New Smoking Ban Poses Change for Restaurants ...

By Linda Cicoira

Local restaurant owners who answered a recent Eastern Shore Post survey said they are prepared for the state's new smoking bans or already have prohibited the use of tobacco in their establishments.

"It remains to be seen just how the ban will affect our business," said Randy Lewis of Island House Restaurant in Wachapreague. "I believe it will have an impact."

Lewis said his establishment has "a smoking area separate from the main dining room and in the lounge that is in compliance with the new smoking ban. We have a separate room with a completely separate ventilation system. There are other requirements which we have researched and seem to meet as well."

"Upfront costs were not as bad as the potential costs down the road," he said. "I don't really know what percent of our business are smokers. In the 32 years we've been here, the ratio has changed from more smokers to more non-smokers."

"I am not in favor of the ban mainly because this is one more way the government dictates how a private business chooses to operate," Lewis wrote. "I don't smoke and many of our employees don't smoke, so my personal preference is to have a non-smoking operation. Part of the problem is we don't have enough people here on the Shore to alienate any sector."

"The public still has some questions about how this will change our businesses," wrote Tom McCulloch of Shucker's Roadhouse near Onancock. "We anticipate an increase in our non-smoking dining room business. That room has been completely remodeled, including fresh carpet. We also hope to see an increase in sales to smokers primarily because they will have fewer places to go," he wrote.

"The law requires that the two areas be separated by at least a 2x4 studded wall, have completely

Nearly 71 percent of those who participated in an Eastern Shore Post e-mail survey, favor a new law that prohibits smoking in restaurants. About 23 percent were opposed, with the rest undecided.

Of those who favor the new law, 60 percent said they have never smoked and 40 percent identified themselves as former smokers. No current smokers who took the survey favor the ban.

The new law allows restaurants to provide smoking sections that are separated by walls, ventilation systems and entrances.

Twenty-seven percent of those who oppose the law are smokers. More than 33 percent never smoked and 40 percent are former smokers.

"Take it outside please," wrote Bill Aeschliman of Craddockville, who quit smoking 17 years ago. "Having a smoking section in a restaurant is like having a 'peeing section' in a swimming pool." Aeschliman said he is "reformed forever and would rather not be around it anymore."

Kenny Ainsworth of Horsey wrote that the new smoking regulations would have very little effect on him and rarely affected him when he went to a restaurant where smoking was permitted.

"I favor it only to help persons over the edge in the journey to quit," Ainsworth said. "I actually enjoyed" the smoke in restaurants. "It is as close as I will ever get to that deep satisfaction from a smoke." Ainsworth smoked from 1978 through 2000. "Survived cancer twice," he offered. "On the first time around, I had a smoke in one hand and a chemo IV in the other."

"I spent many years trying to quit. The biggest deterrent was self-righteous arrogant ex-smokers," Ainsworth added. "After listening to one of them, I needed a smoke to calm down and regain some minimal composure."

Ive Chubb of Eastville supports a total ban on smoking in restaurants. "I have allergies and start coughing when I am around smoke ... I believe more

Emergency Response Times Compared in Accomack

By Linda Cicoira

Public Safety Director Jason Loftus made another plea Wednesday for consolidation of Emergency Medical Services (EMS), but Accomack supervisors took no action.

Loftus said the squads should review the information. Though some representatives were in the audience, not all were aware that the issue would be discussed.

Referring to previous meetings between volunteers and paid rescue workers, Loftus added, "We all had some soda and chicken ... What have we got?"

Last fall the group struggled to determine how volunteer companies could keep their "small-town" appeal and get help from paid workers. Consolidation was raised as a means to solve low recruitment and retention issues.

"You have a problem," Loftus said. "We're spending $4.2 million a year (including firefighting). ... The public ... needs to say what they are willing to fund. That's the piece we've been missing."

"Current EMS districts weren't derived by drive time," Loftus said. "Melfa has a large district. There are areas they can't drive to

Ambulance Driver Doesn't Stop After Minor Collision With School Bus

By Linda Cicora

An Accomack County Public Schools bus filled with 30 to 40 children on their way to Metompkin Elementary School collided with a Parksley ambulance responding to a call Monday at around 8 a.m. in Bloxom, according to reports.

The ambulance did not stop after the accident, continuing to its destination on Nelsonia Road.

State Police Sgt. Michelle Cotten said Monday that the two vehicles "smacked mirrors" and that there were no injuries. The bus driver, who was not identified, "had glass all over her from the mirror," the sergeant said.

The accident was considered non-reportable and no ticket was given, Cotten continued. "They exchanged information," Cotton said, apparently concluding that the ambulance had stopped after striking the bus. "There were no reportable injuries," she said. Trooper R.C. Brown investigated.

On Tuesday, Cotten identified the ambulance driver as Kyle McConnell, no address or name available. She said the bus driver, who was still not identified, later went to the hospital. Cotten said McConnell did not stop after the accident because "he did not know he hit the bus."

Superintendent Rick Bull of Accomack Schools said Monday that there were no injuries resulting from the accident. He said the mirror of the ambulance broke the side glass on the bus. "We did not get a ticket," he continued. "They are waiting for this ambulance to come back from the hospital."

"That's what happened," said Jason Loftus, Accomack's director of Public Safety. "The person driving the ambulance didn't stop." Loftus did not identify the driver, but admitted that he was a paid employee. Loftus said that driving away from an accident is not the normal procedure. The incident has "been investigated internally and by the State Police and action was taken," Loftus said.

Loftus would not disclose details of the investigation. "It is a personnel matter not up for public discussion," he said.

Willie Kirkpatrick, the head of Parksley's rescue squad, said Monday that he was working at his part-time job when the incident occurred and did not know details of the case. He said he had heard that it was "under investigation on the cause" and was not sure who was investigating. "I'm in the dark as much as you are," he added.

Director Jeff Flournoy of the 911 Center said Tuesday that the ambulance was responding to a 7:47 a.m. call reporting "abdominal pain" in a patient on Nelsonia Road. He said such calls could be critical, although he was not sure that this one was serious. Such information about a report is not immediately available, Flournoy said. He referred questions to Loftus.

Other records that Flournoy could immediately see showed that the accident was reported at 8:01 a.m. at 16430 Hopeton Road, with units from Parksley, Bloxom and the Department of Public Safety responding.

A mother of a child who was riding the bus identified the bus as #93. She said the driver had finished picking up elementary-school children and the bus was stopped when the ambulance struck it. "That ambulance never stopped," she said. The bus driver, Helen Johnson, "had to call the School Board to get an ambulance."

"They're really being hush-hush about it," said the mother, who would not give her name. The children were not hurt but were upset, she added.

in 20 minutes. No fault to them."

"One of our biggest problems with our system today is it's not a system," said Loftus. "In order to fix response time we have to look at the county as a whole."

"We have studied this system to death," Loftus said. "We really don't have a plan still."

Loftus said it is unclear how much the squads are billing. "I don't think anyone's getting rich ... Wachapreague is the only one not billing."

EMS is funded with $1.8 million per year in taxes that are specifically set for the cause. Another $88,000 is donated from the county's general fund and $824,959 is estimated to come from EMS billing, according to the report.

The supervisors previously agreed that companies should respond within 20 minutes at least 90 percent of the time.

"Both career and volunteer organizations receive tax money to provide a service," said Loftus. "Both should be held accountable."

Loftus said the monthly reports provided to the supervisors should "be used to make decisions and predictions on service ... this approach must be supported by ... population, drive time, number of calls, volunteer availability, consolidation of resources, etc."

A report stated that between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30, 2009, Greenbackville got 106 calls and responded in the prescribed time 58 percent of the time. Forty-four calls took over 20 minutes to answer. The longest was 42 minutes, 28 seconds. The company was unable to answer 18 calls for which it was the primary agency.

Paid staff includes two day workers at Greenbackville, Saxis, Bloxom, Melfa and Wachapreague. Oak Hall, Parksley, Onancock and Onley have a 24-hour worker and a day worker.

Information was incomplete for Chincoteague, where 388 calls were received. Sixteen calls took more than 20 minutes. The longest was 36 minutes. They did not respond to two calls for which they were the primary agency.

Saxis had 96 calls, with 26 taking more than 20 minutes. The maximum time was 40 minutes, 29 seconds. They did not respond to calls for which they were the primary agency 18 times.

Bloxom got 502 calls, with 67 taking more than 20 minutes. The maximum response time was 41 minutes, 35 seconds. They did not respond to calls for which they were the primary agency 58 times.

Parksley had 882 calls, with 31 taking more than 20 minutes. The maximum response time was nearly 36 minutes. They answered all their calls.

Onancock had 515 calls, with eight taking more than 20 minutes. The maximum response time was 42 minutes, 6 seconds. They answered all their calls.

Melfa had 644 calls, with 76 taking more than 20 minutes. The longest response time was 50 minutes, 24 seconds. They were unable to answer 12 calls for which they were the primary agency.

Wachapreague had 116 calls, with 10 taking more than 20 minutes, for a 91 percent rate. The maximum response time was 37 minutes, 9 seconds. They were unable to answer 10 calls for which they were the primary agency.

Onley had 341 calls, with two taking more than 20 minutes, for a 99 percent rate. They took 49 minutes, 21 seconds to respond to one call and were unable to answer another.

Oak Hall had 799 calls of which 70 took more than 20 minutes, for a 91 percent rate. The longest response time was 1 hour, eight minutes and 38 seconds. They also answered all their calls.

Tangier had 55 calls, with three taking more than 20 minutes. The longest response time was 36 minutes, 39 seconds. They answered all their calls.

Exmore had 205 calls from Accomack with 17 taking more than 20 minutes. The longest response time was 46 minutes, 36 seconds. They did not answer 10 calls for which they were the primary agency.

Loftus provided maps that designated areas with long response times. Supervisor Donald Hart was angry because the changes Loftus proposed would put Wachapreague area in a more vulnerable position.

"Wachapreague is the only area in the entire county that went backwards," Hart complained. It's targeted again and again and again."

Supervisors Ask To Keep Money for Carfloat

By Linda Cicoira

Accomack supervisors voted 7-1 Wednesday to ask the Virginia Department of Rail and Public Transportation that $700,000 continue to be earmarked for local railroad carfloat repairs.

The supervisors took no action to fund a portion of the additional $300,000 that is needed to fix the Bay Coast Railroad barge.

Some supervisors also complained that rail managers aren't sharing needed financial information with them.

"The railroad today is not profitable," said Bay Creek CEO Oral Lambert. "Up until now, Mr. (Dickie) Foster (a local developer) has put $2 million of his personal funds in. He has not taken any proceeds out."

The announcement is a far cry from the information that was passed to the public in a June 2008 article published in The Virginian-

Pilot.

At that time, Railroad Manager Larry LeMond said the railroad was beginning to turn around. Rail traffic increased 40 percent that year from January to April compared with the same period in 2007, LeMond said. The railroad should haul about 3,000 carloads of freight this year, he added.

"The railroad today does not have $300,000," Lambert told the supervisors. "We think it should be done," he said of the carfloat repairs. "We're asking the counties (Accomack and Northampton) to back this loan. The railroad is willing to participate 1/3, 1/3, 1/3."

Lambert said the managing company is willing to pay back $100,000 of the money over 10 years.

"If there's no profit ... how will they pay?" asked Supervisor Ron Wolff, who is also a member of the Accomack-Northampton Transportation

District Commission (ANTDC). "What will your security be?"

"The two counties own this railroad," Lambert said, adding that Cassatt Management, LLC, is "simply managing."

"If we're the owners, how come we can't see the books?" asked Wolff.

"Cassatt is the operator and it's a private company," answered LeMond.

"You're playing a shell game," Wolff said, arguing that before taxpayer money (including state funds) is spent, proof of business practices needs to be shown.

"I don't have a problem with it," LeMond said of disclosing financial data. "No one's asked me for it."

"I don't have it here with me tonight," said Lambert. "The counties have an economic benefit from this railroad. To date, the railroad hasn't made any profit." His claim was based on county businesses that use the rail.

"We have no way of knowing what the books look like," Chairman Steve Mallette (also a member of the ANTDC) said, agreeing with Wolff. He also wanted to know what it costs to pull the barge into drydock every three years.

Supervisor Sandy Hart Mears said, "Better information and communication would be good. I have always supported the railroad ... it's a good investment."

County Administrator Steve Miner explained that the barge belongs to the railroad. But the state has a lien against it from past loans.

"I know that if we lost this chance and need this barge, we will in all likelihood regret that," said Miner. "No guarantees in life. We may have a real home run here one day." Miner was referring to the needs of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and Wallops Research Park, which expect a boom of business in the future.

The loan money would come from the Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission (ANPDC) and would be returned to that fund, said Miner. "It's not all negative. There are some positive points."

"The state has a huge investment," said Supervisor Wanda Thornton. "If we hadn't had a private person take over, it would have gone bankrupt by now."

"Wallop may need desperately" to use the carfloat, she said. "The public needs to understand. Mr. Wolff maybe doesn't have enough background," she argued. Thornton wanted the board to return Supervisor Donald Hart to the ANTDC because before becoming the Virginia Association of Counties president, he served for many years on the panel.

"I feel like we owe a thank you to Mr. Foster for doing this," Thornton continued. "I was convinced we need this railroad for the Eastern Shore ... you can't make the books open to the public" because competing markets could gain important information. "There's a reason for that. It would be the same no matter who it was."

Supervisor Grayson Chesser was the only member to vote against asking that the state to keep the money put aside for the carfloat. Vice Chairwoman Laura Belle Gordy was absent.

"Everybody out there has to pay for that," Chesser said of the state and local monies. "I think there comes a time when you have to cut your losses."

LeMond called the carfloat operation a "26-mile moving bridge. "If the state is willing to put up $700,000, I think it speaks for itself."

Hart made the motion to ask the state to "keep the process open."

In January 2006, Foster signed a 30-year lease with the ANTDC to operate what was then called the Eastern Shore Railroad. The 77-mile freight line runs from Pocomoke City, Md., to Cape Charles and over into Norfolk, via the rail-car barge float across the Chesapeake Bay.

It was previously reported that about 40 jobs would be saved at Bayshore Concrete Products Corporation in Cape Charles if the carfloat were repaired. In addition, an official said that local propane gas companies would be able to keep a competitive edge by getting gas from southern areas when prices there are lower.

The railroad discontinued its carfloat operation to the Eastern Shore in June.

Northampton Supervisor Richard Tankard, chairman of the ANTDC, said Cassatt's contract includes maintaining a full freight rail operation. "Repair of the carfloat is the responsibility of Cassatt as is the replacement of crossties, switches, locomotives etc.," he added.

In later discussions about proposed Planned Unit Development (PUD) zoning, Caroline Massey of NASA said cargo coming from Kennedy Space Center in Florida would be flown in.

Winder To Replace Nowak Temporarily

By Linda Cicora

Bill Winder, a retired Accomack County Public Schools administrator who lives in Greenbackville, is temporarily serving as high school coordinator until the position can be more permanently filled.

Dr. Mark Nowak of Parksley, who died last month after a short illness, most recently held the job.

Winder was previously the high-school coordinator and retired as assistant superintendent for administration and human resources, the position Dr. Rhonda Hall now holds.

Winder agreed to help the school system by filling the spot "until we make a decision," Hall said.

separate ventilation systems and have separate entrances," McCulloch added. "We have recently completed those renovations and look forward to accommodating both groups. ... Long term we see this as a good way to continue to grow our business."

"I think the ban was a good compromise," McCulloch added. "It did allow owners to accommodate both groups equally so long as they were willing and able make the commitment."

Sandra Fox said the ban would have no effect on her business, The Inn & Garden Café in Onancock, since smoking was not allowed in the establishment prior to the new law.

Bob Zoller of Mr. Baldy's Family Restaurant in Chincoteague also favors the ban and does not permit smoking there. He estimated that 40 percent of his customers are smokers.

"This is a change that has already happened in other states/regions," Zoller wrote. "After an initial period of transition, it really isn't a difficult adjustment to make. Most people, smokers or not, prefer to dine in a smoke-free environment," he added.

Johnny Mo of Mallards at the Wharf in Onancock also did not allow smoking prior to the ban. There was no smoking at his Accomac location either. "Mallards at the Wharf offers an outdoor deck where smoking is permitted," he wrote, adding about 10 percent of his customers smoke cigarettes.

"I changed Mallards (Bayside Road location) to a non-smoking restaurant within a year of opening back in 2003 and I actually had an increase in business," he wrote.

Janet Gadow of Etta's Channel Side Restaurant on Chincoteague said, "The ban does not affect our restaurant because we have been a no-smoking facility since 1999."

David Landsberger, owner of the Sea Shell Café in Chincoteague, said the "new ban should not affect us at all. Smoking is not allowed in our establishment. We have a designated smoking area outside." He said only "a small percentage are smokers" and he favors the ban.

Matt Powell of Annie's in Parkley said his restaurant has "been non-smoking since we opened in September." So the change is not expected to have an adverse effect.

He said, "maybe 10 percent" of his customers are smokers. "We see very few people going out front to smoke. It has been proven in the past that non-smoking bans allow patrons that would not usually go to a smoking-allowed establishment to visit and enjoy something new. As long as there are accommodations made for smokers, there should not be any problems."

Bay Creek CEO Oral Lambert answered for Aqua and Coach House Tavern in Cape Charles. "We will see no impact as we banned smoking in our restaurants a couple of years ago," he wrote, noting that he favors the law "for the health of our customers and staff as well as for the dining enjoyment of our patrons. Any effect will be positive in terms of dining experience once the change is in place and becomes 'normal' practice," Lambert wrote.

About 25 survey questionnaires were sent to local restaurants and e-mail addresses were sought for many more.

The new law took effect Tuesday and prohibits smoking in restaurants, except those which provide outdoor areas or smoking sections with rooms separated by walls, vent systems and entrances. Private clubs are exempt from the ban. The law also does not require the creation of an additional public entrance in cases where the only public entrance to a restaurant in existence as of Dec. 1 is through an outdoor dining area of the restaurant where smoking is permitted.

During routine inspections, Health Department workers will determine compliance. Those employees will look for posted "no smoking" signs or symbols, removal of all ashtrays and other smoking paraphernalia and whether separate smoking rooms meet standards.

Bowling alleys, skating rinks and bingo halls (including those at fire departments) where food is served and prepared fall under the law, which also prohibits smoking in all restrooms in a restaurant.

people will go to restaurants ... I lived around a smoker for the first part of my life but I never started."

"I don't smoke so I am very happy," Anne Gregory of Craddockville wrote of new law. "Now I can go in restaurants and not come home sick from inhaling smoke. Every time I went in a restaurant that allowed smoking I had a headache. It would be fine if they were total."

Ann Stubbs of Chincoteague said the smoking ban "makes me very happy. People sit there and blow smoke over on me. I survived but I don't understand why they cannot last an hour without smoking."

Lee Mapp of Nassawadox is a smoker who opposes the ban. "I have a problem with the government favoring one group over the other ... I prefer separate areas to a total ban ... I find that heavy cologne is more offensive and does cause breathing problems. ... I tend not to smoke in public as it offends so many others."

Tony Picardi of Belle Haven wrote that he favors a total smoking ban. "All civilized communities have smoking bans in public places. It will make going to restaurants more pleasant and healthier."

Janie Conquest of northern Accomack also said it will be "more pleasant to eat out. We have never enjoyed eating with people smoking around us; therefore the restaurants that had smoking were not restaurants we often frequented."

Senora Ruffin of Eastville favors a total ban. "I don't think there will be an influx of new non-smoking patrons," she said. "I believe patrons who are smokers will still eat in the restaurants and either smoke outside or cut their meals short."

Micaela Barnhill of Greenbackville wrote that she favors the ban "for others; I oppose it for myself." She prefers separate smoking areas in eating establishments. "More people will be standing outside at the entrance so other non-smoking patrons will have to pass through their smoke to get into the restaurant. Restaurant owners should set up separate smoking spaces outside away from the entrance with butt cans to keep butts off the pavement and out of the bushes."

Dawn Joyce of Atlantic favors a ban "100 percent." The restaurants

"may lose some smoker business but gain people like us," she wrote.

Stephanie Pierce of Belle Haven doesn't "go to smoking restaurants. Seeing people smoking is disturbing and I don't want my children to see smoking if I can avoid it. I prefer a total ban."

"I oppose the ban because I think it should be the restaurant's choice, not the government's mandate," wrote Sam Serio of Hallwood. "I do believe there should be smoking sections. But even that should be left to the private business owner. When will the intrusion of government into our lives end?"

Mary Graham of Parksley agreed. "The government is in too many places they don't belong as it is," she wrote. "Supply and demand should rule whether the restaurant chooses smoking or not. It should be between the restaurant owner and their customers."

"Usually the smoking is separate enough that I can sit in a non-smoking section. It shouldn't bother too many" of the establishments "since most don't allow it anyway," Graham wrote.

Former smoker Al James of Quinby favors the ban. "On occasion I was annoyed by smoke from others," he wrote. A "total ban has worked in other states and did not have any long-term affect on restaurants."

Thom Henderson of Franktown said the restaurants will not be affected any more "than banning spitting. If it's banned in all of them, it won't affect any of them."

Dan Bowen of Nassawadow wrote, "It's about time it (smoking in restaurants) stopped. I have chosen not to visit restaurants because they allow smoking." Bowen said he doesn't care how the restaurants will be affected.

"My breathing will be affected for the good," he added. "My father had a slogan 'If you smoke please do not exhale.'"

Linda Nicola of Onancock said the ban will not affect her because most of the restaurants in the area are already non-smoking. "I never go to restaurants with smoking. I favor the ban. Nothing is worse than trying to enjoy a meal that tastes like cigarettes. ... The smoke goes everywhere. It doesn't know it's supposed to stop at the third booth."

"I won't have to worry about breathing second-hand smoke now," said Betty Armstrong of Belle Haven. "There have only been a few times in the last couple of years where I went into a restaurant and the no-smoking section was obviously not well ventilated because the smell of the smoke was unpleasant."

"I personally like the total ban since thankfully I have been a non-smoker since 1985," wrote Armstrong. "I believe smokers are going to continue eating out even though they may gripe about the ban. I think it will have little, if any, effect on the restaurants."

Lorraine Edmonson of Willis Wharf called a ban on smoking "wonderful. The smoke gets in your clothes (and) is definitely not good for one's health. Hated smoker's turning their heads, oblivious to where the smoke was being blown."

C.D. Marsh Jr. of Onancock wrote that he's opposed to the ban. He said it "will hurt business. It's another means of government CONTROL that I don't favor."

Bobby Carroll Huether of Pungoteague said having been in the restaurant business on and off for more than 40 years has meant having smoke blown in his face and cleaning out ashtrays. "It would turn my stomach each and every day. I personally have been looking forward to the ban since I was a teen." He favors a total ban. "Smoke drifts," he complained.

Patrick Belote of Onancock, who quit smoking 17 years ago, said the ban will have no effect on him. Still he is opposed to it "on Libertarian principles."

Erin Hall of Cheriton is a teacher and a supporter of the new law. "I will no longer have to avoid certain establishments because I want to preserve my health and when my child is born I will not have to be cautious about what 'section' of a restaurant we are put into," she wrote.

"I have never found it reasonable that smoking patrons have been able to force their toxic and carcinogenic fumes on people who would never willingly smoke."

"Restaurants will probably not see much change as far as customer patronage," she continued. "People will still eat out, go to bars and clubs and congregate with friends and family in public places."

"Cigarette and cigar smoke makes my eyes water and it makes me sneeze," said Terry Ewell of Bloxom. "The smoke stinks and I hate the smell of smoke on my clothes." She wrote that business would go on as usual. "Smokers will get over it and go outside to smoke."

Pamela Barefoot wrote that restaurant smoking worsens her asthma. "I do not like coming home with my coat or clothes smelling so bad that I cannot hang them in my closet. I recall walking through the smoking area of one restaurant and a family of four was seated there. The mother was blowing cigarette smoke into her young children's faces. I was horrified. My staff has held fund-raising events in various restaurants for the American Cancer Society over the years. I had to stop participating due to the smoke." She favors a total ban.

"I understand the concept of my rights ending where someone else's begin," wrote Angie Crutchley of Onancock. "However, it would be nice to have a little tiny nook to crawl into if I choose to have a puff."

information staff will be available at both locations on all days.

A service officer also will be available for all area veterans with claims or other veteran-related questions Sunday, Dec. 6, from 4 to 7 p.m. in Onley.

An introduction to "Science on the Shore," a new series that illustrates the unique nature of the Eastern Shore's many scientific pursuits, will be held at 6 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 8, at the NASA Visitor Center at Wallops Flight Facility.

The Science on the Shore series is a collaborative effort of NASA, the Marine Science Consortium, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Nature Conservancy and Eastern Shore Community College.

This educational and fun program will provide the community with an understanding of how local science-based research and conservation techniques are used to solve challenges that impact the nation. Each organization will sponsor research and science activities, providing opportunities for hands-on participation, as well as a unique speaker series.

Following a short break at 6:45, NASA will host a public meeting at 7 p.m. regarding the current status of the Wallops Flight Facility Shoreline Restoration and Infrastructure Protection Program.

NASA has identified the need to replenish the shoreline on Wallops Island to reduce damage to assets that are in danger due to severe shoreline erosion. NASA and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers are investigating various engineering alternatives for this project which may include beach replenishment, seawall extension, or the construction of sand retention structures. NASA's preferred project alternative includes beach fill and seawall extension only.

Saxis Volunteer Fire & Rescue Company is sponsoring a Can & Dry Food Drive. Donations can be dropped off at the Saxis or Sanford Post Office or at Bayside Market by Dec. 9. Door-to-door pick-ups will be conducted that day beginning at around 6 p.m.

For more information, call the firehouse at 854-1545.

Chamber Sets 'Town Hall' Meetings

The Northampton County Chamber of Commerce will be hosting "town hall" format meetings for current and prospective members at the Palace Theatre in Cape Charles on Tuesday, Dec. 8, and at the former Middle School on Thursday, Dec. 10. Both meetings will begin at 4:30 p.m.

Rob Savage, executive director of the chamber, and other board members will be on hand to discuss chamber activities and perspectives, but their primary objective will be to get input on the issues and initiatives that their constituents would like to see undertaken.

According to Savage, "The Northampton Chamber strives to be a member-driven organization, and its desire is to promote programs and activities that will enhance the lives of all residents, as our belief is that a thriving business community will benefit everyone. We feel that taking these meetings out into the communities will enable everyday citizens to offer their opinions more readily to chamber leadership."

The meetings will conclude at 6 p.m., but Savage said the time would be extended if needed. He added that the chamber is hopeful that participation will be strong enough to justify that these events be held frequently in different venues across the county.

Local Author Publishes 29th Book

Nassawadox author David Poyer's 29th book just came out.

"The Crisis" is set in East Africa, where years of drought, famine, and misgovernment have brought Ashaara to the brink of chaos. When the government falls, a charismatic young warlord known as Al-Maahdi begins an armed insurgency.

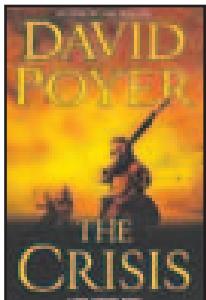

Poyer

As thousands of refugees stream toward camps, the United States intervenes to feed them, and to try to stabilize a strategically important region.

Cmdr. Dan Lenson and his Tactical Analysis Group find themselves at the heart of the humanitarian mission. Lenson is torn between the plight of men, women, and children struggling to survive, and the brutal reality of fighting a ruthless enemy whose tactics checkmate American might.

Poyer's 30-year career included service in the Atlantic, Mediterranean, Arctic, Caribbean, Midwest, and Pacific. "The Crisis" is the 12th in his continuing novel cycle of the modern Navy and Marine Corps.

First editions of "The Crisis" are now available.

THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY, VIRGINIA

Plaintiff

CIVIL CASE NO. 09000361-00

HELEN W. MCLEOD
ANNIE WILLIAMS

Defendants

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this suit is to enforce the lien of the Plaintiff for delinquent taxes against certain real estate described as follows:

All that parcel of land in Eastville, Northampton County, Virginia, being 3.00 acres, more or less, and designated as "Lot Near Forks" (10394) and "Lot Near Forks" (3780).

LESS and EXCEPT conveyances as provided by the terms of the Will of Rinie Watson recorded in Will Book 52, at page 139.

standing in the names of Helen W. McLeod, also known as Helen Watson, and Annie Williams, pursuant to Section 58.1-3965 et seq. of the Code of Virginia.

And an affidavit having been filed that due diligence has been used to determine whether Helen W. McLeod and Annie Williams are living, or if deceased, to ascertain the names and location of all of their heirs, devisees and successors in title; and that there are or may be other persons having an interest in the real estate forming the subject matter of this suit whose names and last post office addresses are unknown, namely, the unknown heirs, devisees and successors in title of Helen W. McLeod and Annie Williams.

It is ORDERED that this Order be published once a week for two successive weeks in the Eastern Shore Post and that the parties named herein appear on or before December 14, 2009, at 9:30 a.m. in the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court for the County of Northampton, Virginia, and do what may be necessary to protect their interests in this suit.

TUXEDO TEENAGER

By Flick Smith

I'm spoiled. I'm cute. I'm a teenager. I may just be your worst nightmare.

When I had my 13th birthday last month, I posed for this photo in hopes that my mentors, Snoop and Scoop, the feline geniuses of the Eastern Shore Post, would be impressed with my personality and allow me to write a column.

Of course they were. So, here I am. Call me a cataspondent. I sent this in via the Internet and my secretary, aka owner.

Keeping those humans on their toes is my main gig. Sure, I wear hats and superhero capes to entertain them. But then I don't cover the gifts I leave in the little sand pit for a month or two.

And yes, I've pretended at times to be an Egyptian Sphinx. I even tolerate the old dog that lives in my mansion. But, they let me sleep all day and slide on the rugs all night. Can you say PARTY!

Often I leave a little milk in the bowl just to show I'm taken care of. I've got the life of Sylvester and I'm not too proud to admit it.

October was good because I looked out the back windows and watched the leaves blowing in the breeze. They sure were pretty. Now I'm looking forward to the holiday season.

Last week when the crowd huddled around the dining-room table to eat turkey and all the fixings, I licked gravy out of the roasting pan that was resting on the stove in the kitchen. Yummy.

I stuck my tongue out at the poor little dog who couldn't jump high enough to join me for the fun. Poor baby!

My life is that of a typical cat who waits all year for Christmas. Nothing quite says "merry" like climbing up the festive tree and knocking down the angel that ever so proudly looks down from the top of the beautiful pine.

"Take that, you attention stealer," I'll tell that china-faced cherub. "I'm the divine being around these parts."

And what's the deal with the stale stringy popcorn the humans make such a fuss about? Trim the tree indeed! Is there anything quite as grand as watching the kids tape antlers to the puppy's head? I think not.

Sharpening my claws on those fancy wrapped packages ain't bad either. Can humans learn to say "MEOW?" I hear some kind of tribal cry. Oh, wait a minute; I think that's the carolers practicing for a Christmas play. LA LA LA

Don't forget to leave milk and cookies out for Santa. Put them up on that high table. Yeah, right. They'll be safe there.

Life is pretty darn wonderful. I'm filled with holiday spirit. Don't forget my eggnog and catnip. Both are on my wish list, Mr. Claus.

CFC Says 'Thank You'

Dear Editor:

The members of the Community Fire Company of Exmore would like to thank Gerald M. Moore and Sons, The Cape Charles Volunteer Fire Company and Marshall's Tree Service for their help during the recent nor'easter. The aging antennae tower behind the station was no match for the strong northeast winds of the recent storm and nearly collapsed onto the station. Gerald M. Moore and Sons responded quickly with a truck to secure, and ultimately lower, the tower. The Cape Charles Volunteer Fire Company responded with their aerial tower to give the crew the "lift" they needed to place straps on the tower for a controlled decent. And last, but certainly not least, to Marshall's Tree Service for responding a crew and a boom truck to assist in any way they could.

All of these organizations dropped what they were doing, during the height of the storm, without a second thought, to help our organization. Their rapid response and tireless efforts, under very difficult conditions, certainly saved our building from significant damage.

Thank you again,
Greg DeYoung, Fire Chief
Community Fire Company

Family Grateful for Help

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Hernandez Family, per their direction, I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who reached out when they lost everything they owned except the clothes on their backs a few weekends ago when their home burned in Melfa. Because of your outreach, the Hernandez family was able to return to a normal lifestyle within a week. All their household needs were replenished with clothes, furniture, kitchen appliances, pots, pans, dishes, toys, etc., through your generosity.

I would like to add that because of the outreach of love and caring this community showed this family in their time of need, Mr. Hernandez decided to give back last Saturday to the community by giving of his time and any excess he had, to our Self-Help Center here in Pungoteague. This makes it all worthwhile, when someone who is helped, wants to give back to help others.

Pastor Bobby Carroll Huether

Cheriton Day Owes Success to Many

Dear Editor:

On behalf of Cheriton Volunteer Fire Company, I would like to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to everyone who made "Cheriton Day" a success last month.

Although rain was present most of the day, that did not stop many from enjoying the festivities of the day, as Cheriton celebrated a journey through time, "Remembering the Past, Building the Future." We would like to especially thank all of the sponsors, too many to name, for their generous donations of food, goods, or services, which helped make a memorable day for years to come. Our parade was also a success, which we plan to repeat again next year.

Once again, thank you.

Terry A. Thomas, President
Cheriton Volunteer Fire Company
