'Is It Chilly in Here Or Is It Me?'

Hanna Blows By

Residents on the Eastern Shore of Virginia were spared last weekend when Tropical Storm Hanna brought less rainfall and winds than were originally anticipated.

Farm Manager Tommy Custis of the Agricultural Experiment Station in Painter said only 1.34 inches of rain were measured there.

"We probably could have used more," he said. "The highest gusts we had back here were 40 miles per hour. We have a weather station right in the middle of the farm."

Spokeswoman Betty Flowers of NASA Wallops Flight Facility reported, "We did not have any flooding of any type on Wallops Island." Total rain there for Friday and Saturday was 1.23 inches. "The peak wind recorded at 3 p.m. Saturday was 54 miles per hour," she said.

Police Capt. Eddie Spencer of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, where traffic was restricted because of gales, said, "We didn't get much rain — mostly just wind, 45-50 miles per hour, with gusts of 60."

Eastern Shore Has Its Share of Homeless

By Linda Cicaira

Some rest behind stores that are closed for the night. They camp under bridges, set up housekeeping in the woods or sleep on the beach. Others catch 40 winks in vehicles or on porches.

They are the homeless of the Eastern Shore of Virginia. And their plight has increased in the last 10 months as a result of the poor economy, according to Laura Thomas, client services coordinator for the Eastern Shore Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

Their already desperate situation got worse when the cost of gasoline increased and other prices rose.

Some are natives of Accomack and Northampton counties who have been forced for one reason or another to move in with relatives.

Many are uprooted weekly. They go from an aunt's cottage to an uncle's house to a cousin's apartment and then back to their parents' or grandmother's place. They feel lucky to have a roof over their heads, if only temporarily.

Others are transients who land here while looking for a community that will welcome them.

They know no distinctions. They are black and white. They are Hispanic. They are male and female. They are single, married, separated, divorced and widowed. They are children. They are disabled. They are victims of domestic violence.

Abandoned houses "with no electricity and no windows" are often used as refuges by the homeless. "It's worse than living in a tent," said Eleanor Drewniak, the coalition's director. It's also dangerous since the building could collapse, she added.

"There's no stability," said Thomas. "Their children's clothes are spread out" at various family members' houses. "It's frightening to see how these people live," she added, describing a rundown shack in Accomack County that has electricity via an extension cord.

Twelve people live there at times, including six to eight toddlers, she said. "There are not actual bedrooms. Couches line the walls. If you get home early enough to get one, you will have a place to sleep."

Cardboard and plastic cover the glassless windows, explained Thomas. Rugs conceal holes in the floor boards. The occupants use buckets for waste because there are no toilets nor bathing facilities. She said used sanitary products are tossed in the yard. Police had been called there repeatedly for assault complaints.

Another coalition worker remarked that when she visited the house Monday to check on "residents," a man was watching an x-rated movie while several children played in the same room.

Thomas said when she went to a similar Northampton County house, mice and rats were eating off the floor with such normalcy that the two children who lived there were oblivious.

The majority of the people who wind up in the coalition shelter are women and children. Sixty-seven people were given a temporary home there from Jan. 1 to June 30 of this year to escape domestic violence. Thirty-five were children.

The number of local homeless changes all the time and is hard to determine since many don't seek help or are too mobile to be included in a count.

Domestic violence is one aspect of the issue. Husbands, wives, sons and daughters are beating their loved ones, said Drewniak. The problem, she added, isn't new nor is it isolated to the Shore.

They can be the victims of violence from an "intimate partner" or from elder abuse. The latter dilemma affects women and men equally, although neither is reported as often for men, said Drewniak.

"He's not even going to think he has an option," the director said of the abused father. For the husband, the story is kept secret because "macho isn't admitting your wife is hitting you and they've been taught not to hit back."

"Everyone who comes to us is homeless ... due to a domestic violence situation of one kind or another," Drewniak said.

Some leave home only to repeatedly return. On average, the abused person will do that nine times

Homeless Woman Finds Refuge and a New Outlook

Carolyn Collins uses her pretty teeth to smile broadly. She's a little camera shy and wrongly thinks the look makes her cheeks appear chubby.

But, she's gaining self-confidence, a bit of an accomplishment for someone who was homeless a few weeks ago.

The 50-something New York native recounted recently having nowhere to bathe or get in out of the weather.

She slept in a car lot after it closed, the whole time fearing that someone would think she was trying to steal a vehicle when all she needed was some shut-eye.

Another night was spent on an apartment balcony. Spiders and other bugs shared her space.

So having her photo taken was a small feat compared to what else she's managed to overcome. Besides, she's too busy counting her blessings to worry about such things, now that she's being helped by the Eastern Shore Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

Collins came to the area to start life anew. Behind her was an abusive relationship in New Jersey, compounded by the grief ever present from the loss of her adult son.

Still, she managed to hold high hopes for the future and moved to Accomack County to live with a relative.

Soon she discovered that the family had problems that Collins couldn't ignore.

"The husband of my family member and I did not get along," she said. "It was their way of living and mine. The two clashed ... a lot of things I didn't approve. There was violence going on."

When Collins spoke up in defense of her relative, the man became threatening to her. "I knew it was time to leave," she said. "My family member wanted to reach out to me and he didn't want her to."

Collins never will stop crying about some of the sad moments in her life. But, with the help of the coalition she has gotten a job, is temporarily staying at the agency's shelter and has optimism again.

"I never felt so welcomed by people who don't even know me," said Collins. "They took me in and they became the angels in my life. A beautiful room and a comfortable bed. And I don't have to worry about being dirty."

She advises others in a violent situation: "It's time to go the very first time."

Collins praised the coalition. "I never met such a beautiful bunch of women," she said. "It is a blessing in my life. It can be a blessing in someone else's."

An additional bonus is that she's made some new friends. "We all look out for each other at the shelter. We talk about our problems. We compare stories and work on healing together," Collins said.

The coalition has a 24-hour hotline. Call 787-1329 or toll-free 877-787-1329.

before he or she finally leaves for good, Drewniak said.

"By the time we get them, the parents have had it," said Thomas, referring to the young women who return to their abusers.

"We can only be here for people who ask for help," said Drewniak. "When you say 'shelter,' a lot of people think a metal cabinet and a cot."

However, the coalition's duplex is much nicer than that. "We keep it as homey as we can from microwave to washer and dryer and whatever they need," Drewniak said.

More than 3,300 nights of shelter were provided by the coalition in the first six months of 2008. Of those, 2,331 shelter nights were offered to children. The facility can take in 18, not including toddler beds and cribs, said Thomas.

Drewniak said the coalition has an active caseload of 1,200. Many on that list have been on it for years.

A breakdown shows that they are equally divided among whites, blacks and Hispanics. Drewniak said some of the men in the Hispanic families stopped the beatings after being told their behavior was illegal. Many are afraid of being deported, she said.

The director added that 75 percent of the domestic violence victims are women between 20 and 50 years old, 23 percent are women 50 and older, with the remaining 2 percent being men of all ages.

Most Recent AYP Scores Mixed

By Linda Cicaira

A recent story in the Eastern Shore Post gave Adequate Yearly Progress standards set by the Virginia Department of Education for the 2007 term. However, the most up-to-date figures were actually released a few days later for the 2008 term.

In that report, Accomack County as a whole made AYP. In addition, six of the 11 schools in Accomack County met the standards, including Accawmacke and Chincoteague Elementary, Chincoteague and Nandua High, Pungoteague Elementary and Tangier Combined schools.

Those county schools not meeting the standard were Arcadia High, Arcadia and Nandua Middle, and Kegotank and Metompkin Elementary schools.

"When a school does not make AYP, they are not a failing school or a failing division," said Sandra Drummond, coordinator of assessment and accountability for Accomack Schools. "We have been one or two students away. It is heart breaking. But it is what it is."

Drummond explained that Arcadia High School did not meet the state graduation rate standard of 61 percent. She said Arcadia was at 60.11 percent. "If a student transfers out, you take a hit ... our kids are so transient." In addition, students who get a modified standard diploma or a GED do not count toward the graduation rate, Drummond said.

Arcadia Middle School did not meet the standard in "the area of math." Drummond said the grade was missed by four of 528 students.

At Kegotank Elementary School, the progress report was off by "4 percent in one of seven subgroups," Drummond said. English was the problem in the previous year. However, this time, "they made great strides" in that subject, she said.

At Metompkin Elementary School, every benchmark but one was met, said Drummond. The school did not make AYP because one subgroup of seven failed English.

That was the same subject that caused Nandua Middle to miss AYP. Drummond said that school made 27 of the 29 benchmarks, and missed by 1 percent in one group and 2 percent in another.

Drummond stressed that Pungoteague Elementary School had "a very good showing for each subgroup. They were very strong, many times exceeding the benchmark."

"Next year the school division will be shooting for a 4 percent gain," Drummond said. That means 81 percent of the students must meet the standards for reading and 79 percent for math in every subgroup. "There's a lot of work to achieve a 4 percent gain," she added.

State standards call for achieving 100 percent passage in all areas by the 2013-14 school year.

Ninety-five percent of the students must participate, she said. "We do everything we can to keep our participation at 100 percent. Occasionally, it is beyond our control."

Chief Apostle Patricia Wharton-Wright "The Apostle of Love"

What exactly is an Apostle of Love? Well, if you ask Patricia Wharton-Wright, she will tell you very simply "a servant". That is all she claims to be, a servant of the Lord. She is following in some pretty big steps, none other than Jesus himself, who said to his followers, "The greatest among you is a servant". Now Christ's words are as true as the day he first said them, because she has become great as a "true servant" of the Lord for the people.

Chief Apostle Wright has spent the last decade planting outreach vineyards and covering independent ministry pastors all across Delmarva. She is the founder and senior pastor of New Life Christian Outreach Vineyard, located in downtown Onley, Virginia, a multi-cultural, non-denominational, spirit-filled, power-filled ministry, who will be celebrating their General Conference & Retreat Sept. 13, 14, and 19, 20, 21. She is also the founder and Chief Apostle of the Disciples of God Assemblies, a Love Covenant Fellowship, linking together independent churches and independent pastors. The fellowship currently hosts over 20 vineyards from Alabama to New Jersey.

Apostle Patty, as she is affectionately called, is known as the Apostle of Love, also because of her untiring efforts spanning all across the United States. She travels the lecture circuit, conferencing, preaching and teaching the practical gospel. She can be heard on some occasions referring to her ministry as one where she has been sent to deliver the "crack babies". The ones who have fallen through the cracks of life, she goes, digs them out with no regard for herself and speaks hope and life into them. She mentors them to handle their life, finances, education, and spiritual maturity. They begin to be productive citizens, becoming involved in their communities. Apostle Patty is projecting a bright light and a resounding sound in as many directions as the Shore will allow her to. She is a true beacon of Hope and a witness of God's love for mankind. It won't be long before she crosses over international water, being that her itinerary has a trip planned. She is a true Apostle in action.

Now she is also a true pioneer in many things, establishing the only Christian Arcade for toddlers on the Shore, appropriately called "Word of Fun", located at the "Wright Place Now" in downtown Onley. She is the owner and main designer of a bridal shop "Pa-Lo-Rei Designs", Par-Tic-U-Lar fashions, a lingerie shop sized 0-10X, a fashion jewelry shop, a Christian book store, a toy store with toys all under $9.99, and a full service Wig Salon "Tonya Got Your Hair Done". She is a successful entrepreneur.

Besides owning and operating several small businesses throughout the years, she is also an author. Apostle Patty has two books, numerous tapes, and CD's you will find conveniently located on the shelves at the "Newzy Disciple", her book-store located in downtown Onley at "The Wright Place Now."

Chief Apostle Patricia Wharton-Wright is a native of the Eastern Shore of Virginia, born in Exmore and educated in Accomack, higher learning Eastern Shore Community College, and Virginia State University. Yes, the Eastern Shore is where she proudly calls home. She is the Eldest daughter of Loraine & Richard Kellam of Accomack, Virginia. Mother of Carlos, James, Corei', Lenell, Kelvin and a host of spiritual sons and daughters.

The Eastern Shore celebrates Chief Apostle Patricia Wharton-Wright!
We love you and celebrate your up and coming Love Conference!

Planning Commission Recommends Land Use Map to Supervisors

By Ron West

The Northampton County Joint Local Planning Commission conducted a series of public hearings at its meeting last Wednesday, leading to approval of the Future Land Use Map (FLUM) which is being developed in conjunction with the County Zoning Map and Comprehensive Plan.

Speaking for Hungar's Beach Subdivision, Demetrius Leones urged the commission not to list that development as agricultural. He noted that the area was developed over 40 years ago. The lands adjacent to the subdivision are listed as agricultural.

Tom Noonan requested that the Downing Beach Subdivision be listed as an existing cottage community, as is neighboring Silver Beach. Noonan stated that the development is consistent with other cottage communities in the county and dates to 1968.

Eileen Kirkwood requested that the site of her business, north of Eastville, be changed from agricultural to commercial. Kirkwood quizzed the commissioners on why she has been paying business taxes for years on the property when they want to list it as agricultural. "What should I do, tear down the old brick home along the highway and start raising pigs?" she asked. "You don't want subdivisions or businesses along Route 13. This county is not business friendly. We're creating our own poverty area by not encouraging businesses in the county. When a business closes or is torn down and it's listed as being in an agricultural zone, what can be rebuilt there?"

Rev. Debbie Bryant of Shorter's Chapel in Bridgetown urged the commissioners not to rezone the property that the church sits on as agricultural. Bryant noted that such downzoning would affect the ability to rebuild or add on if needed. Bryant noted that Bridgetown is a hamlet, not an agricultural area. In addition, Bryant stated that the residents of Treherneville want their community to be listed as Village 1 rather than Village 2. The difference affects what can be done by right in the community.

Irene Morris pressed the commissioners not to rezone her business agricultural.

Planning Commissioner Sandra Benson noted that the FLUM is designed to discourage new businesses along the Route 13 corridor.

Deborah Campbell of Silver Beach urged the commissioners not to rezone areas where it could detract from surrounding homes. Campbell said she wants protection for homes in existing cottage communities.

Following the public hearing, the commissioners voted to forward the FLUM to the Board of Supervisors for possible action at its Sept. 9 meeting.

In other business, a request by John and Amy Nottingham of Cheriton to allow the operation of a wholesale and retail business on their property met with resistance by some commissioners. The property is currently zoned as agricultural and would need a special-use permit to allow for food sales inside the recently constructed building.

County planning staff members stated opposition to the permit in their report. A report by the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) indicated that there is an issue with access from Lankford Highway, and a Health Department report indicated that the current deep well could handle up to 25 people on the site based on it being used as a packing shed. A lengthy discussion ensued over what type of seafood could be sold at the location. On a split decision of 5-4 (Commissioners Mary Miller, Dave Fauber, Peter Kafigian, and Donna Bozza voting against), the commission agreed to support and forward Nottingham's request to the Board of Supervisors.

Planning Director Will Be Guest Speaker

Accomack County Supervisor Ron Wolff will hold his monthly constituents' meeting Monday, Sept. 15, at 7 p.m.

The session, being held at Wolff's Sandwich Shoppe in Atlantic, will feature guest speaker Jim McGowan, the director of planning for Accomack County.

Community Notes

Chincoteague By Angie H. Crutchley

A rough and tumble crowd showed up for last Tuesday's Chincoteague Town Council meeting.

Nearly half the meeting was devoted to an open forum during which almost 30 speakers from Ocean Breeze voiced their disdain with the "abhorrent roads," as one citizen put it, that run throughout the trailer community.

Many on the council, including Mayor

Jack Tarr, again explained that the roads do not belong to the town. "The council has tried numerous times to buy the roads from Mr. Eddie Tull," the mayor said, "but to no avail." Tarr once again suggested that the Ocean Breeze citizens form an association and get a good attorney to deal with the issue.

Councilwoman Nancy Conklin explained that she, too, lives on a privately owned road. "The town doesn't take care of my road either," she said. "We've pooled our money ourselves and have had our road paved twice, even if it takes $600 to $900 per home. Sometimes one person doesn't want to chip in and we pay their part, and that's just the way it is if you want to drive on a nice road."

Many in the Ocean Breeze group continued to speak while others were discussing their case. Tarr had to use the gavel several times and politely ask them to speak one at a time.

"We'd like to help you and I don't mind you all hollering at us, but this is a federal issue," explained Tarr as the topic turned to the postal delivery in Ocean Breeze. Bob Callahan, a citizen of Ocean Breeze, has been trying to coordinate everyone in an effort to receive postal boxes onsite. "Eddie Tull and the Post Office signed an agreement for a site at the intersection of Seagull and Seashore," Callahan said. "We have six or eight people asking citizens for a donation to raise money for the construction of eight inches of concrete that needs to be poured by federal mandate."

In other business, Lt.jg. Mark Merriman of the Chincoteague Coast Guard (USCG) station presented an update. He is back with his family for his second tour of duty on Chincoteague; his first was from 1990-94. He said he will be here for at least three years.

"There have been a few changes at the station," Merriman reported. "We have gone from Coast Guard Group Eastern Shore to Sector Hampton Roads. It has allowed us to shift watch now in Portsmouth. When a mariner makes a distress call, it will go directly to Portsmouth. If the mariner is in our waters, we will go out on the distress call. It will basically work the same way as before, but with advanced technology."

Merriman said that the Coast Guard is aware that Light 29 is still lying down, and that they hope to get to it as soon as possible.

Council awarded a one-time donation of $5,000 for the new Little League ballfield to be built between Chincoteague Community Center and the elementary school.

Councilman John N. Jester Jr. announced that this is National Preparedness month. "We want to be sure the whole community is prepared for a catastrophic event," he said. "Does everyone have water, non-perishable food, flashlights, and battery-powered radios?" The town's hurricane training exercise, scheduled for last Saturday, was canceled, ironically enough, due to Hurricane Gustav. Many of the supplies which were to be distributed had been sent to Louisiana, according to Tarr.

Police Chief Eddie Lewis announced that the police department is going to bring back the Haunted Forest that is held the last three weeks of October. Council voted to let the department and its volunteers use the Halley Whealton Smith Trail for the event that raises money for the community. "We really need volunteers," said Lewis. "It takes 60 people per night to run the event. We could use people in all areas, from building props, to food, to being characters, and if anyone is interested ... please contact the police department or attend the Sept. 12th meeting at 11 a.m. at the town hall."

David Rigby, president of Waste Water Management (WWM) from Falls Church, Va., gave his sixth presentation regarding a proposed central sewer system for the town. Rigby examined the differences between ocean discharge and deep-well injection, saying that the state prefers ocean discharge. Rigby also went over estimated costs as a whole and broken down per household. The entire project is estimated to cost around $40 million.

At last Wednesday's work session of Cape Charles Town Council, Town Planner Tom Bonadeo answered many of the questions that had been raised at an August public meeting concerning the proposed Cape Charles Harbor project.

The proposed six condominiums and a 120-unit hotel reaching 45 feet or more have some town residents concerned that the project would overshadow existing structures along Mason Avenue. To counter this, Bonadeo noted, the project would be placed farther back away from Mason Avenue and it might be possible to place the higher parts of the structure to the rear, thus giving the portion facing Mason Avenue a lower appearance.

By right, the Harbor District allows marinas, hotels, docks, restaurants, and retail outlets up to 2,500 square feet. Bonadeo noted that the project meets some of these criteria. With respect to the height issue, it was pointed out that some of the structures on the south side of the harbor exceed the 40-foot height allowance for the town.

Raised in August was the possibility that the property is an important archeological site. Bonadeo noted that with the exception of the remnants of buried railroad parts, the site likely holds very little of archeological interest.

Mayor Dora Sullivan indicated that the council would not be making a decision regarding the conditional-use permit for the project at the work session and that the next council meeting is set for Sept 11.

Car Care Gas-Savings Tips You Can Use

With the high cost of gas draining wallets, many pick-up truck owners are feeling the burn at the pump. While some consumers may opt to purchase a hybrid vehicle, many drivers depend on their pick-up for everyday functionality. Since the majority of truck owners won't be lining up to down-size to a hybrid car any time soon, there are several things they can do to start saving gas money today.

One of the most overlooked items that instantly improves your gas mileage is getting a routine engine tune-up. If your vehicle is running at peak performance, your gas tank will too. Keeping your engine tuned can increase gas mileage by up to 4 percent. Fall is a great time to do a routine maintenance check before the cold weather sets in and we're less likely to look under the hood or take our vehicle to the shop.

According to the Federal Trade Commission, here are a few tips to improve your truck's gas mileage.

Oil It Up: As most auto-body technicians will tell you, changing your oil is one of the most overlooked items. Clean oil reduces wear caused by friction between moving parts and removes harmful substances from the engine, ensuring your engine will run at peak performance.

Keep it Clean: By keeping your air, oil, and fuel filters clean, you can increase gas mileage by 10 percent. You also can benefit from keeping the interior and exterior of your vehicle clean, since extra weight in your vehicle and dirt on the outside cause additional drag.

Pump It Up: Check your tires to make sure they're properly inflated and aligned. Proper inflation can improve gas mileage up to 3 percent. If you don't know what the right pressure is for your tires and vehicle, consult your owner's manual.

Overhaul Your Drive Style: It's hard to make changes, but if you really want to see increased gas mileage it's suggested you avoid unnecessary idling, revving your engine and slamming on the brakes. It is recommended that you stop and start gently, use cruise control when possible and combine errands or carpool.

Roll On Down the Road: The easiest and most rewarding step you can take to see immediate gas mileage improvement is to install a truck bed cover on your pick-up. A truck bed cover, also known as a tonneau cover, will reduce drag, making your vehicle more aerodynamic at high speeds. They are also great for protecting your gear from the elements and improving the look of your truck.

There are several different tonneau cover options available on the market today, such as the roll-up cover. Made of heavy-duty, double-coated vinyl, the roll-up cover installs quickly and easily with a clamp-on installation and is designed specifically to fit your truck. When not in use, the cover can be rolled up behind the cab and never has to be removed when hauling larger items. It is estimated that you can save over $275 within the first year of installing a cover on your truck bed.

Richard F. of Bismarck, N.D., knows firsthand the benefits of having a roll-up tonneau cover on his truck.

"I put on many highway miles during the year and in talking to other owners with a similar truck without a box cover, I am amazed at the savings in gas mileage I'm getting with my cover," he said.

"I noticed a half-mile per gallon increase in the first 30 miles," says Michael H. of Grapevine, Texas. "Looks good, too."

Jimmie Johnson is really going into the Chase looking good. Just

By J.J. and Troy Justis

when Kyle Busch thought he was on a roll, here comes Jimmie. Richmond just wasn't the same when it wasn't under the lights, but at least they got the race in on the weekend for the fans.

Backseat Drivers:

His View: On to the Chase – my man is in! We'll just have to wait and see if he can climb in the standings.. Just so we don't have to endure anyone climbing the fences it will be okay.

Her View: Congrats to all the Chase drivers. Especially to Denny Hamlin who seems to love that third place spot. I hope he can improve that by a couple of positions throughout the next 10 races. Hubbie is breathing a sigh of relief now that Jeffie is in. It was touch and go there for awhile.

Next Race:

Sept. 14 – Sylvania 300 – New Hampshire Motor Speedway –
ABC at 1 p.m., PRN and WESR

Dr. Crowley's 71-Year Ministry Continues

By Betty Taylor

It was early winter of 1922 and in a little house on Tarr Lane on Chincoteague, a woman climbed the stairs heavy-hearted. She knew she was carrying a child and she was remembering her doctor's dire warnings about becoming pregnant again. A woman who fasted and prayed, she went to her little washstand at the top of the stairs and knelt as she had so many times before. Asking for God's will for her life and for her unborn child, her heart heard the voice of the Lord, "Fear not. You are carrying a male child and he will be a worker for me". When her son was born they attended Pilgrim Holiness Church on the mainland and young Raymond felt the Lord's call upon his life at an early age. When Miss Lula Phillips, his sixth grade teacher, asked her class what they would like to be when they grew up, Raymond replied that he wanted to be a preacher.

At the age of 15 he began his ministry which has flourished now for seventy-one years. Dr. Crowley continues to preach whenever and wherever he is asked. Pastor John Thorne of the Chincoteague Church of God has great admiration and respect for his mentor and affectionately refers to him sometimes as resembling the "Energizer Bunny". Dr. Crowley was instrumental in Pastor Thorne coming to Chincoteague 10 years ago and continues to support his ministry.

Dr. Crowley is remarkably humble and it was not easy to get him to talk about himself. He prefers to talk about the formation of the Chincoteague Church of God. When Rev. Clarence Abbott came in 1937 for a tent revival on North Main Street, 75 people received the Baptism of the Holy Spirit at that revival. A new church was formed at a little house on Poplar Street and 113 people were at the first service. Dr. Crowley is the only living charter member, but there are others who held the church together for years such as Eva Mae Mears, Betty Lancaster, Lillian Andrews, Jack Hill, Calvin Aycock, Roland Booth, Tom Walston and Terry and Debbie Combs. They remained faithful to God and to their little church. One day as Eva Mae Mears and her sister, Betty Lancaster were walking on Piney Island, Betty experienced a prophetic message from the Lord. Plunging a stick into the ground, she told Eva Mae, "This is where our church will be". The Chincoteague Church of God proudly stands on that piece of ground today.

As the Church of God grew, young Raymond was also growing his ministry, becoming licensed at 16 and pastoring churches in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Ohio. He was Northern Ohio's State Overseer between 1970-1974. After being elected to several executive positions with the Church of God International in Cleveland, Tn., Dr. Crowley was elected and served as General Overseer for two terms in 1986 and 1988, and will be remembered as one of the most distinguished ever to serve in that office.

In June of this year, a special tribute was given to Dr. Crowley by the Church of God DelMarVa-DC region during their annual Campmeeting held at the Raymond E. Crowley Worship Center in Seaford, Del. Despite an illustrious 71 year career, Dr. Crowley remains modest and humble, yet it is obvious that the Church of God International denomination takes great pride in him. He continues to preach in his gentle yet compelling manner, under the anointing of God. Dr. Crowley will be the guest speaker on Sept. 14 at the Chincoteague Church of God 10th Anniversary Pastor Appreciation Celebration in honor of Pastor John Thorne.

I was black-mailed, double-dog-dared and threatened with the worst fate on earth.

"We'll just assign Angie to do it," Publisher Candy Farlow told me recently when I voiced apprehension about going hang gliding at Campbell Field Airport in Weirwood.

Ouch! She sure knows how to hit one where it hurts.

Of course, the young reporter was just dying to jump into my harness. "You know I'll do anything," she chirped.

"They are talking about a visit to the hospital," I warned Angie. (That's just the kind of person I am. I have to protect the innocent.)

So what was I to do? I wanted to see what it was all about and take some photographs. Gordon Campbell, owner of the Weirwood Airport, offered to take me up for free. And I couldn't very well let Angie take my place. Or could I? Hmm. It would mean that she would fall to the earth from about 2,500 feet. Interesting. But, she'd be graceful about it and enjoy herself entirely too much. And anyway, I thought I'd save her from that fate.

So I planned on being at the field to take the challenge. Have I mentioned before that I'm lucky and blessed? The hang-gliding expedition was canceled due to high winds! I must admit I was very relieved. My stomach settled down. I ate some cake while there and was able to enjoy watching the more experienced Campbell do a couple of solos. He was towed up by Bill McCarter in an ultralight craft.

Whew!

About a week later, the Eastern Shore Post needed a back-to-school photo. McCarter offered to take me up in his plane, described by a friend as a flying bicycle.

Again I was apprehensive. I took deep breaths and convinced myself that I should go for it. After all, I'm almost 50; I have to experience all that I can. (Did I mention that my big birthday is Oct. 21?)

I loved it! It beats a commercial flight any day. Yippee! I have been bitten by the bug! I may even consider the hang gliding now. It does look like fun. Or maybe I'll just start saving my money for my own ultralight. Perhaps I'll finally win the lottery, too. One can dream, can't one?

We flew from Weirwood to Exmore

Bill McCarter in his ultralight craft; I sat behind him for my adventure.

and buzzed around Occohannock Elementary School near Willis Wharf. Did you know there are quite a few Northampton houses with swimming pools? And that the bay and the ocean can be glimpsed all at once? There was no one on the roof of the hospital. I suppose it was much too hot to be taking a break up there.

Traffic had calmed down on the highway after the holiday weekend and things were back to the slow pace. It was peaceful. McCarter said we were going at top speeds of 50 miles per hour which made sense since some of the cars seemed to stand still. They were going faster than we were.

On the way back, McCarter turned off the engine, presumably to glide. I nearly had a stroke. The silence didn't last long since I started screaming. "What are you doing?" I yelled.

He quickly turned the motor back on. I was in the seat behind him and while I could see him in the mirrors to give him hand signals, I was too flustered to notice if he was laughing or snickering.

Every day is a beautiful day on the Eastern Shore. But, when you're soaring over the land and sea, it's breathtaking. I highly recommend it.

Six Parties Have Candidates

To the Editor:

We are taught in school that America's political system is a two-party system. In fact, there are six significant political parties in the United States. This amplifies former Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura's statement, "We are told that there are two political parties. ... Guess what, that gives us exactly one more candidate than the Soviets have!"

If you are getting a little tired of media hype, a little research into independent parties might be refreshing. Furthermore, you'll get a look at real political issues. Here is a list of the six parties, candidates and Web sites.

Constitution Party - Chuck Baldwin

www.baldwin08.com

Democratic Party - Barack Obama

www.barackobama.org

Green Party - Cynthia McKinney

www.2.runcynthiarun.org

Independent Party - Ralph Nader

www.vote.nader.org

Libertarian Party - Bob Barr

www.bobbarr2008.com

Republican Party - John McCain

I have heard statements like, "Why bother to vote? I don't agree with either candidate," "My vote doesn't count anyway," or "Voting independent is throwing away my vote." Au contraire! Not voting, especially in protest, is throwing away your vote. The fact is that the percentage of voters who didn't vote is largely ignored and "they deserve what they get." However, independent voters can't be ignored because the effort and research were made.

Independent parties are not given media coverage at this time because they are petitioning to get on the ballot state by state. Republicans and Democrats are automatically on the ballots in all states. If you choose to vote independent, remember, all states have to respect write-in votes.

Why No Concern Over War?

To the Editor:

Why all the concern over the possible death and destruction from a hurricane which we CANNOT control, while we continue to observe the LACK of concern over something we CAN control: the daily death and destruction in the Middle East?

Vote to stop the war NOW!

ARC Fish Fry Organizers Grateful for Support

To the Editor:

The annual fish fry in Wachapreague was a great success this year. The Eastern Shore Association for Retarded Citizens would like to thank all who participated. We appreciate the unselfish time and effort the cooks, dinner servers and cake bakers gave to our organization. Especially, we thank our faithful attendees for purchasing dinner tickets.

We extend a special thank you to the Melfa Rotary Club, auctioneer Chester Jackson, and Wachapreague firefighters and their generosity of space and labor, and to all the individuals and businesses for their auction items.

The success of the day belongs to all of you and for that, we send our heart-felt thanks.
