Chemical Fire at Perdue Forces Evacuations at Accomac Plant

By Linda Cicaira

Heavy smoke blew northwest into the sky from tanks where chemical explosions occurred at around 3 p.m., Wednesday, at Perdue Farms, in Accomac, while hundreds of employees were evacuated and others were kept from starting their shifts.

"We can confirm a fire outside of our Accomac facility," Danielle Tergis, of Perdue Corporate Communications, said Wednesday night. "Out of an abundance of caution we have evacuated the facility. There are no reported injuries. The cause of the fire is under investigation."

Tergis released a statement Thursday, in which she said the incident had been resolved and the plant was back in operation.

Accomack County used its Code Red Alert System to call landlines in the nearby communities and notify people by cellphone who had signed up for the service. They were told to stay inside and avoid the smoke.

Accomack County Public Safety workers, volunteer firefighters and rescue personnel from six local companies, and hazmat experts responded. Some stayed on the scene for hours waiting for the fire to go out as it couldn't be battled in the usual manner. No injuries were reported.

Across Lankford Highway where others were renovating the former B&G Market, witnesses said they heard two loud explosions. The parking lot there was filled with plant employees dressed for work with nowhere to go. Tractor-trailers loaded with live chickens were also parked. The chickens peeked out of their cages. There was no food and water for them in sight. The birds were recently taken away from the cooling units in their modern houses and the heatwave exacerbated the situation.

On Facebook, people shared the news, prayed, inquired about fellow employees, and speculated about the dangers and the financial loss.

County supervisors were preparing for their monthly meeting and Chairman Donald Hart started the session with a brief report.

"Two tanks caught on fire which are both near a fuel tank," Hart said. "They are worried about that now. You cannot put water on the chemicals or they will explode." Hart reported that one tank contained peracetic acid and the other contained sodium chloride.

County Administrator Mike Mason said Thursday morning that both contained peracetic acid. A third party will handle clean up, he said, but didn't know who that would be.

"They are monitoring the air on the north side, telling people not to go outside. (It is) not a situation where it will cause death but could do other damage. It's going to be hours. The place has been evacuated. We have to wait ... We're in the middle of a hazmat situation if anything happens Mike (Mason) and I may have to leave."

Hart is also the county director of emergency services. Public Safety Director C. Ray Pruitt was already on the scene, Hart said.

Accomack EDA Head: Airport Traffic Could Increase from Wallops Overflow

By Linda Cicaira

Accomack Airport could see an increase in traffic if commercial overflow from Wallops Island is sent there, Chairwoman Stella Rohde, of the Accomack Economic Development Authority, told members of the county board of supervisors Wednesday.

Rohde has been talking with Dale Nash of the Mid-Atlantic Regional Spaceport and Peter Bale, CEO of Sentinel Robotic Solutions LLC. She also said she has been on several tours of NASA lately to learn about the industry. The chairwoman said the traffic could be diverted to Melfa because airspace is so restricted on Wallops.

Rohde also thanked the supervisors for providing her group with an office at the county airport. She boasted that the EDA members are all dedicated and bring different insights to their board. "It really is wonderful. They might discuss stuff but they don't argue stuff." There is "outstanding support and assistance of Accomack County to get it all to meld together."

Margaret Lindsey, a certified public accountant from Roanoke, Va., has been named the new Accomack County finance director, County Administrator Mike Mason announced Wednesday at the county board of supervisors meeting. Lindsey is expected to report to work in early August and will be introduced to county supervisors later that month.

Mason, who served in the finance capacity for years, said Lindsey "interviewed fabulously" and is already emailing him about Virginia Retirement System investment assumptions. She most recently worked for the City of Roanoke and has more than a decade of experience in government accounting for both municipalities and public school systems, Mason continued.

Lindsey is licensed in Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Alabama. She graduated from Roanoke College with a bachelor's degree in business administration.

"Prior to working in the public arena, she was an auditor for KPMG (an auditing network of professional firms) and worked for other accounting firms as well," said Mason. "Her interest in government accounting started when she served on audit teams for state and local municipalities. She and her husband, Will, an avid fisherman, are excited to be moving to the Shore and look forward to becoming Shore residents."

Accomack supervisors also voted to amend the fiscal 2020 budget to reflect $8,382,558 in federal and state funding, other initiatives for public schools and for $5.1 million for the Public Library and Eastern Shore Heritage Center construction project.

Assistant County Administrator Rich Morrison also reported to the board about the county's new construction and environmental self-service permit portal, which will be going public from the county website <https://co.accomack.va.us> on Aug. 1.

The new feature will allow contractors and residential users to apply for permits, pay fees, request inspections, check on a neighbor's construction, and more.

"You don't have to come in anymore," said Morrison. "You can pay online too. Will have two kiosks in the office too ... It's a really great tool for the community."

Appointment to various commissions and committees were also made and include Ricky Ross to the Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission, Richard Jenkins to the Accomack-Northampton Regional Housing Authority, Jay Davenport to the board of directors of the Eastern Shore Public Library, John Harvey to the Greenbackville Harbor Committee, and Beth Onley to the local finance board.

SWELTERING SUMMER: FOUR MORE DAYS OF DANGEROUS HEAT AHEAD

By Connie Morrison

The dog days of summer will bite hard this weekend. Early in the week, the National Weather Service issued an excessive heat briefing for Friday through Sunday. The forecast high temperatures are now in the mid-90s instead of the upper 90s, but the heat index (how hot it feels when humidity is factored in) is still expected to be dangerously high.

The dangerous weather is expected to abate by Tuesday, when high temperatures are forecast to be in the upper 80s, closer to the normal high temperature for this time of year.

Last July, the National Weather Service's Wallops Island weather station recorded seven days on the Eastern Shore with temperatures above 90 degrees. The hottest day was July 6, with 94 degrees. As of July 16 of this year, the station had already recorded eight days above 90 degrees, with July 3 topping out at 97 degrees.

Heading into Pony Penning week — peak tourism time for Chincoteague Island — local EMS staff levels are already ramped up, said Emergency Management Coordinator Brian Rush. The town is prepared for all emergencies, including a large number of overheated tourists. "This is something we plan for," he said.

He will also be monitoring the electricity supply. "It puts a strain on the system," he said, and if there is a prolonged period without power, the town is prepared to open cooling stations.

But his biggest worry is the possibility of a large structure fire because the heat, compounded by firefighters' heavy turnout gear, makes them especially susceptible to overheating. "Sitting under a shade tree with temperatures this high is not enough," he said.

The website www.ready.gov provides information on how to prepare for and respond to emergencies, including excessive heat.

- Never leave a child, adult, or animal alone inside a vehicle on a warm day.
- Find places with air conditioning. Libraries, grocery stores, and community centers can provide a cool place to take a break from the heat.
- If you're outside, find shade. Wear a hat wide enough to protect your face.

- Wear loose, lightweight, light-colored clothing.
- Drink plenty of fluids to stay hydrated. If you or someone you care for is on a special diet, ask a doctor how best to accommodate it.
- Do not use electric fans when the temperature outside is more than 95 degrees, as this could increase the risk of heat-related illness. Fans create air flow and a false sense of comfort, but do not reduce body temperature.
- Avoid high-energy activities.
- Check yourself, family members, and neighbors for signs of heat-related illness.

The site urges everyone to know the signs of heat-related illness and the ways to respond.

Heat Cramps

Signs: Muscle pains or spasms in the stomach, arms, or legs

Actions: Go to a cooler location. Remove excess clothing. Take sips of cool sports drinks with salt and sugar. Get medical help if cramps last more than an hour.

Heat Exhaustion

Signs: Heavy sweating, paleness, muscle cramps, tiredness, weakness, dizziness, headache, nausea or vomiting, or fainting

Actions: Go to an air-conditioned place and lie down. Loosen or remove clothing. Take a cool bath. Take sips of cool sports drinks with salt and sugar. Get medical help if symptoms get worse or last more than an hour.

Heat Stroke

Signs: Extremely high body temperature (above 103 degrees) taken orally; red, hot, and dry skin with no sweat; rapid, strong pulse; dizziness; confusion; or unconsciousness Actions: Call 911 or get the person to a hospital immediately. Cool down with whatever methods are available until medical help arrives.

Finally, check on outdoor animals and bring pets inside. Provide plenty of fresh water.

And be sure to check for changes to scheduled outdoor activities. For instance, the Onancock Farmers and Artisans Market will reduce its hours to 9 to 11 a.m. this Saturday in an abundance of caution for vendors and customers.

Cape Charles Historic District Review Board Draws Fire for Construction Requirements

By Stefanie Jackson

When it comes to approving plans for construction in Cape Charles' historic district, the town's new historic district review board isn't measuring up to the expectations of contractors and homeowners.

"In the past three months of meetings, 75% of all applicants have been denied, deferred, or given conditional approval," and "no major projects" had been approved in two months, contractor Sean Ingram informed the town council June 20.

"All my current projects that have been denied or deferred would be approved normally and do meet all the historic guidelines," he added.

Following the April meeting of the Cape Charles Historic District Review Board, all but one member, Susan Eidam, were replaced. Eidam now chairs the board and serves with Diane D'Amico, Edward Eichman, Kerry Shackelford, and Edward Wells.

Contractors disagree with the new board's strict interpretation of the Cape Charles Historic District Guidelines and disapprove of the chairwoman's conduct.

Eyre Baldwin told the town council that he was "flabbergasted" by the June 18 historic district review board meeting and the "immoral" manner in which it was run.

The Secretary of the U.S. Department of the Interior provides a set of standards for the treatment of historic properties and their preservation, rehabilitation, restoration, and reconstruction.

Baldwin accused Eidam of quoting the standards out of context during the June 18 meeting. "What she didn't do was read the whole paragraph," Baldwin said.

"It's really dangerous when people run meetings like that. It makes it unaffordable for people invested in this town," he continued.

Baldwin suggested, "maybe that board and the town council should raise money and buy all the property back from people who invested until that point if you're going to make the affordability criteria overwhelming."

He called the historic district review board's rejection of numerous plans to build new homes or improve existing homes "throwing the baby out with the bathwater."

The Cape Charles town council held a special meeting July 8 on four historic district review board decisions that were appealed by the applicants.

The first appeal was made by contractor Jim Schneider, who was hired to build a new single-family dwelling for the Randy Christman family at 210 Bay Avenue.

His application was denied May 21 primarily because the home was designed as a three-story structure, but buildings in the R-1 district may not exceed 2.5 stories.

A half-story is an additional story that contains half as much square footage as a full story. This is typically accomplished by designing a roof with a steep pitch.

When the application was resubmitted June 18, it was denied even though the proposed home had been reduced to 2.5 stories. The historic district review board said the "mass" of the structure was out of character for the neighborhood.

In a June 22 email to Cape Charles Town Planner Zach Ponds, Schneider said he believed the historic district review board made a decision without considering the changes he had made to his construction plans.

"I had to stop the chair in the middle of her asking for a motion (to deny the application) to request to be heard," Schneider said.

Eidam suggested the home should have a brick exterior because eight other Bay Avenue homes are brick – even though 10 Bay Avenue homes have siding, Schneider said.

"I feel this is a board imposing personal bias rather than applying the historic district guidelines," he said.

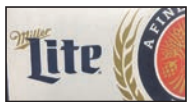

The second appeal was made by applicant and owner David Cobb, who was denied permission to replace old aluminum siding with vinyl siding at his home on 217 Jefferson Ave.

A decision was deferred April 16 with the suggestion that Cobb choose an alternative siding material such as wood or Hardie board, made from a mixture of cement, sand, and wood fibers and named for its creator, James Hardie.

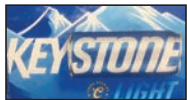

But the Cobbs stated in a letter that they preferred vinyl to "improve the look of our house, reduce maintenance and become more energy efficient," to add insulation and “long-term protection against weather, salt, and sand.”

At least five neighboring families wrote letters supporting the Cobbs’ choice of vinyl siding.

A decision was deferred again May 21 to investigate what was underneath the aluminum siding; it was wood siding that appeared to be in repairable condition.

The Historic District Guidelines do not require siding made of natural materials, but they “strongly suggest removal of synthetic sidings and restoration of the original siding material.”

The third and fourth appeals were made by Heather Behrens, Ingram’s office manager. The contractor was denied permission to build a garage at 602 Tazewell Ave. and a new single-family dwelling on Lot 96 on Washington Avenue.

Both applications were denied because the projects would have incorporated materials such as AZEK, which the historic district review board deemed inappropriate.

AZEK is a brand of building material made to resemble wood, but it’s actually vinyl. It’s popular for building decks, but the company also sells siding and trim. The siding is not thin like traditional vinyl siding. It’s as thick as a wooden board, and it can be cut and fastened like wood siding.

The Historic District Guidelines state, “consider using wood as the dominant cladding and decorative material for new construction,” but this does not

School Board Member Pleased With Consideration of Restorative Justice

By Stefanie Jackson

Nancy Proto, a member of the Northampton County School Board, recently reacted to the school board’s unanimous approval of her request to form a committee that will research how other school divisions have implemented restorative discipline – an alternative to traditional school discipline methods such as suspension and other punishments.

“It is my experience that kids – even those with severe discipline problems – come from loving homes,” Proto said.

She is pleased the school board will research alternative methods of helping students with behavioral issues, because punishments generally don’t work, she said.

According to research on discipline, “punishment is most effective for kids mean the use of wood is required, the town planner said.

The town council granted all four of the appeals presented July 8.

Eidam disagreed with their decisions. “If we’re going to do the right thing by the community, if we want to live in a historic district that we can be proud of, that attracts tourists, that attracts investors and economic vitality, we’re not going to get there by having a bunch of vinyl” and other synthetic material and trim on the historic district homes, she said.

that need it the least,” Proto said during the discussion of her proposal at the June 27 school board meeting.

“I can tell you that punishment was pretty effective with my kids. My kids had a different kind of home. You know, we also had a lot of love, we had a lot of teaching, we had a lot of everything,” she said.

But that doesn’t mean kids with discipline problems don’t come from loving homes, she later clarified.

“Parents love and care about their kids and want what is best for them, but lack the skills, knowledge and resources to help them,” Proto said.

Ruby Payne is a popular speaker and educator who has written books and developed teacher training sessions on understanding how poverty affects students. Proto agrees with Payne that student behavior issues often stem from “a ‘poverty of resources,’ not a lack of love.”

Proto has acknowledged that sometimes in-school or out-of-school suspension is an appropriate consequence for student misbehavior. Restorative discipline would be implemented in Northampton schools to reduce the number of suspensions issued, not eliminate them, she said.

Data shows that in Northampton’s public schools, two and a half times as many students are suspended as compared to the state average, and a short-term suspension can last up to 10 days, or two weeks of instruction.

Chairman William Oakley said the new committee would be formed during the school board’s July 18 work session.

Shore Native: Coast Guardsman of the Year

By Linda Cicaira

A native of the Eastern Shore, Petty Officer 1st Class Nathan Reynolds, was named Coast Guardsman of the Year at a recent ceremony in Washington, D.C.

Reynolds used a small boat to search for four people after an accident in the Chesapeake Bay. "Searching in the dark, he found them and rescued them with his team," according to the Military Times.

To see a video about his story, visit a posting on Facebook by Admiral Karl Schultz at www.facebook.com/CommandantUSCG/videos/330343731185098/?v=330343731185098

"It's the attention to detail that makes the difference," Reynolds said, crediting his father with teaching him "everything ... I grew up on the lower Chesapeake Bay and I was able to see the many things that can go wrong on the water."

The 29-year-old has already been in the Coast Guard for 11 years. He is on his way to his fourth duty station and looks forward to coming to work because he believes what he does matters.

"I'm a small boat coxswain whose primary mission is doing search and rescue," he said. "And I love it. Because on someone's worst day, you can be a ray of sunshine. It's about giving back and helping others when they need it." Reynolds has saved nine lives in the past several months.

Being the son of a senior chief boatswain's mate who served for 26 years, Reynolds knew he wanted the same career, he told the publication. "I really didn't think of doing anything else," he said. "I want to make chief and become either the officer in charge of an aids-to-navigation team or station of my own. I've got eight-years left at a minimum and hopefully I can make them count for the betterment of others."

Puerto Rican Most-Wanted Arrested by U.S. Marshalls

He was on Puerto Rico's most wanted list after being charged in absentia with committing two murders, three attempted murders, and weapons violations, in 2016. And he was living in Painter until the U.S. Marshalls Service arrested him Friday, July 12.

Jonathan Avilés-Alers, 28, was captured at the 33000 block of Lankford Highway in Painter at about 6:45 a.m.

"When members of the task force approached the house from the front, he (Avilés-Alers) ran around the house and into the backyard where he was taken into custody by other task force members who were already in place," a spokesperson for the marshalls office said.

Avilés-Alers is being held in the Eastern Shore Regional Jail pending extradition. The crimes are alleged to have occurred in Isabela.

According to accounts printed in several online newspapers, the defendant was in a crowd at about 10:46 p.m., Oct. 23, 2016, in between highways 474 and 475 of the sector four streets Chelao of Isabela. People had gathered in relation to general elections. The suspect "and a second unidentified individual, approached," drew weapons, "and opened fire."

Anfernee Joel Luciano Ramos, 19, of Aguadilla, and Robbie R. Torres Sibeiro, 22, of Isabela, died. Jorge L. Pellet Valley, 18, was injured in the right arm. Anthony Aviles Guzman, 23, was shot in the left arm. René Joel Esponda Rodríguez was wounded in the right leg. One theory was there had been a dispute involving drug turfs.

According to <https://jornadapr.com> the arrest warrant included "a bail ascending to $6 million."

The arrest was a joint effort between U.S. Marshalls Service fugitive task forces in New York/New Jersey-Trenton Division and Norfolk, assisted by Accomack County Sheriff's Office and Norfolk Fugitive Unit.

The mission of U.S. Marshalls Service fugitive task forces is to locate and apprehend the most violent and dangerous fugitives and to provide assistance to other federal, state and local law enforcement agencies in support of their fugitive investigations.

Pedro Fortier, a spokesperson for the Office of Federal Bailiffs, told www.elvocero.com "The task force of Puerto Rico, together with the Arrest Unit of the Puerto Rico Police, received information that was provided to the marshal's office in Virginia, which executed the arrest."

Man Sentenced For Arson Threat

A Nassawadox man was given a 10-year prison term for threatening to burn down his family's home on Jan. 31.

All but seven months of the term was suspended. Ja'Quan Rkese Jones, 19, of Franktown Road, was put on indefinite probation. Jones was also given 12-month suspended sentences for two counts of misdemeanor assault and battery of a family member.

According to court records, Jones assaulted both his 11-year-old brother and his mother. He also turned on a burner on the kitchen stove and said he was going to burn down the house.

Yakima Taylor, 27, of Pennyville Road in Painter, was acquitted of counts of forging and uttering checks on Sep. 28, 2018.

Jason Scott Clark, 30, of Cobb Station Road in Cape Charles, pleaded guilty to misdemeanor giving false information to a police officer and was given a 60-day suspended jail term for the offense. Clark was put on probation for two years. He was initially charged with giving false information on a firearm transaction, which is a felony. Clark was also convicted of transporting a firearm while under a protection order, which is a misdemeanor. The offenses occurred Feb. 15.

20 Years for Murder-for-Hire Co-Conspirator

Keenan Jibrel Berry, one of several men accused of conspiring to commit the capital murder of a police informant in a 2017 scheme, was sentenced last week in Accomack Circuit Court to 20 years in prison. Fifteen years of the term was suspended.

"I didn't take part," Berry, 26, of Parksley, told Judge W. Revell Lewis. Berry pleaded no contest to the charge in a plea bargain agreement with Commonwealth's Attorney Spencer Morgan last May. Charges of capital murder and obstruction of justice were not prosecuted.

"You were invited to testify against Mr. (Evron) Strand," Morgan said of the man who made arrangements for the death of Nathaniel Johnson.

"One, I'm not a snitch," said Berry. "I don't go against anyone. I got my own stuff to worry about. I haven't been active gang in seven years." Berry said he didn't testify because he didn't know anything. "He (Strand) was doing a bunch of talking and I was just listening."

But a recorded phone call between Strand, who was in jail awaiting trial for cocaine distribution, and Berry, proved otherwise. Berry could be heard reporting that Johnson was at Linhaven Circle. Johnson later got shot three times in the street there as he was walking from a gathering to his grandmother's house.

Deputy T.C. Haines, of the Accomack County Sheriff's Office, said Berry spoke to another suspect's father when he was taking Berry back to the Accomack Jail after his May trial. "Don't worry bro, I didn't tell them anything," Haines said Berry yelled.

After the sentencing, out in the hall, Stretch Giddens told Berry's lawyer the only thing the defendant yelled to him was, "Tell your son, 'keep your head up.' That's all he said." Giddens' son is Roquan Rogers, who is accused of being the shooter in the murder-for-hire plot. Giddens has attended most of the trials.

"I have nothing to do with it," Berry testified. "Nothing to do with money ... didn't ask. Don't have nothing to do with it. Aaron Bowens (another suspect) seen him at Perdue. Nothing more or less. Cynthia Harmon, (another suspect), we stay in the same neighborhood. I'm an innocent man ... trying to get home to my son. I don't know these people man."

"You maintained today that you really didn't do anything," said Lewis. "Deputy Haines said what you said ... not consistent. The target was Nathaniel Johnson. Knowing where he is, you provided information about that."

Several character witnesses testified for Berry.

In another case, Rickey Ricardo Jones, 59, of Michelle Circle in Melfa, was sentenced to 10 years in prison with all but three years suspended for possession of cocaine in 2017. Charges of possession with intent to distribute marijuana and possession of a firearm by a felon, made against Jones, were continued.

Hearing Postponed for Former Hallwood Clerk

The preliminary hearing was continued again Monday in Accomack General District Court for Angela Hinman "Angel" Taylor, the former Hallwood clerk who was storing financial records in her car in 2017 when the vehicle was destroyed in a fire.

Taylor was later charged with 65 felony counts of embezzlement. Hallwood Mayor Jackie Poulson, state police Special Investigator A. Pittman, and an AN-EC worker were subpoenaed to testify Monday. Previous preliminary hearings were set for February and April.

Taylor, 46, of Hall Street in Hallwood, was arrested in January. She is free on $5,500 bond. The new hearing date is Aug. 19.

Use This Guide To Get the Most from the 2019 Pony Penning Week

By Krystle Bono

It's that time of year again when the much anticipated blast of red smoke will signal slack tide, giving the Saltwater Cowboys the go-ahead to start the annual pony swim, an event that has paved a permanent path in history for Chincoteague and its herd of four-legged legends. Thousands will migrate to the island, up before the sun to stake out a piece of shoreline, all in hopes of catching a glimpse of the hundreds of fuzzy noses that will tread above the Assateague Channel down Pony Lane, those very noses read about in the famous "Misty" novel that ignited dreams of owning a famous Chincoteague wild pony in many an equine-loving child's heart.

For 94 years, the last part of July has centered on this monumental event, and it's the local Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company that harnesses this local holiday and brings it to life year after year. The week-long affair helps control the ponies' population, as well as helping to fund the company's equipment necessities and pony veterinary care, with the company managing and overseeing the ponies.

Last year's auction brought in a record-breaking total of $228,400, surpassing the previous record of $209,900 from 62 ponies, set the year prior in 2017. A total of 53 ponies were sold last summer, with the average pony going for $4,309. To date, the highest bid was placed in 2015 for $25,000 on Surfer's Blue Moon, a buyback pony sponsored and named by the Chincoteague Pony Legacy Group. "Buyback" foals have been selected to replenish the herd and are bought, named by their sponsor, and returned to Assateague Island to live out their days.

The full week of events begins this Saturday with the South Herd roundup, and concludes the following Saturday, with the adult pony swim back to their home pastures Friday morning. Below is the complete list of events, tips, and information as contributed by the Chincoteague Chamber of Commerce and Certified Visitor Center for pony-spectators to make the most out of their trip to Pony Lane.

Saturday, July 20 - South Herd Roundup (approximately 7 a.m.)

•Marking the first major event before the Pony Swim, the Saltwater Cowboys will ride out to the southern end of Assateague Island at about 7 a.m. to herd the more than 50 adults and foals that inhabit that particular part of the island into the Southern Corral. The public is welcome to come see and take photos of the ponies on Beach Road at the Southern Corral from July 21 through July 24. Note: This is a new time from previous years; normally, the South Herd roundup takes place during the afternoon the Saturday before the swim.

•The carnival will be open from 7 to 11 p.m. Rides, games, food, and raffles. Tickets for the Neptune pony go on sale at information stand. You must have a ticket and be present at the carnival bandstand at 7 p.m. on Wednesday to win.

•Trolley service last call at 11 p.m. in front of carnival grounds (25 cents per ride).

Sunday, July 21 - North Herd Roundup - Public is NOT permitted (approximately 6 a.m.)

•The northern end of Assateague Island is home to approximately 150 ponies and their foals, the largest population on the island. The Saltwater Cowboys herd this group into the Northern Corral. Please note that this is not a public event, as this part of the island is not accessible. Special bus tours are offered on the Refuge Trek to visit the corral after the roundup. Call 757-336-3696 for reservations.

Monday, July 22 - Beach Walk

•North meets south when the Saltwater Cowboys release the Northern herd ponies and walk them along the shore of the Atlantic Ocean to join the ponies at the Southern Corral. The ponies will leave Northern Corral at daybreak. It is advised to be at Assateague Island National Seashore by 6 a.m. for parking purposes (the island opens at 5 a.m.). Bring your beach gear and stay for the day or walk behind the ponies to the corral and visit awhile. Bikers and hikers may access the beach via Swan Cove Trail.

•The carnival will be open from 7 to 11 p.m.

•Trolley service last call at 11 p.m. in front of carnival grounds (25 cents per ride).

Tuesday, July 23 - Vet Check and Selection of Buyback Ponies - South Corral (approximately 9 a.m.)

•Veterinary checks will take place to be sure the ponies are healthy for the big swim. The public may view the ponies in the Southern Corral during the vet checks. Parking is available in the lot at Woodland Trail.

•The carnival will be open from 7 to 11 p.m.

•Trolley service last call at 11 p.m. in front of carnival grounds (25 cents per ride).

Wednesday, July 24 - Pony Swim (8:30 a.m. - 10:30 a.m. window)

•The Chincoteague Ponies will swim across the Assateague Channel on the east side of the island down Pony Swim Lane at slack tide, led by the Saltwater Cowboys, just south of Veterans Memorial Park. People who plan to view the swim from Pony Swim Lane are advised to wear appropriate attire—old clothing and closed-toe shoes or muck boots—as this area is very muddy.

•The first foal to come ashore will be named King or Queen Neptune and will be given away in a raffle drawing at the carnival grounds bandstand at 7 p.m. Tickets are sold each night at the carnival and during the wait time for the swim. You must have a ticket and you must be present to win.

•After swimming the short distance across the channel, the ponies will rest for approximately an hour before parading to the carnival grounds on Main Street.

•There is no charge for parking or seeing the pony swim. The Town of Chincoteague provides a large Jumbotron to enhance the Pony Swim experience at Veterans Memorial Park. The only parking at this location is designated for tour buses. All those seeking handicap parking and all day-trippers are encouraged to go to the Municipal Center and catch the free shuttle. There will be a handicap accessible bus for your convenience. Those staying on the island may catch a shuttle bus near their lodging. Shuttles begin at 5 a.m. and end one hour after the ponies arrive at the carnival grounds.

•Charter boats are also available for watching the Pony Swim. Call the chamber office at 757-336-6161 for assistance in finding available seats. Spaces fill up quickly so don't wait until the last minute.

*Note: The Coast Guard is on alert for illegal charter boats during the swim and is also cautioning tourists attending to avoid boats that do not have licensed captains, and in some cases, have not been inspected by the Coast Guard. Also, pets are not permitted in Memorial Park or the carnival grounds.

•The carnival will be open from 7 to 11 p.m.

•Trolley service will begin at 10 a.m. with last call at 11 p.m. in front of carnival grounds (25 cents per ride).

Thursday, July 25 - Pony Auction - Carnival grounds (8 a.m.)

•The annual pony auction raises funds for the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company and for the veterinary care of the ponies. The auction also serves to help control the pony population on Chincoteague Island. Foals will be auctioned at 8 a.m. on the Carnival grounds, and winners will receive certificates of purchase from the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company.

•Select ponies, designated as "buybacks," will also be auctioned, but returned to the herd to help maintain the population. Winners of buyback ponies gets to name their adopted ponies, and proceeds from the auction are donated to regional charity. The buyback auctions are typically the most popular at this event, so if you're interested in naming a Chincoteague pony be ready to bid!

A few tips:

1. Be there early if you wish to bid on a pony. The crowds are huge and you will want a space as close to the front as possible. The bleachers that have been used in the past will not be available this year, so if you want to sit, bring a chair.

2. Wear a sun hat and sunscreen. Bring plenty to drink. A pencil and paper are always useful. A camera is nice. A folding chair is a good idea since the bleachers fill up quickly.

3. You do not have to register for the auction. If you raise your hand during the auctioneer's chant, you are making a bid!

4. Transportation home for your new foal must be approved by the pony committee. (A horse trailer.) Ponies must be picked up by 5 p.m. Friday.

5. The only acceptable forms of payment are Visa, Mastercard, and cash. The fire company will not accept checks.

- Trolley service will run 7 a.m. to 1 p.m., and regular evening schedule with last call at 11 p.m. in front of carnival grounds (25 cents per ride)
- The carnival will be open from 7 to 11 p.m.

Summer Survey Elicits Readers' 'Bucket List' Dreams of Travel

By Linda Cicaira

Travel rated number one on the bucket lists of Accomack and Northampton folks, according to results of a recent email survey conducted by the Eastern Shore Post. The majority of participants would also choose pizza as the food they could eat every day for the rest of their lives.

The most useful items they own include their vehicles and their phones. About half said they could easily live for a month without an internet connection. A smile is the top attraction survey takers notice when seeing a person for the first time. Besides getting their loved ones out of a burning house, most of the participants said they would attempt to save photographs.

Ed Waterhouse, of San Diego, could eat nothing but rice pudding for the rest of his life and be happy. He left his native Chincoteague at 18, "but never lost my connection or felt I belonged anywhere else." On the top of his bucket list is flying the old Spanish Trail from San Diego to Florida. Flying has been his hobby for 71 years. Waterhouse mostly uses the internet for "e-checking" so he could manage by getting out the actual checkbook. His iPad is the most useful thing he owns and he would try to save it from his burning house. He first notices a person's posture.

The top thing on Patty Bergquist's bucket list is going to see a Cowboys game in Texas. Giving up the internet would pose no problems for her. Since high school, her favorite hobby has been reading. She could eat pizza all the time. The most useful thing Bergquist owns is her car. The first thing she notices about a person is his or her smile. She would want to save pictures from her house fire.

Beverly Lynch's bucket list includes making a success of her next painting. She could give up the internet but that would entail no longer talking to friends and relatives on Facebook and "since I don't have TV, I would also miss news and weather," the Painter woman said. Her hobbies are reading, gardening, horses, and art, equally. If she could only eat one food, she would choose "potatoes in all their manifestations." Her house is her most useful item. She notices the hair or face of others first and would want to save her paintings from her burning house.

"I've seen all I need to see and done pretty much all I wanted to do," said Denise Bowden, of Chincoteague. "No list here, I just want to retire in five years." She said it would be a little tough to give up the internet. "But I'd live through it," Bowden wrote. "I spent the first 30 years of my life without it, so a month wouldn't kill me." But it would mean no "Amazon Prime and keeping in touch with loved ones via Facebook."

Bowden would eat any kind of Japanese or Chinese food every day for the rest of her life. She chose "My Milwaukee Impact Cordless Screwdriver/Drill" as her handiest gadget. Bowden said she notices eyes first. "They show love or they don't." The fire department member said if she could save an object from her burning house, it would be "a pen and ink sketch of my parents that was done by a very good friend of mine. I treasure it."

"I've always wanted to just travel outside of the USA, but I don't have the finances," said Dawn Conquest, of Onancock. "I would love to go to Hawaii. Yes, I could live without the internet for a month. I would just have to give up Facebook and YouTube, which I probably stay on more than I need to. I can manage by doing more outdoor activities." Conquest loves to bake. She would also enjoy eating good cheesecake forever. The most useful things Conquest owns are her "health and strength."

"Just smile and say hello," she said. "That stands out for me. I don't like when people just stare at you like something is on your face."

Curtis Spady, of Nassawadox, wants to retire before his company closes its doors. His favorite hobby is yard work/landscaping. He could eat fish for the rest of his life. His smartphone is the most useful thing he owns. If his house caught on fire, he would want to save the “Silver Tarpon that I caught in 1973 with my cousin, Jack Brady, out of Oyster.”

Julie Nash, of Parksley, wants to go to Greece someday. She admits she couldn't live without the internet. Her favorite hobby is painting. Nash has been making her art for 10 years. If she could only eat one food for the rest of her life, she would choose chocolate. Her car is the most useful thing she owns. She notices a person's eyes first. Nash would try to save her painting of Jesus from her house if it caught on fire.

Max Bendix, of Parksley, wants to go to Europe. He could manage “fine” without the internet. His favorite hobby is golf, a game he has been playing for a decade. He could eat nothing but pasta. His truck is his most useful possession. Bendix notices someone's appearance first and he would save important documents from his house if it caught fire.

Sheila Spelman, of Onancock, said her bucket list includes visiting all 50 states. “I have 4 to go — Alabama, Arkansas, Wisconsin, and Minnesota,” she wrote. “This is a diverse and beautiful country. If you ever get to Grand Teton National Park be prepared to be awed.

“I am old enough to remember life before the internet and wise enough to know it is a convenience, not a necessity,” she continued. “Without the net, I would revert to behaviors ... like renewing my subscription to a daily newspaper, visiting the library more often, brushing up on my letter writing skills, and buying some postal stamps and making more purchases at actual stores. I would also dust off my dictionary.” Her favorite hobby is reading. “My mother had three rules: brush your teeth twice a day, wash your hands after using the bathroom, and read every day.”

Spelman would choose “a hot bowl of homemade vegetable beef soup” as her lifetime food. “The most useful thing I own is my vacuum cleaner ... I would be lost without my Dyson. The first thing I notice about a person is their facial expression. I find that the best predictor of how to proceed with the encounter.” She would save an old photo album from her burning house. The book includes photos from her first 17 years when she lived in Scranton, Pa., around grandparents, great grandparents, and aunts and uncles.

Bill Payne, of Cape Charles, doesn't have a bucket list. He would be “diminished” without the internet but would manage by visiting a library more often. Running and getting exercise are his favorite hobbies. He's enjoyed them for 50 years. Payne said he could eat shellfish alone. The most useful thing he owns is his computer. He notices someone's smile first and would want to save business and personal papers and keepsakes from burning.

Nicki Tiffany, of Cape Charles, could manage without the internet, “I would go back to reading hard copies of books, doing crosswords in the paper instead of online, and writing real letters.” Her favorite hobby has always been art in any form. Pizza would be the food she would choose forever. “Paper and a writing implement” are her most useful tools. She notices a person's demeanor first. After loved ones, she would save, “the artwork we own - it is irreplaceable.”

Michael Stephano, of Cashville, doesn't have a bucket list. “I ate my dessert first,” he wrote. Stephano could give up the internet but that would mean not working. Boating is his hobby and he's enjoyed it all his life. He said he could eat only scrapple forever. His truck is the most useful thing he owns. Stephano notices a person's aurora first. He wouldn't risk his life to save any material objects from his burning house. “Let it all go!”

Jamie Mackie, of San Francisco, formerly of Onancock, said he wants to visit Machu Picchu, an Incan citadel in the Andes Mountains of Peru. “I would jump on any opportunity to give it (the internet) up, even for a couple of days. The bad news is it would only take that long to be fired from my job. I am incredibly dependent on my phone, even when I'm on vacation.” Mackie has been mountain biking for 22 years. He chose pizza for the food he could eat from now until the end of time. His bicycle is the most useful thing he owns.

He notices a person's smile first.

The top thing on Susannah Morey's bucket list is "to enjoy life! That means lots of food, friends, and breweries. I could make it a month without the internet," the Melfa woman said. "I would be giving up work emails and the noise of social media, which I enjoy but also like to have breaks from. I would finally be able to finish the book I'm reading." Morey's favorite hobby is hiking. "I went on my first real hike last year to the top of Lion's Head in Cape Town; it really opened my eyes to what I've been missing!"

She could eat Taco Bell Crunchwrap Supreme with no beef for the rest of her life. Her glasses are the most useful thing she owns. She notices a person's attitude first.

Judy Brunk, of Jamesville, wants to get "rid of everything in my house and outbuildings that I don't use or have need of anymore." She could also do without the internet "forever and wish it had never been. Life was simpler then and people were nicer." Photography and greeting cards are her hobbies. She's been making photos for 65 years and creating cards for 11 years. Brunk could eat oatmeal every day for the rest of her life. Her dishwasher is the most useful thing she owns. "Their smile" is what she first notices about others.

Robert Doughty, of South Chesebrough, said he has nothing left to do on his bucket list. "I simply do not want to think of living without the internet for a month." His favorite hobby is gardening and he's been doing it for 60 years. Seafood is what he could eat forever. His computer is his most useful belonging. He first notices a person's mannerisms. He would want to save his wallet and car keys if his house caught on fire.

Ellen Kellam, of Eastville, would love to travel all over Europe. She thinks she could live without the internet. "But the first few days would be difficult. I don't have television, so I use my computer to watch TV shows and movies. I suppose I'd manage by talking on the phone more and reading loads of books and magazines. I love gardening and started about six years ago." She would eat french fries forever. Kellam said her cell phone is her most useful possession. She notices people's eyes first and would save photos from her burning house if she could.

Carrie Jacobson, of Wachapreague, is living her top bucket list quest by traveling about the country selling her paintings. She could manage without the internet. "It would be hard to give up email," she wrote. "I'd have to use the phone much more and write more letters."

Jacobson picked bacon as the one food she could single out forever. The most useful thing she owns is her car-go van. She notices people's expressions first. Besides her loved ones, she would save "a photo of my mom with our old dog."

"At this point, it's simply purchasing our first home," Zach Ponds, of Cape Charles, said of his top bucket list item. "I would love to live without internet for a month." No more "Facebook, Googling things, paying bills online, and email," he said. "I would be able to manage by paying bills via mail, having to actually call friends and family to see what is going on in their lives, give my best guess or go to the library when I don't know the answer to something, and I would have to have people contact me via phone or text rather than email."

Ponds' favorite hobby is playing fantasy football. He's been doing that for about three years. He would choose Italian as the type of food he could eat every day forever. But if he had to narrow it down to only one item, Ponds says he would choose raw oysters. He would try to save important documents from his burning house.

For Nancy Kupar-Page, of Parkesley, returning to Italy with her family to visit other relatives is high on her bucket list. She could give up the internet and spend more time in her gardens, reading a book or two, going fishing, and doing other things she loves. Her favorite hobbies are fishing and archaeological digs. Kupar-Page had a hard time deciding between lobster and hamburgers for the only food she could eat for the rest of her life. Her most useful possession is a Swiss Army knife. The first thing she notices is a person's appearance. She would want to save some letters in her mom's and dad's handwriting from a fire.

Eastville Community Health Center Well Underway Almost Fully Funded

By Stefanie Jackson

The new Eastville Community Health Center under construction is nearly half built and almost fully funded, Eastern Shore Rural Health CEO Nancy Stern announced last week.

“A picture’s worth a thousand words,” Stern told Northampton supervisors before she showed them video footage of the ongoing construction.

As of July 9, construction of the 24,500-square-foot building was 46% complete. The Eastville Community Health Center will replace the old Franktown and Bayview community health centers that have only 13,700 square feet combined.

The cost of the project is $11.7 million, and 96% of the funds have been raised, Stern said.

Another $514,000 is needed. The Cabell Foundation, of Richmond, Va., has challenged ESRH to raise the remaining funds through its award of a $150,000 matching grant.

An anonymous donor kickstarted the “last hurrah” of the fundraising effort with a $5,000 donation, and he challenges the public to match his contribution, Stern said.

Eastern Shore residents have already contributed $1.4 million to ESRH’s capital fund campaign.

The Eastville Community Health Center is similar in design to Eastern Shore Rural Health’s two newest community health centers in Atlantic and Onley.

The new buildings are recognized by their green roofs. The materials to build the Eastville health center’s green roof are expected to arrive by early August, Stern said.

The new health center was originally expected to open in the fall of 2019, but not wanting “to over-promise and under-deliver,” Stern is now projecting the building will open for business in “very early 2020.”

The Franktown and Bayview health centers currently employ about 70 people, and the move to the Eastville health center will add 11 new jobs, Stern said.

The two old buildings will be maintained and six dental chairs will remain open at the Franktown health center, she confirmed. The entire Franktown campus will be used for various services, including ESRH’s call center.

Stern announced that the new health center will be named after Calvin Brickhouse, who died in 2013. Brickhouse was a Northampton County teacher, principal, and school board member who also served on Eastern Shore Rural Health’s board of directors.

Supervisor John Coker thanked Stern for “everything you and your organization do for this community. It’s outstanding. I’ve been there, my grandchildren have been there, and you’ve taken good care of us.”

“Anybody that hasn’t gone there, please go,” he told the public in attendance. “I think you’ll get great service, it’s usually very fast, and if you call ahead they’ll tell you when you can come in and they’ll fit you right in.”

Senior Girls Grab the Second State Title for Central Accomack

Story by Baylee Justis

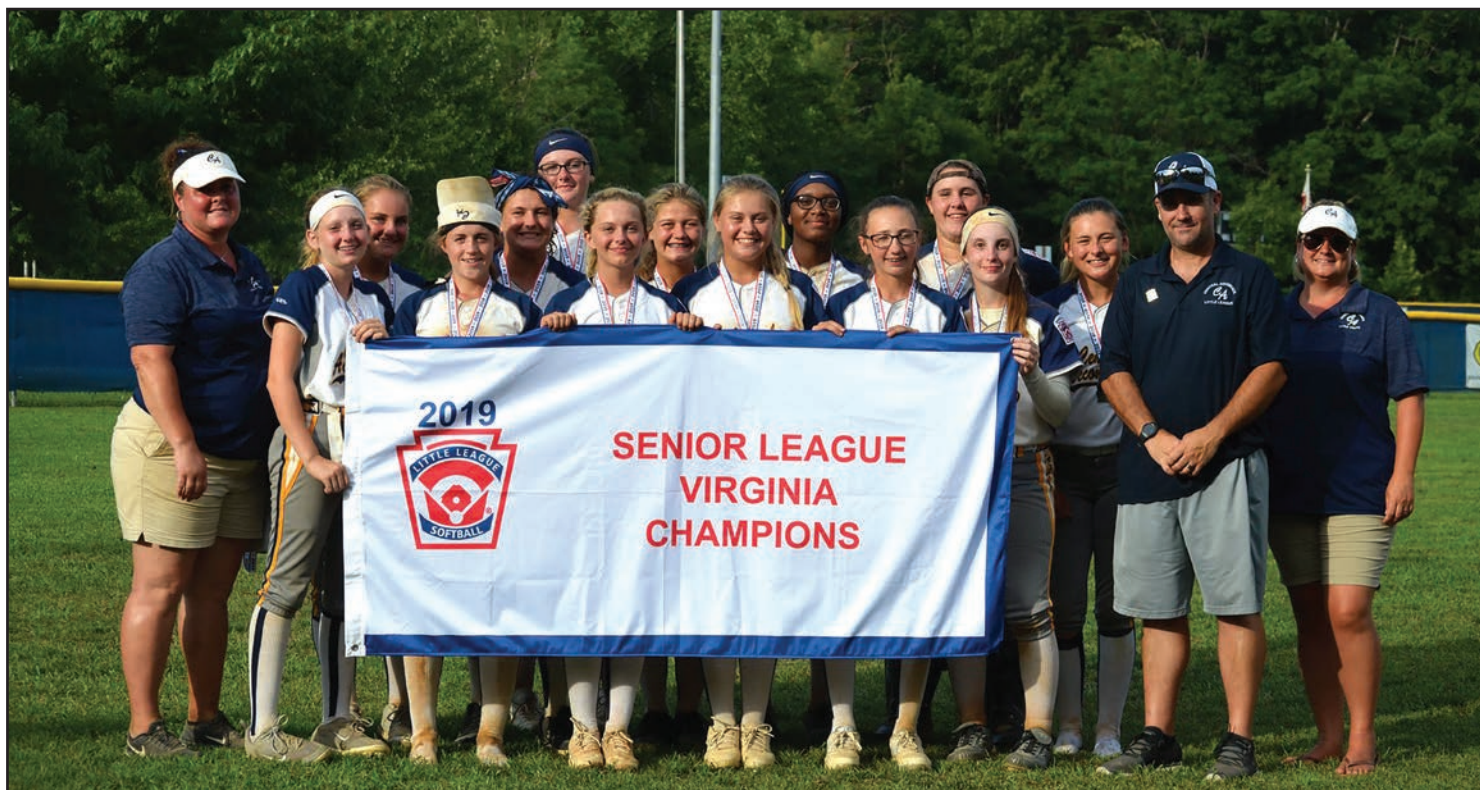

Photos by Kathryn Hall

The Central Accomack senior girls defeated Bluefield Graham twice on Sunday, making them the state champions and giving a second state title to Central Accomack Little League. This is the first time that District 8 has sent two teams, the senior boys and the senior girls, to regionals.

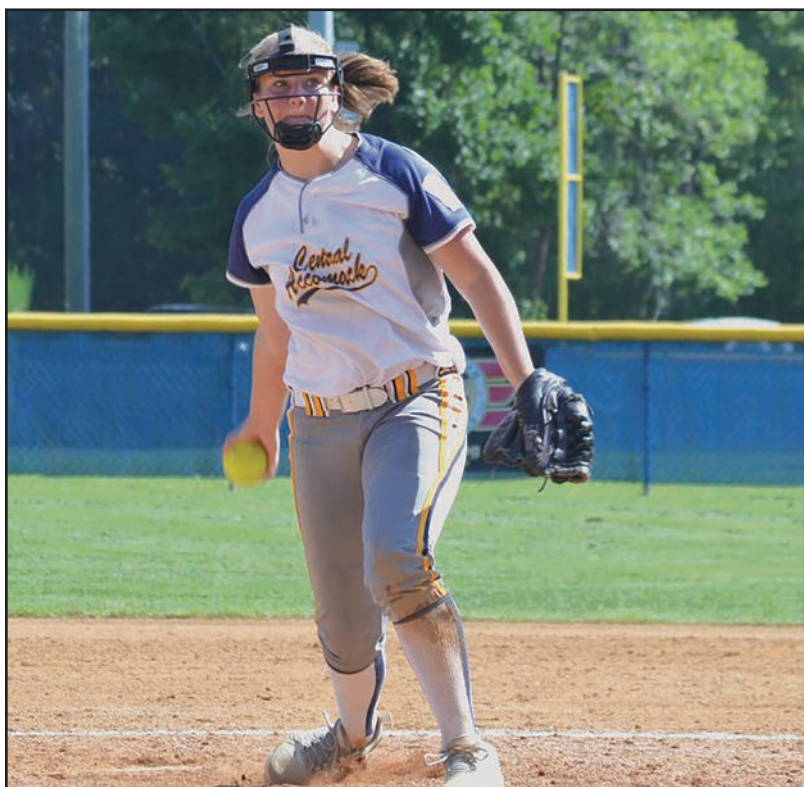

After an unlucky draw, having to play the defending champions, the senior girls lost to Bluefield Graham during the opening round of the tournament on Friday, putting them in the losers bracket. This meant that Central had to win the next four games to play for the championship.

Knowing the odds weren't in their favor, the team went to work Saturday morning posting an impressive 15-0 shutout against Prince William.

The next game was scheduled for later that afternoon when the girls faced Woodstock-Edinburg. Offensive leaders for this game were Haylie Justice, Chloe Hall, and Jordan Crockett. Justice went 2-for-4 at the plate, hitting her very first home run, and batted in four runs. Hall and Crockett each had two RBIs. The girls posted another shutout, making the final score 12-0.

Alana Shea took the victory on the mound allowing zero runs on one hit over six innings and retiring nine batters.

Central moved on to play its third game of the day, facing Norton. The teams were tied at six when Justice hit her second dinger of the tournament, driving in three runs and allowing Central to secure the win 9-6.

Jamie Wert, who put one out in the first inning, and Brianna Rucker also led the team offensively, dominating two of their three at-bats and knocking in two runs each.

The girls finally ended that day with a 3-0 record, and were ready to battle Olive Branch the next morning.

Wert had a perfect offensive appearance, hitting 3-for-3 and batting in four runs. Hailey Berry dominated three of her five at-bats and drove in three runs. Rucker and Justice also contributed to the offensive side, each earning two RBIs.

Shea earned another win on the rubber, allowing three hits and two runs while striking out two. Berry came in to relieve Shea, retiring five batters and recording the last 10 outs to earn the victory for Central, 12-5.

This allowed the senior girls to advance and play the team that defeated them the first game and the defending champions, Bluefield Graham. Since they were undefeated, Central would have to beat them twice to win the championship.

It was a close first game against Bluefield, as the teams were tied at four, when Rucker doubled on a 0-1 count, scoring one run, and making the final score 5-4. The girls were now guaranteed a spot in the championship game on Sunday evening and would be playing Bluefield for the third time in the tournament.

Kathleen McAuliffe notched four hits with five appearances and batted in three runs, leading Central offensively. Crockett and Wert also collected multiple hits, along with Jaelyn Killmon, Sarah Taylor, Justice, Rucker, and Berry who collected one hit, giving Central a victory over Bluefield Graham with a score of 8-5 and making them the state champions.

The senior girls are headed to Salisbury, N.C., for the Southeast Regional tournament, where they will play their first game on July 19 at noon against North Carolina.

Fishing from the Shore

By Bill Hall

Fishing action has been almost as hot as the recent temperatures. Offshore, dolphin (mahi) and both blue and white marlin have been frequent catches in the Washington and Norfolk Canyons. A lot of anglers are forgoing the good marlin bite in the Norfolk Canyon and concentrating on the outstanding big-eye tuna bite while it lasts. Cobia and red drum numbers remain high in the lower Chesapeake Bay, where flounder numbers have also been reported to be on the increase. Spanish mackerel are still being caught on both sides of the peninsula by anglers who have mastered high-speed trolling. On the seaside, large sharks are prowling the inlets and sloughs just off the beach.

Lower Shore — Chris Snook, of Chris' Bait and Tackle, reports that cobia fishing has been "great." When the seas are flat, cobia can be seen "everywhere including lots of little ones," she said. The spadefish bite around the third and fourth islands of the bridge-tunnel has been productive. "Some days the area has so many boats that the water around the islands looks like a parking lot," added Snook. Marker 262, out of Oyster, has produced the only notable croaker bite. Snook commented that flounder numbers have really improved, with lots of smaller fish in the mix, both out of Oyster and at the high-rise section of the bridge-tunnel. The waters south of Kiptopeke still hold outstanding sea mullet (whiting) action.

Jeb Brady, of Bailey's Bait and Tackle, confirmed that the cobia bite has been good this week for both sight casters and bait fishermen. The cobia action stretches from the waters off Cape Charles all the way down to the bridge-tunnel. Brady said the both the Plantation Light and the fourth island have been productive for spadefish. Spanish mackerel action is still going strong, especially in the vicinities of buoys 36-A and 42-A. The piers are producing sand mullet (whiting) and small croaker, with larger croaker being reported out of Oyster.

A group fishing with the Wingman Guide Service was able to cash in on the schools of red drum prowling the surface near the bridge-tunnel this week.

Wachapreague — Captain Lindsay Paul, of Trident Tackle, reports inshore "flounder fishing is down from what it was." A recent trip produced three keepers out of a catch of 12 fish. Spanish mackerel catches are coming from the waters just beyond the inlet. Flounder are being caught on the wrecks, with spadefish and a few cobia coming from buoy 10. In the blue water, anglers are finding dolphin (mahi), marlin, and a few yellowfin tuna. Paul said an unidentified angler returned to port with a blue marlin that exceeded 500 pounds.

Chincoteague — Donna Rae Roeske, at Captain Bob's Marina, described the flounder fishing inside the Chincoteague Channel as "steady" with Gulp Swimming Mullet in the pink coloration combined with a live minnow being the top producing bait combination, followed by orange-colored Gulp/minnow combos. The waters between buoy 14 and the inlet are holding a variety of bottom species including flounder, croaker, and kingfish (whiting). From the mouth of the inlet and out, sharks and Spanish mackerel have dominated the action. Anglers fishing the surf were catching a variety of smaller species, such as perch, spot, and kingfish (whiting) and sharks.

Roeske said the subway cars on Blackfish Banks have been producing catches of black sea bass, triggerfish, spadefish, and flounder. Further offshore, dolphin (mahi) and yellowfin tuna have been caught by chunking over the Parking Lot. The offshore wrecks are still holding black sea bass.

Jimmy Vasiliou, of Captain Steve's Bait and Tackle, reported the island has seen the best king mackerel fishing in memory, with anglers catching kings, both trolling and jigging. The Lumpy Bottom and the Parking Lot were noted as productive king mackerel locations. Closer to the beach, Spanish mackerel were the most productive mackerel specie. Vasiliou noted that Captain Tim of Chincoteague Bay Adventures returned to port with a nice catch of Spanish mackerel on a recent trip, while Captain John on the Close Enuff returned with a catch of tilefish and black seas bass to 4.5 pounds. Wayne Miller landed a 4-pound, 8-ounce triggerfish that was part of a catch of flounder, triggerfish, and spadefish aboard the One More Drift. Some large sharks have been recently landed in the surf, including a 6-foot sand tiger.

Upper Shore — Captain Matt Abell, of the Sea Hawk Sports Center, reported that a recent flounder trip recorded 32 flounder in just over an hour and forty-five minutes of fishing. Abell said a "huge school" of red drum popped up at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay on Sunday. One vessel claimed over 20 release citations while casting into the school. Cobia catches were still coming from the same areas where the red drum were caught. Abell said Spanish mackerel are available on the seaside. He described the flounder fishing on the railcars as "off and on," with triggerfish and spadefish also on the inshore wrecks. Further offshore, marlin and mahi have been the primary catches.

Bill Hall was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Salt Water Master Angler Status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year. Bill is an I.G.F.A. International Committee Representative and a longtime member of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament Committee. He is the Virginia Recreation Fishing representative on the ASMFC Striped Bass Management Panel and is a past recipient of the CCAVA Virginia Outdoor Writer Conservation Leadership Award.

Civil War on the Eastern Shore: Chincoteague Island's Precarious Position Protected Its Seafood Industry

By Linda Cicaira

During the Civil War, the seafood trade in the north kept Chincoteague Islanders from joining the Confederates.

According to www.islandmanor.com, "Oysters were such an essential part of the Chincoteague Island's early economy (that) Chincoteague broke with Virginia to remain part of the Union in order to prevent a blockage that would have stopped their oysters from shipping north."

A tourism blog said, "Chincoteague Island, located on Virginia's Eastern Shore, has a long storied history linked to fishing, seafood, and shellfish. For over 150 years, the cool ocean fed waters surrounding this enchanting island have yielded some of the finest shellfish found along the East Coast of the United States. So strong was the demand for island seafood by northern markets, that during the Civil War, Chincoteague unanimously voted to stay with the Union."

According to www.ghotes.net, the Whealton family helped make the decision. John Whealton, an influential islander, persuaded the others to stay with the U.S. and a vote of "138 to 2" was taken. D.J. Whealton, of the Whealton Oyster Company, was the Island's first millionaire, and J. B. Whealton built the causeway that links the Island to the mainland."

There were a few protests after the vote. "Several houses flew the Stars and Bars, about three men enlisted in the rebel army, and sympathizers put out the lighthouse, which was quickly relit," states www.civil-war.wikia.org

"Confederate sympathizers nearby organized a company to subdue Whealton and the islanders," the website stated. "Early one morning,

J. A. M. WHEALTON.

John Whealton

Whealton's well-equipped company left on flatboats to meet the Confederates in the middle of the Chincoteague Sound. After an exchange of many harsh words and a brief conflict, the invaders were driven away with a significant loss to themselves but without the loss of a single islander."

The first Assateague Lighthouse was built in 1833 to warn travelers of the dangerous shoals. A new taller and better-illuminated structure was started in 1860. It was delayed due to the war and was finally completed in 1867.

A report in the Washington Post several decades ago would make one wonder what else was being protected during the war.

In 1750, Charles Wilson, a pirate, wrote about three creeks "lying 100 paces or more north of the second inlet above Chincoteague Island," the newspaper stated. "This would place it in the region of Woody Knoll on the southern end of Assateague, close to the state line. At the head of the third creek to the northward is a bluff facing the Atlantic Ocean with three cedar trees growing on it, each about 1 1/2 yards apart. Between the trees, I buried ten iron-bound chests, bars of silver, gold, diamonds, and jewels to the sum of 200,000 pounds sterling. Go to the woody knoll secretly and remove the treasure. None have succeeded, so far.”

The Battle of Cockle Creek was considered a minor engagement and was fought on Oct. 5, 1861. After that, the ship, Louisiana, “remained at Chincoteague and 4,000 Union troops secured the lower shore for the Union. The watermen of Chincoteague were issued 21 passes for their ships to supply oysters to the northern ports. The story of their loyalty spread throughout the North. It is likely that this battle made Chincoteague oysters famous as they are today,” www.civilwar.wikia.org stated.

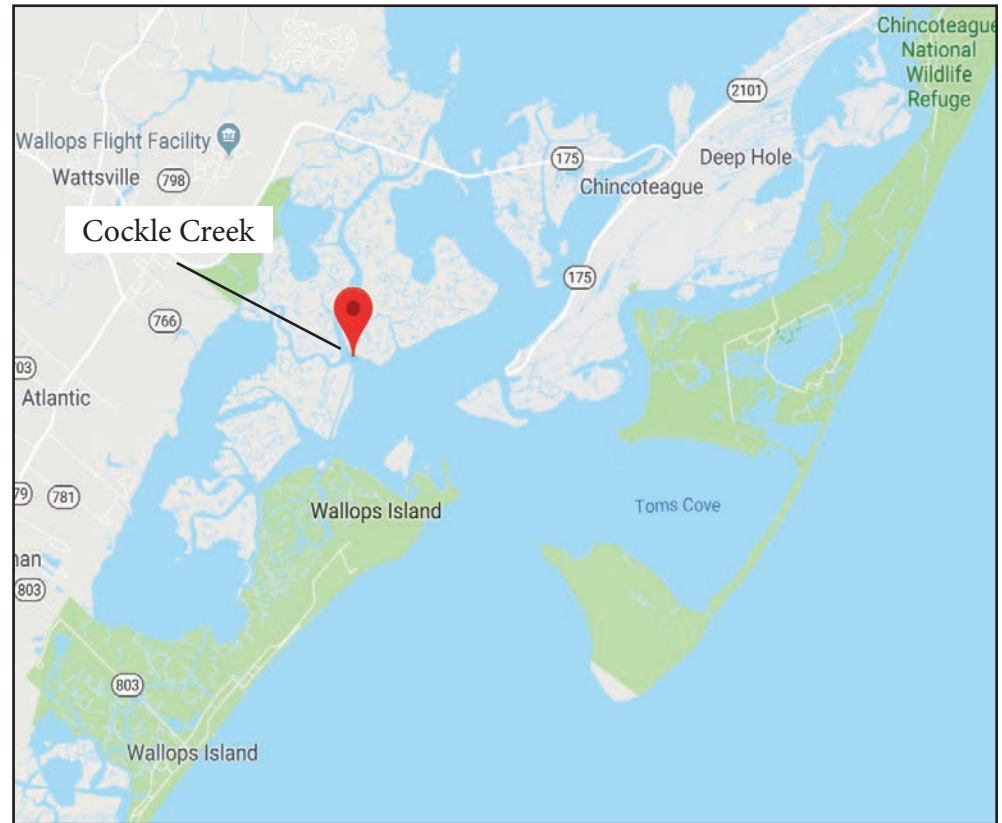

The battle eliminated the threat to the Delaware Bay and strengthened Union control over Maryland’s Eastern Shore and the Pocomoke River. “For some time a black regiment defended the island, but the islanders forced them to leave on a count of oppressiveness. Despite the lack of defense, Chincoteague was never again in danger of attack during the war,” according to www.civilwar.wikia.org

Three months before the Cockle Creek battle, 418 men from the barrier islands of Maryland and Virginia met at Chincoteague to celebrate the 85th anniversary of American independence. “All who were present signed a draft, prepared by Dr. George Schereer, which pledged support for the U.S. against her enemies,” www.wikia.org stated. “Captain Edward Whaley Sr., a War of 1812 veteran, shouted, ‘I will defend the old flag to my last drop of blood, against the lazy, slave-holding aristocrats and their lackeys in Richmond.’”

The Washington Post wrote later, “During the Civil War, the citizens of Chincoteague refused to line up with the Confederate Army. The reaction from Richmond? Nobody cared.”

The website www.historytourist.com wrote, “It didn’t need slaves, but it did need customers for its seafood, and that meant that they needed access to northern towns.”

Eagle Scout Awarded at Court of Honor

Gary Hollingsworth, 17, of Chincoteague, earned Boy Scouts of America's highest advancement award, the Eagle Scout Award. Hollingsworth was recognized on June 28 at the Court of Honor ceremony.

A member of Troop 323, chartered by Christ United Methodist Church, Hollingsworth is one of only approximately 6% of all Boy Scouts who attain the Eagle rank, according to Scoutmaster Kevin Holcomb.

Each candidate must demonstrate Scout Spirit by living the Scout Oath and Scout Law, earn 21 merit badges and successfully plan, develop, and give leadership to others in a service project helpful to any religious institution, school, or community to earn his Eagle. Hollingsworth chose to design, build and stock a "Blessing Box" located outside of the Christ United Methodist Church on Chincoteague.

The Blessing Box provides the community an opportunity to "take what you need - leave what you can," said Hollingsworth. Items may include nonperishable foods such as cereal, pasta, tomato sauce, canned fruit or vegetables, or even shampoo, soap, dry cat or dog food.

Hollingsworth is a member of Christ United Methodist Church and a Junior at Chincoteague High School. He is employed with Youth Conservation Corps at the National Park Service's Assateague Island National Seashore.

He is the son of Gary and Ulli Hollingsworth.

Gary Hollingsworth stands beside the Blessing Box he designed, built, and stocked.

The Northampton Historic Preservation Society is premiering the video "The Last Jail on the Northampton Court Green" Sunday, July 28, at 8 p.m., at the Historic Palace Theatre. Before the premiere, architectural historian Carl Lounsbury will provide insights about Virginia's history of dealing with prisoners and he will answer audience questions afterward.

The society produced a video providing a view of how prisoners were held in the "state of the art" jail built in 1914 and the many other jails that existed for over 300-plus years on the Court Green in Eastville. The film covers a history of Northampton jails and punishment, a booming economy that influenced early 20th century changes in Northampton and the construction of the 1914 jail, and how the 1914 jail functioned for close to a century. There is no charge to attend this event. For more information, go to www.northamptonhistoricpreservationsociety.com

By Linda Cicoira

Someone mentioned to me recently that she thought the Eastern Shore Post should offer horoscopes. My inclination to read those went away a few years ago when the dates were all changed and I got a new sign that I didn't think fit my personality.

Apparently, something that is determined by your date of birth changes all the time. That just doesn't seem logical to me. But there are lots of things like that. If others like to read their horoscope predictions, who am I to tell them it's a hoax? Besides, the changes appear to have been taken back now.

Berkley University is not so open-minded about it. "Astrology is not a very scientific way to answer questions. Although astrologers seek to explain the natural world, they don't usually attempt to critically evaluate whether those explanations are valid and this is a key part of science."

That being said, I found an interesting website that said Libras (like me) "have delusions of adequacy. You're so narrow-minded that when you run, your ear lobes bang together. Your face looks like an envelope without an address on it. People who want to save the whales, think of you."

Okay, so I thought I would Google the "nicest" horoscopes to see if there was another side to the story. The first thing that came up was a ranking of the nicest to meanest zodiac signs. I'm a glutton for punishment. I had to find out where I rank. I'm third! Oh Yippee! I think.

With the nicest going first here's the list: Aquarius, Virgo, Libra, Sagittarius, Taurus, Aries, Leo, Gemini, Capricorn, Pisces, Cancer, and Scorpio. That was at www.msn.com/en-us/lifestyle/horoscope/the-12-zodiac-signs-ranked-from-the-nicest-to-the-meanest/ss-BBKMrR Should I keep going?

For those of you who always want a good horoscope, check this out <https://astrologyking.com/best-horoscopes/> It's a place where the 50 best websites about horoscopes are listed. I looked over the names of the sites and "CIA" intrigued me. You can find it at <https://cosmicintelligenceagency.com> It was the Cosmic Intelligence Agency and you have to pay for your horoscope. That's not for me. Another one was also charging and got discarded.

Third time's a charm and very obvious. I went to <https://freewillastrology.com> and here's what I found for the week of July 11 for Libra, which is Sept. 23 to Oct. 22: "Please don't try to relax.

Don't shy away from challenges. Don't apologize for your holy quest or tone down your ambition or stop pushing to get better. Not now, anyway, Libra. Be even bigger and bolder and braver."

How inspirational! Yippee! But is science inspirational? Google came up with inspirational quotes from famous scientists so I think it could be so.

"Equipped with his five senses, man explores the universe around him and calls the adventure science," said Edwin Powell Hubble, an American astronomer.

Was Oliver Heaviside, an English mathematician and physicist, thinking about horoscopes when he said, "Shall I refuse my dinner because I do not fully understand the process of digestion?" Hmm. I don't know. Maybe he was referring to a future moon landing. And then there was Albert Einstein, who needs no introduction. He said, "Imagination is more important than knowledge."

Cape Charles Looking for Public Input on Comp Plan

Dear Editor:

The Cape Charles Planning Commission is beginning the process of updating the comprehensive plan. A comprehensive plan is a document designed to guide the future actions of a community. It presents a vision for the future with long-range goals and objectives for all activities that affect the local government.

When updating the comprehensive plan, participation from residents and other stakeholders is essential. As a part of this process, a public kick-off workshop will be held on Thursday, July 25, at 6 p.m., at the Cape Charles Civic Center. This will be the first opportunity for residents to help form the update process and give feedback to local government officials about the future of Cape Charles.

The focus of the workshop will be to discuss the comprehensive plan update process, project goals, and citizen/stakeholder expectations. Input from citizens at the kick-off workshop will be used help shape the planning process and ultimately the new comprehensive plan.

Assisting the update process is the Accomack Northampton Planning District Commission. Some of its staff members will be present at the workshop. The town manager and town planner will be in attendance, and the Northampton

Post Office Mail

County District 1 Supervisor, John Coker, will be asked to attend as well. All Cape Charles Planning Commissioners and a representative of each town board will be asked to attend. If you cannot attend the workshop and want to share your ideas, please email or call Zach Ponds at planner@capecharles.org, or by phone at 757-331-2036.

Bicyclists Need Help Finding New Bike Path

Dear Editor:

I happen to live on Seaside road in Townsend and use the new bike path that runs parallel to it and U.S. Route 13. I can't tell you the number of times I've seen people biking past my house totally oblivious to the new bike path.

Just last week I was exiting the bike path and stopped two tourists who were biking on the shoulder of Route 13, 10 yards from the path with no clue it existed! This happened again today.

There need to be signs on every crossroad from the bridge-tunnel to Capeville that promote the path. Is it stupidity or total incompetence that the county would spend the massive amount of money to build it and not have the common sense to spend a few hundred dollars on signs to promote it?
