit a "Welcome to Virginia Beach" sign and then struck an east-bound Ford Taurus, police said. He was rushed to a local hospital where he died a short time later.

According to police, Mason was wearing a helmet at the time of the deadly wreck. Alcohol is not believed to have been a factor.

The crash remains under investigation by the Department's Fatal Accident Crash Team, with Officer Ted Walters as the lead investigator.

Born in Nassawadox, Mason was the son of Jack and Cindy Davis Mason of Onley and the grandson of Jean and Billy Davis of Onley and Anne and Jack Mason of Accomac.

What Businesses Does the Shore Need?

By Linda Cicaira

Accomack and Northampton county residents want more recreational opportunities to come to the area, according to those who recently participated in an Eastern Shore Post e-mail survey.

They also want daycare for their pets and their ailing or elderly family members, a 24-hour urgent-care facility and businesses that will bring jobs to the area.

Most said they are still waiting anxiously for Walmart to come to Onley. Others listed dozens of chain retail businesses including several upscale grocery stores. Residents said they favor a zoo, a firing range, a bagel shop and a public golf course.

Matt Hart of Wachapreague wants it all. His list includes a skydive center at the Accomack Airport, a concert hall that could offer plays and more, a theme park, an arcade, a bowling alley, a casino, a taxi service and a mall.

"I would LOVE to see a multiplex movie theater come to the Eastern Shore of Virginia," wrote Felicia Stratton-Ray of Wachapreague. "One of my favorite pastimes is going to the movies. I appreciate the theaters that we have here. But 'variety is the spice of life.' ... I am sure I'm not the only movie buff that would kill to catch a matinee with at least six movies to choose from ... without ... nightmare drives to and from Salisbury (Md.)."

"We need places for our young to go and have a good time," wrote Dottie Burger of Franktown. She also suggested a bowling alley.

Karen Downing of Parksley wants such a center to also have a video arcade, a basketball court, Ping-Pong tables and concession stands, big screen TVs and a "spacious room" for youth-related activities, retreats and meetings.

Downing said she wants the center to be family-oriented while keeping the young people from saying there's "nothing to do."

Georgette Tabor of Nassawadox said, "We need some sort of entertainment for everyone and in either county, it really doesn't matter. 'This would provide jobs for our young people during the summer months they are out of school with nothing to do but go to other areas in Maryland to spend their money,' she said.

Norma Spencer of Cheriton wrote, "I would be interested in any business that would provide jobs ... in Northampton County. We are in desperate need of an economic base. Our Board of Supervisors thinks you can make it on tourism, aquaculture and agriculture. All of these only provide seasonal jobs and the pay is not always the greatest - not enough to raise a family, buy a house and live like decent human beings."

~ Needed Businesses ~

“More than anything we need employers, not necessarily retailers,” wrote Jim West of Cheriton. “The government of Northampton County has never been business friendly and has never truly sought out to entice businesses to locate here.”

“We need several small to medium size businesses not one big one,” West continued. “If it were not for the bridge-tunnel and Bayshore Concrete, lower Northampton County workers, except school teachers and aquaculture workers, would have no options,” he wrote.

“The industrial park (that) Northampton county threw our money away on was a joke and so typical of our stupid county leadership,” West said. “They finally sold it for pennies to burden the citizens with even more debt. What good does it do the general population ... to push tourism as our primary objective? ... We need all the employers and development we can get and less control from the supervisors.”

Frank Moore of Onley said the Shore needs an urgent-care facility. It “would reduce inappropriate and expensive use of emergency room facilities by patients with no insurance or no primary care physician,” he wrote.

“A large university would be fun,” said Mary Graham of Parksley. “More wineries, some good restaurants (and) a medical college ... You always have to be careful what you wish for. Consequences are not always obvious.”

“How about a Sprint Car/Stock Car type race track (multi-use on Friday or Saturday night races?” wrote Paul Muhly of Parksley. “Just southeast of Melfa on the seaside at Racetrack Road & Keller Fairground Road is an unused racetrack. Just think of the home-built car cottage industry this might promote. Think mini Indy or a Watkins Glen venue,” he wrote.

Tony Picardi of the Belle Haven area suggested a small boat-building business modeled after Chesapeake Light Craft in Annapolis, Md., and the wooden boat school in Maine.

“Manufacture kits and build them here,” he said. “Give classes on building kits. ... Would spawn more kayak tourism. Employ local labor,” Picardi said.

Judith Grier of Onancock wants more choices when it comes to grocery shopping. “Competition is sorely needed to keep prices competitive and the selection of merchandise appealing and timely,” she said.

Added Laurie Swain of Onancock, “If the store had a salad/soup bar with entrée and dessert options I could pick up on my way home from work, I would be in grocery store heaven.”

“I’ll be happy just to see Walmart finally open,” wrote Patrick Belote of Onancock. “What I buy locally I’ll still buy locally. I just won’t wait to go to Pocomoke or Salisbury for what I use Walmart for. Also for the good of the Shore’s employment opportunities, I’d like to see even more hi-tech/aerospace opportunities evolving at Wallops,” he said.

Barbara M. Thackray said, “The greatest need that I see for Chincoteague Island residents ... is better public transportation. We have the STAR Transit bus, but it still takes two hours to get to Nassawadox hospital and pick-up sites are few. Most elderly people here rely on family ... to go shopping.” They “become housebound, particularly in bad weather.”

David Schwab of Cape Charles wrote, “Since I do not have a boat or personal watercraft, I would love to have the ability to rent one to take advantage of all the water here on the Shore.”

Rhonda P. Marsh, who works in Jamesville, said, “I’m afraid I am one of those citizens that would like to preserve our beautiful Eastern Shore. Sustainable growth is okay, but I’m a fan of the local art, businesses we have and would not like the bigger chains to take away from our quaint culture. I’d rather travel one hour to shop! A nice restaurant in the Exmore area would be nice,” Marsh added.

“We should be looking long and hard at what existing services should be cut, not what should be added,” wrote Sam Serio of Hallwood. “Government, even local government is bloated, slow, inefficient and corrupt in that it steals resources from individuals as well as small businesses.”

Tony Sacco of Capeville said Northampton has “three assets. We have a deep-water port, a highway (and a) railroad. I’d like gaming to come to Northampton. Off Track Betting (OTB) and a Mississippi-style river boat would bring people from Maryland, Norfolk, Virginia Beach, summer and winter tourists.”

Sacco also would like to see a “manufacturing mall selling designer labels ... jobs, jobs, jobs, revenue, revenue, revenue. And the best part, people come spend, and leave.”

In 2004, Forest Drummond of Eastern Shore Auto Body asked his customers to list the businesses they wanted. Among their wants were Popeye’s Chicken, Target, outlet stores, Arby’s, Chili’s, Lowe’s, Walmart and Value City. Those residents also said they wanted another new car dealer, restaurants, window tinting services and boat supplies.

Grandmother Donates Pony Tail

While the Chincoteague ponies were making their annual swim across Assateague Channel Wednesday, another charitable pony event was going on in Belle Haven.

LaWanna Wallace of Quinby was having her 11-inch ponytail chopped off for Locks for Love, an organization that provides wigs to children who have lost their hair as a result of medical conditions.

"It feels great," said Wallace. "It just takes a few seconds. It grows right back."

So far, the 58-year-old grandmother has donated her tresses for the cause three times. The most recent ponytail took her three years to grow.

Her quest began when she turned 50. Wallace learned about "some little girl" who donated her hair. She was convinced it wasn't something just the young could offer. Since then, Wallace has encouraged others to follow her lead.

"Older people can do it, too," she said.

"I get a run on them," Tammy Harley of Hair Country salon. "I can't say how many I've done."

Florida-based Locks for Love provides "hair-pieces to financially disadvantaged children in the United States and Canada under age 18 suffering from long-term medical hair loss from any diagnosis."

According to the Web site, www.locksoflove.org, "most of the children ... have lost their hair due to a medical condition called alopecia areata, which has no known cause or cure. The prostheses we provide help to restore their self-esteem and their confidence ... the children receive hair prostheses free of charge or on a sliding scale, based on financial need."

With one snip of the scissors (above), Tammy Harley removes two-years' worth of pony tail grown by LaWanna Wallace (right), who displays her resulting donation for Locks for Love.

Cape Charles Is Setting of New Book by Local Author

By Linda Cicaira

Bruce Brinkley of Cape Charles has done what many of us dream about.

He has merged his own childhood memories with observations of his now grown son's youthful adventures and created a book of fiction that can be enjoyed by all.

And to top it off, "The 'BE-BOP-A-LULA' Kid" is set in 1956 in the Eastern Shore of Virginia town where he lives. There's even a map of familiar streets and landmarks and a bay adventure.

"I wanted to write a ... coming of age book from a man's prospective, since most children's literature is written by women," Brinkley explained.

"After realizing I had no clue about how to write a book, I enrolled in a children's literature course" and began to read "more books about how to write a book." He added, "Oh yea, it ended up being a chick book."

Rueben, an American crow, narrates the story of "a boy and girl ... I've watched them all summer. I've flown above them as they moved about town and sailed overhead as they skimmed along the waters of the Chesapeake Bay. I've perched on their heads and shoulders. I've shared their meals and their most precious secrets. This story is my gift to you," Rueben states in the

By Cheryl Nowak

As an editor, I must admit that I was pleasantly surprised by the high quality of Brinkley's writing. Quite frankly, all too often the novels by new local writers which we are asked to review turn out to be little more than exercises in vanity by people who firmly believe "anyone can write."

Well, Brinkley proves the exception.

However, "The 'BE-BOP-A-LULA' Kid" is in desperate need of a good editing, particularly if it is purported to be a book for youngsters, who derive so much of their literary skills from reading properly written books. This book provides no such model to follow.

For example, Brinkley consistently punctuates and capitalizes dialogue incorrectly and often simply forgets to close a quote. Apostrophes are misplaced and tenses misused.

And the author needs to learn the difference between "loose" and "lose," "stationary" and "stationery," "its" and "it's" and "breath" and "breathe."

Brinkley cleverly gets around an author's perennial problem of "voice" — who can have access to all the characters so he or she can tell the story — by turning the narration over to a crow named Rueben (unorthodox spelling). However, Rueben repeatedly slips into the "omniscient" voice, commenting on what one character or another is thinking. That doesn't work with a narrator, let alone a crow.

Yet all of this is by way of saying that such sloppiness and fixable errors unnecessarily mar what is a well-written and interesting story.

As with his idol, "The 'BE-BOP-A-LULA' Kid" just needs a once-over with a fine-toothed comb.

novel's introduction.

The main character, Skeeter, is a native of Cape Charles. The name came from a boy who was a few years older than Brinkley, who recalled, "He had slicked back black hair and a real hot rod. I was so envious." But the actual kid is more like Brinkley was. "I did break my arm just like Skeeter, playing baseball ... on the last day of the school year. I walked home and my dad drove me into Norfolk to the bone doctor."

His best friend, Jill, is the new girl in town, a come-here tomboy from West Virginia who spits, smokes and cusses. "I've always loved the name Jill. I think it's sweet but it's slightly tart," Brinkley said.

"My goal is to have tweenagers, teenagers, or anyone else who reads it, to want to come visit the Eastern Shore and Cape Charles," said Brinkley. He is hopeful that readers will follow Skeeter's map and "visit the places where the kids and Rueben had their adventures. Who knows the other places on the Shore they could visit? Misty's home?"

Publishing it myself fit my needs," said Brinkley. "It was a great experience. I had a story to tell and I have tried to tell it well. So, I went through a company called Booksurge, owned by Amazon. I didn't want to spend the time or energy to go the old fashioned route."

Brinkley reminisced about the setting of his story. "My mom and I rode a bus from Little Creek to Cape Charles in 1953, then to New York City, then back again a week later. I had an antiques business in the '60s and often visited Chalmers in Cape Charles. I bought things from a man in Eastville who ate at Paul's Restaurant in Chertonton every day."

These days, Brinkley has a home inspection business and works a few days a week at a lighting store in Virginia Beach. He was helping to build condominiums several years ago when he and his wife visited Cape Charles for a weekend.

"She had an epiphany and believed her soul needed to live here," he said. "Our sons have their own homes and we decided to do something different and relocate. I'm sorry I didn't grow up in Cape Charles, but I got here as fast as I could."

Onancock
By Linda Cicoira

Onancock Town Council hired an engineering firm Monday night to perform a utility rate study.

Officials said they need the $5,000 study so they can better negotiate fees being sought by Accomack County. Josh Gliptis of Davis, Bowen and Friedel of Salisbury, Md., said, "Basically what we would do is look at costs and revenues."

"I completely support getting a third party ... to back us up," said Councilman Kris LaMontagne. It's "a better way to sell our services" to "bring more money to the town." He said the town needs rates based on statewide methods that would be "above reproach."

"When doing rate analysis before, we came up with three different analyses," said Councilwoman Maphis Oswald. "Would this not be a fourth?"

Town Manager Sandy Manter said she is "hoping this would be truer." The funds will come from the wastewater budget. Manter also said she learned from Accomack Director of Public Works Stewart Hall that the county is interested in a bulk rate and there is another company that wants to supply those services. "That makes it all the more important to get numbers," she said.

In other business, Councilman Travis Bradley announced that a 135-foot U.S. Navy amphibious landing craft would offer tours and exercises during Harborfest on Sept. 11 and 12. He also said a new design for the event's T-shirt would be introduced this year.

Council transferred the fire station property (building and 3.8 acres) to Onancock Fire Department. It would revert to the town if the fire department ever stops using it. Council also discussed the possibility of Accomack's Public Safety Department establishing offices there.

CAPITAL LETTERS

*By Del.
Lynwood Lewis*

The next event of significance at the state level will be on

Aug. 19. Gov. Kaine has called a Special Session to deal with the problems created in the aftermath of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, which requires the actual appearance by state laboratory technicians in criminal prosecutions rather than the admission of a certificate from the technician. This is obviously causing some great problems with criminal prosecutions throughout the state and the governor has called a Special Session so we can revise Virginia's laws to conform with the Supreme Court decision.

Aug. 19 was chosen because several of us will be in be at the Capital for the annual meeting of the "Money Committees." I serve on the House Finance Committee which will meet with the House Appropriations Committee and the Senate Finance Committee to hear an address from Gov. Kaine as to the status of revenue receipts. It should come as no surprise that those receipts are low and have fallen short of the estimates we used to construct last year's budget. This will probably require further budget reductions when the legislature meets in January. Gov. Kaine has already instructed all state agencies to trim their budgets in advance of the legislature's convening. At present it appears we will be approximately $300 million short of our revenue projection mark. I will provide another report after the meeting.

Virginia did receive some significant good news last week when CNBC selected the commonwealth as the best state in which to do business. Last year, CNBC ranked Virginia number 2. In addition, U.S. News and World Report has declared Virginia one of the five best states in which to start a new business, specifically because of our low tax burden and our business-friendly environment. We have been designated by Forbes.com as the best state in which to do business (2006-08).

Our broadband project continues and it is truly exciting to see the activity along the railroad right of way. This project will provide our rural area with the infrastructure in which to fully participate in the 21st century Virginia economy. In addition, I attended the groundbreaking for the Orbital Sciences Project at the Mid-Atlantic Regional Space Port. The economic impact on the area is fantastic. Projections are that the peripheral economic impact of this project on the Shore will be very significant.

I am also organizing a wastewater summit which I hope will bring all the players in wastewater issues under one roof at one time to provide information to all localities and other interested parties. It is my hope that our localities will use this opportunity to intelligently plan for the infrastructure needed for continued economic develop

While these are certainly troubled economic times, I think we can all take some comfort in the fact that our little corner of the commonwealth continues to be confronted with tremendous opportunities for the future.

It continues to be a privilege to represent the 100th District. I am on the Shore in Accomac full-time and can be reached by mail at P.O. Box 760, Accomac, VA 23301, by telephone at 787-1094 (toll-free - (866) 787-1094), and by e-mail at Delllewis@house.state.va.us

Three Make Eagle Scout

Three members of Boy Scouts of America Troop 306, sponsored by Cheriton United Methodist Church, were advanced to the rank of Eagle Scout during an honor court ceremony Saturday, July 18.

With approximately 50 people in attendance, Jeremy Harrissmith, Henry "Trae" Jones III, and Morgan Kempster were honored for their community service, leadership and diligence in acquiring the 21 merit badges needed to qualify as an Eagle Scout.

Introduced by master of ceremony Walter Hopkins, Eastern Shore native and keynote speaker Capt. Will King, USN-RET, noted the three significant projects completed by the scouts respectively: a garden labyrinth and campfire circle at Oyster's World Healing Institute, a covered picnic area at Exmore's Rotary rest stop, and renovation of a Sunday school room at the sponsor church.

Also contributing to the event, U.S. Coast Guard personnel from the station in Cape Charles provided ceremonial flag and honor guard duties.

Troop 306 Scout Leader Kurt Melow read congratulatory letters from noteworthy Virginians — U.S. Sen. Mark Warner, U.S. Congressman Glenn Nye, and Gov. Timothy Kaine.

Announcements

In Loving Memory
Pugsley

June 26, 2006-July 24, 2009

I am so grateful for the short time that you were here. You were my little clown; just looking at your pretty, bugged-eyed face made me smile. You only had love to share with anyone and anything that crossed your path, even baby bunnies. While I am so very sad that you are no longer with me, I feel blessed that I now have another angel in heaven watching over me. Give everyone a kiss from me.
Love, Momma

I would like to say THANK YOU to everyone at Eastern Shore Animal Hospital who cared for my beloved Pugsley.

Happy 5th Birthday to Keith & Keyasha on Aug. 3

LOVE, MOMMY & DADDY, TYSHA & KEDA, SISTERS JABRIAH, LAVERSA, NAIESHA, UNIQUE, TYKEA, SPIDERMAN, EMENY, TYREE BROTHER J, UNCLE MARIO, LIL' CAL, AUNT LEISHA, & GRANDMA, WHO HAVE ALWAYS BEEN BY THEIR SIDE

In Loving Memory of Wesley Smith
Oct. 19, 1968
-Aug. 5, 2000

*They say there is a reason,
They say time will heal
But neither time nor reason*

Will change the way we feel

For no one knows the heartache behind our smiles

You're wonderful to think of, but so hard to be without.

We miss you Mom, Edward & Lisa

From Pillar to Post

By Angie H. Crutchley

My first memories of Walter Cronkite are associated with evening boredom. My family would gather around the living room and listen to "The Most Trusted Man in America" squeeze a day's worth of information into less than an hour. I would set on Pop-Pop's lap in my My Little Pony ankle-length nightgown and slowly doze off, whining how I wanted to watch "The Incredible Hulk." I was a toddler and I know now that was their strategy to get my hyperactive body to bed. Little did I know how much that amazing newsman would shape my path later in life.

It wasn't until my teens that I removed myself from my egocentric bubble and became fascinated with the rest of the world. The more I learned about the world, the more I longed for a trusted source to tell me what I had missed. Every now and again there would be a special about major events of the 20th century and they would use Cronkite's reporting for the majority of the events. Cronkite was like a trusted grandfather, always welcome in America's living room. That strong, guttural voice reported everything from the East Coast black-out and the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr., to the moon landing and the rebuilding of nations.

It wasn't his trusted accuracy alone that made me want to become a reporter, but also the way he gave all sides a chance.

Cronkite guided America from black and white to color televisions and from typewriters to computers.

I obviously wasn't alive for much of his early career, as he was 62 when I was born, but that only made me appreciate "The Man" more. I've been able to watch the Vietnam War and mankind's first steps on the moon, and share collective cries and rage and laughter with the rest of the world. Cronkite's gift was that he could bring out the human element in just about any story, be it feature or straight news.

I've always felt that music is a universal connector and when Cronkite went to a Grateful Dead concert, he earned massive respect from a younger audience, who may not have always trusted "anyone over 30." Not every grandfather would give a 15-minute rift by Bob Weir a fair chance. Not only did Cronkite grow to love the music, but the closeted "Deadhead" developed a close friendship with several members of the band, taking them out on his sailboat. I like to think of Jerry and Walter having a little Johnny Walker Black and sharing their own war stories.

Unfortunately, the media has spent so much time harassing the family of the late Michael Jackson, that they've virtually passed up the passing of one of their own. Although, the celebrity-obsessed media of today probably left a bad taste in Cronkite's mouth, he still would have given them a chance to tell their side.

And so I end my ovation to the 92 years of prime-time life that inspired a world of journalists, including this girl. Walter Cronkite was not just a great American newsman, but a great American ... and that's the way it was.

Salvation Army Says 'Thanks'

Dear Editor:

The Accomack Unit of the Salvation Army would like to thank everyone who has helped our local chapter. Thank you, Edwards' Seafood in Onley, who graciously opened their front for a very successful BBQ and yard sale. Also thank you to all the volunteers who always help make our job easier.

We would like to thank Calvary Bible Church in Accomac for all their support. They have given an opportunity for the Salvation Army to open an office for us to be available to people in need. We especially thank Rev. Gary Williams who has worked tirelessly giving help whenever it is needed.

Brenda Holden, Chairperson
Salvation Army- Accomack Service Unit

Principal Holland Earns Support

Dear Editor:

I attended the recent meeting of the Accomack County School Board during which supporters and critics of Chincoteague Combined School principal Chris Holland spoke. The theme of most of the comments was that school safety is number one and a quiet learning environment is needed for students to get an education.

In the hall after the meeting, several parents agreed they were there of their own accord and to protect their school by defending Mr. Holland; no one asked them to be there.

When Mr. Holland was at Parksley Middle School, I heard a teacher say she did not care for him as he was always telling people what to do and he was strict. After Mr. Holland was transferred to Arcadia High School, she said she wished Mr. Holland was back since the school had been quieter and safer. I have heard several parents from down the county say they would love for their kids to go to Chincoteague as they would feel their kids are safe under Mr. Holland.

I can assure that Mr. Holland's number one goal is for all students to be safe. He travels to all school events possible to make sure students are safe and he works to make sure the school is always clean and neat and even picks up trash there on weekends after events.

Mr. Holland gives many, many hours night and day to make sure the school and students are safe.

Yes, Mr. Holland is a strict principal, but one has to be to keep a school safe in today's time.

Bill Wolfram, Accomac

Obama Gov't. Not Transparent

Dear Editor:

The nearly $800 billion Economic Stimulus Package was forced through Congress before anyone had an opportunity to read the bill, including the American people and virtually all of our representatives in Congress. Only 6 percent of this money has been spent, most of it going to supporters of President Obama to rescue states and state programs that are bankrupt because of overspending and fraud. Is this the kind of ethical and transparent government Obama promised us?

The Cap and Trade Bill — which should be called the Energy Tax Bill because it will tax all forms of energy — was recently passed by eight votes before it was entirely written. Most Americans, even today, have no idea that such legislation threatens them.

Today we are faced with another presidential rush to pass an extensive Government Health Care Plan that even President Obama has not read. The bill is already over 1,000 pages, promising to cost at least another trillion dollars. President Obama wants this bill passed and signed before Congress and the American people have full access to the specifics of it and what implications it would have on their lives and their health care. Transparency, representative government? I don't think so.

Barack Obama, with the help of the news media (who protect and promote his extreme leftist agenda), is rapidly changing our Constitutional Republic into a Venezuelan style Banana Republic.

Christopher W. Newman, Accomac
