ESVA BAR ASSOC. RECOMMENDS BURGE FOR JUDGESHIP

By Linda Cicoira

The Eastern Shore Bar Association (ESBA) voted “overwhelmingly” on Nov. 6 to recommend that the General Assembly appoint Cela J. Burge as judge of the juvenile and domestic relations (J&DR) courts in Accomack and Northampton counties, Jack Thornton, president of the local bar, confirmed Tuesday.

Burge is Accomack County’s attorney and a member of the Cape Charles Town Council in Northampton. The Eastern Shore court is part of the second judicial circuit, which includes Virginia Beach, but it has its own district.

“All we can do is recommend,” said Thornton, who is also assistant commonwealth’s attorney for Northampton County. “It is rare that a recommendation gets turned down, but it happens,” he said. “Not most of the time.”

Now that the bar has made a recommendation, said Chairman Donald Hart of the Accomack Board of Supervisors, the board would have to start talking about what it will do if Burge becomes a judge. “We’ll probably deal with it more when the new board comes,” he said referring to the two new supervisors who were elected earlier this month and will take office Jan. 1. “We want them to have a say in who the new county attorney will be if there is one,” said Hart.

It is unclear if Burge would have to give up her seat on the Cape Charles Town Council to take the position.

Thornton sent an email Nov. 7 to Sen. Lynwood Lewis, Del. Rob Bloxom, and members of the House and Senate Courts of Justice Committees to make the recommendation.

Judge Croxton Gordon, who has presided in the two J&DR courts since 2007, is retiring at the end of January. Thornton was hoping an appointment would be made later this month at a special session of the General Assembly, but the legislators may not meet or decide until mid-January.

“We would like it to be as seamless as possible,” Thornton said.

In a prepared statement, Burge would only say, “I am honored to have been recommended by the Eastern Shore Bar Association as the candidate for the Juvenile and Domestic Court judgeship that will be vacant upon the retirement of Judge Gordon.”

Thirty of 35 ESBA members in “good standing” voted by proxy or in person regarding the judgeship. Most cast their ballots in person. Only lawyers voted, not judges. Burge received 24 votes.

Initially, four people put their names in for consideration: Burge, Patrick Robinson, Carl Bundick, and Elizabeth Wolfe, an assistant commonwealth’s attorney in Accomack. Robinson, who recently became a substitute general district court judge, bowed out early on. Thornton said it was decided at a September meeting that the three candidates would be asked to answer five questions. Each did so by Nov. 1, and addressed the group on Nov. 6, before the poll was conducted.

Prior to becoming county attorney, Burge “practiced frequently in JDR court, often in the role of guardian ad litem,” Thornton said. According to the Virginia

SunTrust Selling Onancock, Cheriton Branches to First Horizon Bank

By Connie Morrison

SunTrust branches in Onancock and Cheriton are among 30 being sold to First Horizon Bank as part of the $66 billion BB&T/SunTrust merger approval announced Friday by the U.S. Department of Justice.

The DOJ conditioned its approval on the sale of 28 SunTrust branches “to resolve antitrust concerns arising from BB&T’s proposed merger with SunTrust,” according to a DOJ press release. Two more branches were added to the sale to bring the total number of branches being sold to 30. The branches have combined deposits of $2.4 billion and loans totaling $410 million.

BB&T and SunTrust agreed to divest SunTrust branches on the Eastern Shore of Virginia; Patrick County, Va.; Franklin County, Va.; Henry County/City of Martinsville, Va.; Lumpkin County, Ga.; Winston-Salem, N. C.; and Durham-Chapel Hill, N.C.

“The divestiture constitutes the largest divestiture in a bank merger in over a decade,” according to the DOJ press release.

First Horizon will retain current SunTrust employees in the acquired branches when the transaction closes. The branches are to remain open as First Horizon. All accounts and loans at those banks will transfer to First Horizon.

“We are pleased to have found a buyer that will retain the jobs of talented teammates and continue to foster the strong client relationships we have established in these branches,” said SunTrust Chairman and CEO Bill Rogers in a Friday press release issued jointly by BB&T, SunTrust, and First Horizon Bank.

First Horizon National Corp. parent company of First Horizon Bank, announced Nov. 4 it was acquiring IBERIABANK in a merger of equals.

That merger, combined with 30 SunTrust branches First Horizon is acquiring, will bring First Horizon assets to $77.4 billion, and will bring the number of First Horizon branches to 300.

The BB&T/Sun Trust merger still needs the approval of the Federal Reserve System Board of Governors and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Once those approvals are obtained, the merger is expected to close in early 2020. The resulting bank will trade under the name Truist and will be the country’s sixth largest bank with assets of $441 billion, deposits of $324 billion, and $301 billion in loans.

The DOJ said in its press release that “As a result of the divestitures, the Justice Department will advise the Federal Reserve Board and the FDIC that it will not challenge the merger.”

Former Homeowner Claims House Auctioned Without Her Knowledge

By Linda Cicoira

A New Church woman wants Accomack Circuit Court to either void the sale of her $196,300 home, which was auctioned for $1,200 in September by Captain's Cove Golf and Yacht Club Inc. (CCG&YC) because of unpaid association fees, or award her $250,000 for the value of the property.

Amy McDonald filed a complaint Oct. 24 alleging she was never informed her house was going to be auctioned. She and her father, Wesley McDonald, have owned the house on Pike Drive, in Greenbackville, since 2012. They also own a vacant lot.

The 37-year-old woman has been living in the house since 2017. Her father has never lived there.

Amy McDonald stated, in the lawsuit, that she was never properly notified about the auction. On Aug. 24, her father, to whom she has rarely spoken since the death of her stepmother sometime after the house was purchased, told her about a letter he received regarding the foreclosure of Parcel 127.

The complaint showed a lien for $1,200 had been put on the property in 2018. The letter stated that a total of $4,954 was owed through June 30, and the auction was to be held Sept. 20.

Amy McDonald was unsure if Lot 127 was the vacant lot or the house lot. So, she "called Barbara Mulcahy, manager of the association's finance department to get clarification."

"In the conversation, Barbara mistakenly told Amy that Lot 7-127 was the empty lot and was the property to be sold, while her home, Lot 7-128, although subject to a lien, was not the property to be auctioned," according to the court record.

McDonald said she told Mulcahy that she would have to let the vacant lot go but not her house where she and her child lived. She made arrangements with Mulcahy to pay the association fees and provided an initial payment by check for $735.96, court records disclose.

McDonald wrote Lot 128 (the lot she was told was the house) in the memo "to ensure the funds were properly applied ... The association accepted her check," on Sept. 4, the complaint stated.

Around Sept. 26, Amy McDonald's mother got a telephone call from Willie A. Davis, of New Church. Da-

ESCSB Recycles Oyster Shells

It's oyster roast and oyster shucking time on the Shore. The Eastern Shore Community Services Board's Day Support Program, with initial support from the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, is recycling oyster shells to help rebuild oyster reefs in the Chesapeake Bay.

The bay's oyster reefs have dramatically reduced in size since the 1980s. Oyster reefs play a vital role in habitat restoration, stabilizing shorelines, and purification of the bay's waters. Oyster reefs create a natural habitat that attracts crabs, small fish, shrimp, flounder, and many more marine species.

Every recycled half shell creates a new home for ten oysters. The ESCSB Oyster Program collects shucked oyster half shells in recycling bins at several locations on the Shore including: the ESCSB's Behavioral Healthcare Center and the Dunne Substance Abuse and Counseling Center, both in Park-ley, ESCSB Developmental Services on Main Street in Exmore, the Fabric Outlet on Lankford Highway in Cape Charles and the Island House in Wachapreague.

Tips for dropping off oyster shells at these locations:

- Separate from trash.
- Keep shells in a porous container to reduce odors.
- Bring the shells to the nearest recycling bin location.
- Do not put the shells back in the bay or the ocean.

The oyster restoration program is funded through the sale of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation DMV license plates. These proceeds help support our region's most celebrated resources.

So remember: when you shuck, don't chuck. Find your nearest bin and help rebuild the bay's oyster reefs.

If you have any questions regarding the program, please call ESCSB Developmental Services at 757-442-3933.

vis stated that he bought the house at auction. "Stunned with the news," Amy McDonald called Mulcahy "several times to get an explanation" but was unable to reach her.

On Sept. 30, McDonald sent Mulcahy an email stating, "You informed me that I could start sending payments weekly. You did not inform me that you had already placed a lien on either lot nor did you inform me that you were already advertising my house to be auctioned. My house is assessed at $196,300. It has been auctioned out from under me for $ 2,100. How is this even possible? ... This has to be fixed. This is my home. Why would I make a payment towards an empty lot before making payments towards my house? Why also didn't you make me aware of the severity of the situation when we spoke on the phone" Aug. 26? "I specifically told you that I did not want the empty lot any more. Please help me ..."

"Please let the attorney and board work it out," Mulcahy wrote back. "I really can't do anything else to help.

I am sorry. I am sure it can be worked out. I understand it is your home and it is a very stressful time."

Simultaneously, Amy McDonald researched her title at the Accomack Circuit Court clerk's office. On Oct. 1, a lawyer for the association stated she would talk to Captain's Cove's "board and all parties involved, to reverse or stop the sale of the home." On Oct. 4, Amy McDonald was informed the sale was final.

The complaint states CCG&YC violated Virginia law by making a payment plan with McDonald and not issuing a certificate of partial satisfaction and releasing the lien against her home, which would have stopped the sale, failing to send a written notice regarding the lien, and failing to send prior notice before advertising the sale to McDonald at her known address. It also states the association is responsible for damages including loss of her home. She also wants reimbursement of all costs and attorneys' fees.

The defendants have not yet filed answers to the claims.

It is the responsibility of the guardian ad litem to provide independent recommendations to the court about the client's best interests, which can be different from advocating for what the client wants, and to bring balance to the decision-making process."

"Ms. Burge has exhibited knowledge of the law, a desire to serve, and compassion for persons and families struggling with issues that are frequently at play in the J&DR setting," Thornton wrote to the legislators. "She is very intelligent and, perhaps even more importantly, extremely diligent and conscientious in her duties whatever they may be, and always conducts herself with dignity and civility toward the court, its members, and the parties."

Due to the Shore's separation from the rest of Virginia by the Chesapeake Bay, "we have some unique issues ... such as lack of reliable transportation, and other resources that may be taken for granted in larger and/or mainland jurisdictions," the bar president continued. "In that vein, we ... truly desire a judge who is local to the community and has an appreciation for the unique challenges facing our citizens, and specifically our J&DR court."

Among the cases that go through J&DR courts are juvenile delinquency, crimes against children, domestic abuse and relations, custody, visitation, support cases, petitions for foster care, child services, and paternity.

U.S. Rep. Luria Holds Constituent Town Hall Meeting in Cape Charles

By Stefanie Jackson

U.S. Rep. Elaine Luria updated her Eastern Shore constituents on issues of concern at a town hall meeting Nov. 9 in a packed room at the Cape Charles civic center.

Ava Wise moderated the event as Luria answered written questions submitted by audience members on healthcare and the environment.

Health Care

She was asked if she favors expanding the Affordable Care Act (ACA) or implementing Medicare for All.

Luria said the ACA was a “milestone” in providing health care to people who could not access it previously, but it isn’t perfect and premiums are still too high.

However, she is “very happy” about Medicaid expansion in Virginia, which has given 400,000 more people access to healthcare.

Luria asks herself three questions when considering new healthcare plans: “Is this going to improve access to care? Is it going to drive costs down?”

And is it going to get people a better outcome?”

That said, she is “not onboard” with Medicare for All, which has “lofty” goals but no real plan to fund it.

Instead, Luria supports the creation of a “public option” for health insurance, intended to create competition for private health insurers and drive costs down.

One possibility for the public option is “Medicare-lite,” which could accept people as early as age 50 or 55. Medicare typically accepts applicants age 65 or older.

Luria’s thought is that offering the public option to older adults and leaving younger, healthier individuals in the main insurance pool will lower overall costs.

Earlier this year, U.S. Senators Tim Kaine, of Virginia, and Michael Bennet, of Colorado, introduced their own bill for a public option for health insurance called Medicare-X.

Luria also supports HR-3, a bill that would allow Medicare to negotiate prescription drug costs and allow people with private insurance to benefit from those cost reductions as well.

Green Energy

She was asked what she will do to ensure the U.S. improves its “energy economy,” reducing carbon dioxide emissions and combating sea-level rise and recurrent flooding.

Luria said, “I think we need to have an ambitious goal of moving to greener and cleaner energy,” but “you cannot count on the sun to shine or the wind to blow all day, every day.”

Her recommendation for filling in the gaps is nuclear energy. Luria and four cosponsors have introduced bipartisan legislation in the House of Representatives to “advance the next generation of nuclear power” by building two prototype reactors.

Luria said the U.S. isn’t “going backwards” by researching nuclear power. “We’re not talking about building 1960s-era, pressurized water reactors.”

In Dominion Energy’s service area, 30% of Virginia’s electricity comes from nuclear power, she added.

Dominion Energy is building two test platforms for wind power roughly 44 miles off the coast of Virginia Beach, on about 144,000 acres leased from the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management. It’s the first project of its kind in federal waters.

It could mean an opportunity for the Eastern Shore, since there are only two rail lines in the region – one in Cape Charles and one across the Chesapeake Bay in Little Creek – that could load wind turbine parts onto barges for transport, Luria said.

Menhaden

She was asked about overfishing menhaden in the Chesapeake Bay. They are used commercially to feed farm-raised fish and make omega-3 fish oil nutrition supplements.

Menhaden are vital to the Chesapeake Bay ecosystem because they feed on plankton and algae and are food for predators such as flounder and drum.

Luria believes there are not enough consequences for overfishing, and she is researching what can be done at the federal level to “levy penalties on companies that don’t comply with regional marine fisheries commissions.”

One questioner stated that, according to the World Wildlife Federation, the global wildlife population has declined by 60% since 1970.

Luria said the House has fought to keep animals like the grizzly bear on the endangered species list, and it has a package of bills to prevent “federal public lands from being exploited for mining and drilling” and protect wildlife.

Federal Minimum Wage

When asked about the federal minimum wage, Luria said the House passed legislation to increase it, but she does not foresee the Senate acting on it.

Virginia is “still lagging behind” with a state minimum wage that matches the federal minimum wage of $7.25 per hour, which is “not a living wage,” Luria said. She’s “counting on our partners in Richmond to try and move Virginia forward.”

Education Funding

Luria responded to the assertion that Virginia public education does not get its fair share of federal funding.

Public schools are funded 90% at the state and local level and about 10% at the federal level. Most of the federal funding comes in the form of free and reduced school lunch programs and funding for IDEA, or the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, she said.

Luria suggested that IDEA contains unfunded mandates, and when schools have to use local funds to provide services for students with disabilities, that means less money for school buildings and teacher pay.

“At the federal level, I think fully funding the IDEA is very important,” she said.

To attract teachers to the Eastern Shore, affordable housing is needed, Luria said. The lack of affordable housing is “a barrier to bringing professionals here,” including teachers, doctors, and NASA-Wallops Flight Facility employees.

Immigration

Luria affirmed that she supports the Dreamers, illegal or undocumented immigrants who were brought to the U.S. before age 16, and the House passed the Dream Act earlier this year.

She also supports the bipartisan Farm Workforce Modernization Act, which seeks to “provide permanent resident status to agricultural workers.”

The bill would allow farm workers to get five-year, renewable visas, which would help 12-month workers who currently cannot get 12-month visas. They could also take the next step and apply for permanent residency.

Permanent residents are granted the legal right to live and work in the U.S. indefinitely and receive a green card. They cannot vote or hold public office, like a U.S. citizen, but permanent residency is a step on the path toward citizenship.

On the Eastern Shore, nursery workers would benefit from the bill. Luria is working to get the aquaculture industry included as well.

Luria said the bill is a compromise. Employers would be required to use E-Verify to confirm their employees’ eligibility to work, but the requirement would be phased in during a period of two to five years.

Decriminalization of Marijuana

Luria is an advocate for decriminalizing marijuana and removing it from the list of Schedule I drugs, which are classified as having no accepted medical use and a high potential for abuse.

She said there are two distinct benefits in decriminalizing marijuana – fewer incarcerations for nonviolent crimes, and an alternative to opioids for chronic pain management.

Sanitary Sewer

Luria is in favor of finding federal funding for the proposed Hampton Roads Sanitation District project that would provide sewer service and take over maintenance and billing in several towns in Northampton and Accomack County. She has not yet named any specific sources of potential funding.

Foreign Policy

One audience member asked how long it would take the U.S. to recover from what Luria called the “unplanned, unannounced, abrupt withdrawal of our forces from Syria.”

Luria is “very concerned” about the “national security environment, how we’re seen by our allies.” She recently traveled to Jordan and Afghanistan and met their king and president, respectively.

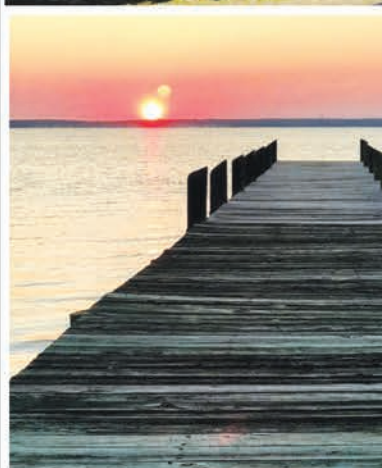

“They see their neighbor, where we just drew out, we didn’t say anything ahead of time and left them with a crisis, and we left the Kurdish forces who have been our allies and fought and died alongside us ... to fend for themselves in the mix with Russia and Iran and everyone else ... while Turkey invades. They’re obviously very concerned.”

Living situations are “incredibly tenuous. People don’t just live normal, safe lives where they can go out and buy food and take their children to school.”

But Luria was impressed by the progress Afghanistan has made for its women. About half the president’s cabinet were women, “all but one of them women under 40, Western educated, and very competent.”

“From where we were many years ago to today, none of these women had any of these opportunities.”

Onancock Man Sentenced to 24 Years for Drug and Weapons Offenses

By Linda Cicaira

An Onancock man was sentenced to 24 years in prison Thursday in Accomack Circuit Court for several drug offenses and the manufacture of two pipe bombs.

All but six years was suspended for Huhi Aman-Re, previously known as Terrell Stewart, 41, of Boundary Avenue. The crimes occurred in August 2018.

"These charges ... are very serious," Judge W. Revell Lewis III said before handing down the terms. "I'm not quite sure why you would want these things unless for acts of violence," he added referring to the bombs.

Aman-Re was given two years each for possession of cocaine and heroin with all but two months suspended, and five years each for possession of a firearm while in possession of a controlled substance, possession of a firearm by a felon, and two counts of manufacturing the bombs. All but a year and five months each was suspending for those convictions. All the terms were set to run consecutively. Upon release, Lewis ordered Aman-Re to be on indefinite supervised probation and good behavior for 20 years.

"Basically, I allowed it to be somewhere close to my person and I got caught with it there," Aman-Re testified regarding the charges. He blamed his emotional distress regarding the death of his mother in 2017. "I became irresponsible ... I was anxious and depressed." The defendant said he has since gotten help. Aman-Re said he pleaded guilty "because I have to face my accountability."

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Randy Fultz wanted stiff sentences for Aman-Re based not only on the seriousness of the crimes but on his "violent criminal past" that included convictions of robbery and abduction.

Defense lawyer Carl Bundick asked for leniency based on his pleas of guilty and his cooperation.

In August 2018, Trooper Clifton

Hughes smelled marijuana coming from inside the house where he tracked a man suspected of fleeing from a traffic crash, according to previous testimony and court records. Officers later seized the bombs, ammo, a total of $2,858 in cash, marijuana, cocaine, heroin, scales with white residue, fentanyl, a bullet-proof vest, six guns, several off-white powders, packaging materials, two cell phones, two laptops, grinders, and drug paraphernalia. Aman-Re was not the man involved in the accident but lived at the house.

Two of the six firearms and both pipe bombs were found in his bedroom. A bomb was found "in the left pocket of a jacket hanging in his closet," the record stated.

"In the living room, a scale with white powder residue was in plain view on the coffee table," a court document stated. "I entered the bedroom and further discovered a loaded pistol underneath the dresser in plain view. I then spotted a small baggie of marijuana on a nightstand. In plain view, there was a large sum of cash and a pipe bomb in a glass bowl in plain view. Further investigation in an opened closet discovered a large sum of cash and a baggie with suspected crack cocaine. Underneath the bed, was a loaded M&P handgun that came back stolen along with more drug paraphernalia."

The defendant said he was convicted in 2000 for 1999 offenses and served 9 years and 9 months of an 11-year sentence in prison.

Grand Jury Refuses Indictment

A seven-member Northampton grand jury refused last week to indict a local man accused of strangulation.

The incidents were alleged to have occurred Sept. 2.

Judge Gordon Vincent, of Northampton General District Court, certified the charges to the jury on Oct. 10. Ferguson was found guilty that day of simple assault and battery of Johnson, a misdemeanor, and sentenced to 12 months in jail with all but a month suspended. He was also fined $100. Alvin Spencer Parker Sr.

Mr. Alvin Spencer "Buddy" Parker Sr., 71, husband of the late Lillie Merritt Parker, crossed the channel peacefully Wednesday, Nov. 6, 2019, at his daughter's home in Cheriton.

A retired commercial waterman, Mr. Parker was the son of the late William Spencer "Digger" Parker Sr. and the late Virginia Brady "Skip" Parker. He was born in Nassawadox and raised in Oyster. He started working on the water with his father from the time he was able to walk. He surely had saltwater running through his veins. He worked on clam boats for many years, a tugboat for a few years, and even tried his hand at a land job at Bayshore Concrete, but that only lasted about a week. He said that was the worst week of his life. Working on land just wasn't for him. From there, he returned to his first love, the seaside. He especially enjoyed staying at his watch house with many family and friends throughout the years. He and all the other seaside watermen could be found at the Oyster dock every Sunday morning for what they called "Sunday service," which consisted of drinking a cold one and catching up on the latest gossip. The seaside is where he could be found working until his sea legs finally gave out.

In addition to his wife and parents, he was predeceased by two sons, Harry "Curly" Parker and Geoffrey Abraham; two brothers, William Spencer Parker Jr. and Randall Lee Parker; a sister, Catherine Darlene Parker; an uncle, Johnny Brady; and a nephew, Ronnie Brady.

One in a Million

The Southern Gateway Visitors Center had their 1,000,000th visitor walk through the door last November.

Linda Burnett, of St. Louis, Mo., won a prize package including eight nights of accommodations on the Eastern Shore. She and her guests returned to the Shore last week for their stay.

She and her family were vacationing in Williamsburg and out of curiosity decided to make a day trip to check out the long bridge they had heard so much about.

Virginia Found Out of Compliance With Menhaden Harvesting Caps

By Connie Morrison

The Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission on Oct. 31 deemed Virginia out of compliance with a mandatory management measure contained in the Interstate Fishery Management Plan for Atlantic Menhaden.

"Specifically, the Commonwealth of Virginia has failed to effectively implement and enforce Section 4.3.7 Chesapeake Bay Reduction Fishery Cap of Amendment 3," reads a press release from ASMFC. "In order to come back into compliance, the Commonwealth must implement an annual total allowable harvest from the Chesapeake Bay by the reduction fishery of no more than 51,000 metric tons."

Although species limits are determined by the ASMFC, states must act to put the limits into their respective state laws. Virginia's General Assembly has not enacted a cap or turned the matter over to the Virginia Marine Resources Council, which regulates all other fish species.

Omega Protein processes menhaden at its plants to provide ingredients for food, supplements, and pet feed, defended its fishing practices.

Monty Deihl, who has managed the Atlantic menhaden marine ingredients fishing fleet since 2010, defended its practices. "In the last decade, we have made a concerted effort to fish outside the Bay whenever weather conditions and the location of the fish have made that possible," said Deihl in a press release.

The most recent assessment in 2017 found that the species is not overfished, nor is it experiencing overfishing, the company said. "This referral is extraordinary because, as has been noted by NOAA legal counsel, it is the first time ever that the Commission has recommended non-compliance for a healthy fishery," said Omega Protein in its release.

In 2019, Ocean Harvesters, an independent company that owns and operates the fishing vessels for Omega, harvested 67,000 metric tons of menhaden — 16,000 tons more than authorized by the cap.

The finding was to be forwarded to U. S. Secretary of Commerce Wilbur Ross, who has 30 days to review the recommendation and determine appropriate action, which could range from a federal moratorium on fishing for or possessing Atlantic menhaden in the commonwealth's state waters, to vacating the cap.

"The new year is almost here at Pohanka Hyundai of Salisbury."

NASA Funding Bill Authorizes Reimbursement to Chincoteague for Contaminated Wells

Submitted Article

The Aeronautics Innovation Act – legislation Sen. Mark R. Warner introduced to help boost aeronautics industry innovation, research and development – was included in the NASA Authorization Act approved this week by the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science & Transportation.

The bill includes authorization to reimburse the Town of Chincoteague for the purchase and installation of new production wells to replace contaminated wells located on NASA Wallops Flight Facility property.

Sen. Warner applauded the inclusion of the NASA funding bill, saying it would provide the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) the clear direction needed to advance the nation’s space initiatives and investments and assert the United States’ global leadership in the final frontier.

“If we want to lead the way in aeronautics innovation, we have to make decisive investments in long-term research and development,” said Warner. “I applaud my colleagues on the Commerce Committee for including key provisions of my Aeronautics Innovation Act into this year’s NASA funding bill and for their work in getting this through the committee. These provisions will help secure our nation’s standing as the leader in cutting-edge aeronautics innovation and technology.”

Earlier this year, Sens. Warner and Jerry Moran, of Kansas, co-chairs of the Senate Aerospace Caucus, reintroduced the Aeronautics Innovation Act to provide a five-year funding commitment to advance innovation and supplement research in the aeronautics industry.

In 2017, the U.S. aerospace and defense industry produced approximately 2.4 million jobs and generated $865 billion in economic output. However, without the proper strategy and investment, the U.S. risks falling behind other industrialized nations in developing and advancing the next generation of aircraft. Forecasts estimate that the world’s demand for passenger aircraft with more than 100 seats will double over the next 20 years, generating between 35,000 and 40,000 new plane orders, which will be worth more than $5 trillion by 2035.

In addition to advancing aeronautics industry innovation, research and development, the NASA Authorization Act of 2019 would:

- Support NASA’s human spaceflight and exploration efforts to return American astronauts to the moon and prepare for future journeys to Mars.
- Extend authorization for the International Space Station through 2030 and direct NASA to take steps to grow the “space economy.”
- Require the United States to maintain a continuous human presence in low-Earth orbit through and beyond the useful life of the International Space Station (ISS).
- Support NASA’s leadership in coordinating the development of next generation spacesuits.
- Leverage private sector investment to bolster human space exploration.
- Authorize NASA’s Enhanced Use

Leasing (EUL) authority. EUL allows companies to lease vacant or underutilized buildings owned by NASA with lease proceeds helping to fund capital improvements at the NASA centers.

- Provide rapid acquisition authorities similar to those that have proven successful at the Department of Defense and other agencies.
- Direct NASA to maintain and upgrade irreplaceable rocket launch and test infrastructure.
- Support vital life and physical science research to ensure that humans can live in deep space safely.
- Direct NASA to improve upon its planetary defense measures to protect Earth from asteroids and other near-Earth objects.
- Affirm NASA’s commitment to aeronautics research by supporting a robust X-plane program as well as work on efficient propulsion concepts and advanced composites.
- Support NASA’s STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math) education and workforce efforts.

High School Means Business for Nandua FBLA Students

By Stefanie Jackson

Nandua High School's Future Business Leaders of America is no longer just a club for aspiring entrepreneurs, business managers, and administrators to do activities together like community service – they are learning how to start and run their own business that will serve other clubs and organizations in their school.

Participation in community service and business “makes them understand what it’s like to be a citizen” and provides purposeful and practical “project-based instruction” in career areas of interest, said Principal George Parker.

With his support, FBLA acquired new equipment and started a business creating personalized sweatshirts.

They also plan to offer T-shirts, hats, coffee mugs, and other items.

Teachers Faith Sturgis and Erica Quintana, who are in charge of FBLA along with teacher Beth Hart, designed the first batch of sweatshirts, ordered by the Nandua High School band.

With each new order that comes in, students will take turns learning every aspect of the business, including designing products, operating equipment, and writing invoices.

Parker purchased a die-cutting machine that cuts designs from sheets of vinyl and a heat press that adheres the designs to clothing and other materials. The die-cutting kit included computer software for creating custom designs.

Parker gave the club members a room across the hall from Sturgis' classroom, complete with their own computer, for storing their equipment and working on orders.

The profits will support FBLA activities such as state competitions. Nandua High School FBLA members compete in the Tidewater region, and every year, any student who wins first or second place is eligible to advance to the state finals.

FBLA pays for a student's travel expenses such as hotel accommodations. There are about 50 different categories in which a student can compete, including resumés, interviews, speeches, personal finance, accounting, and spreadsheets.

Students can learn Excel spreadsheets and other popular Microsoft programs at school. Training in those programs is available through career and technical education (CTE) courses.

CTE courses aren't just for students who decide to pass on college and go straight into the workforce after high school. Every student is required by the Virginia Department of Education to earn at least one CTE certification before graduation.

A student who earns three or more CTE certifications receives a gold seal on his or her diploma.

Select CTE courses are available through the Accomack school division's Badger Technical Center, which is not a separate campus but is represented by specific CTE courses given at Nandua and Arcadia High School.

Nandua offers the Badger school's HVAC, building and trades, and nursing courses.

Arcadia offers the Badger school's automotive, computer systems, and cosmetology courses.

The CTE courses are offered to all Accomack public high school students, no matter which school they attend.

For example, a Nandua student who wants to take an automotive course at Arcadia will be bused there for that class. Chincoteague High School students may also participate in the CTE program.

There are additional courses, such as home economics, that do not belong to the Badger Technical Center program but provide career and technical certification required for graduation.

In addition to its new business venture, FBLA will continue its community service. Past activities have included donating Christmas gifts to children in need through local angel trees, Operation Christmas Child shoeboxes, and Toys for Tots.

FBLA members have also served as Salvation Army bell ringers and participated in food drives.

FBLA is organizing a new fundraiser this year, Christmas at Nandua, which will be open to Accomack elementary school students in pre-K to fifth grade.

Christmas at Nandua will be Saturday, Dec. 14, 9 a.m. to noon, at Nandua High School. Admission will be $5 per child and will include arts and crafts, games, and a visit by Santa Claus.

ANEC Lineman Is Part of Volunteer Team Bringing Light to Rural Bolivia

Submitted Article

Fifteen volunteer electric cooperative lineworkers recently returned to the United States from Bolivia with heavier beards, weary eyes, and thinner waistlines.

But what they left behind after two and a half weeks of hard labor will endure long after they trim their whiskers and catch up on their sleep.

The lineworkers brought electricity for the first time to 52 households across five communities in the Oruro region of the South American nation.

“I hope every cooperative member-consumer in our three-state region will be filled with as much pride as we are at what this team accomplished. We are approaching the holiday season and through their selfless efforts, they gave the best gift of all — the gift of light,” said Richard G. Johnstone Jr., president and CEO of the Virginia, Maryland & Delaware Association of Electric Cooperatives.

Chief Lineman Bernie Hastings represented A&N Electric Cooperative on the project. Hastings has been with the cooperative for more than 12 years and currently oversees a construction crew.

The initiative, entitled “United We Light: Project Bolivia,” was sponsored by the Virginia, Maryland & Delaware Association of Electric Cooperatives in conjunction with the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association’s international unit and support from the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corp.

Lineworkers representing eight electric cooperatives in the mid-Atlantic region departed for Bolivia Sept. 4 and returned Sept. 21.

They labored in developing nation conditions at altitudes of 13,000 feet, with few hot showers and minimal diets. But the gratitude that the villagers showed erased any hardships in the minds of the lineworkers.

“These people work hard. It’s amazing. They have nothing,” Hastings said of the villagers he met. “I hope that light bulb changes their future. You talk about education for youth. The cure for cancer might be in Bolivia in a village somewhere. Only time will tell, of course.”

The group’s work will have immediate benefits. One community is ready to install an electric well pump instead of retrieving water by hand. And one official hopes that the dawn of power will repopulate his village, where people have left in search of electric service.

“With the electricity grid that is being installed, people will come back,” Coniri-

Mayor Lorenzo Arroyo said through an interpreter. “We are so happy, we have no more word to say ‘Thank you.’”

Highlights of the trip are posted on the A&N Electric Cooperative Facebook page and the United We Light: Project Bolivia Facebook group.

A&N Electric Cooperative Essay Contest Entries Due Dec. 6

Submitted Article

The annual essay contest to determine A&N Electric Cooperative's Washington Youth Tour and VICE Conference participants begins this month.

The essay contest is open to all high school and home school juniors living in the cooperative's service area.

The top two essays will be chosen from each school. One student from each school will be selected to attend the Washington Youth Tour in June and one student from each school will be selected to represent the cooperative at the VICE Conference in early spring.

Essay guidelines will be sent to the guidance offices at each high school this month.

Home schoolers can request the guidelines from the cooperative's Tasley office. The deadline for essay entrants is Dec. 6, 2019.

Both conferences are at no cost to students who are selected. The cooperative also provides transportation to both events.

VICE Conference

Each spring, the Virginia Cooperative Council sponsors an Institute on Cooperative Education, a youth leadership conference for up to 64 Virginia high school students.

Local students from A&N Electric Cooperative's service area are eligible to attend. The cooperative holds an annual essay contest to determine the cooperative's participants in two educational opportunities, which includes the VICE Conference.

The objective of the conference is to educate youth about the unique cooperative form of business.

"I think this conference is worth it," said Venah Hargis, a VICE conference attendee from Nandua High School. "You learn a lot about a business and how cooperative help your community. You got to meet new people and learn new things about yourself and others."

Washington Youth Tour

Each year the cooperative also sponsors local students to attend the annual National Electric Co-op Youth Tour in Washington, D.C.

The students toured Capitol Hill and also visited historical and cultural sites around the nation's capital, including the African-American History Museum, Arlington National Cemetery and the Pentagon.

Other activities included an evening cruise on the Potomac River and a theatrical performance at the Kennedy Center.

"It really gives you a lot of opportunities to meet new people and see new things," said Youth Tour delegate Alexa Cobb.

For more information about the Youth Tour program and VICE Conference, visit www.anec.com and look under the Community tab. To learn more about how you can participate in these programs speak with your high school's guidance office or contact Cooperative Youth Tour Coordinator Patsy Goard at 757-787-9750 ext. 322.

Coast Guard Auxiliary Has More Gift Ideas for Boaters

Submitted Article

Quality lines are one of the most important pieces of safety equipment on a boat. All lines should be examined for fraying and to be sure the cores aren't stretched. If they are, then new lines make great Christmas gifts.

Be sure the breaking strength of the new line is more than the weight of the boat and the length is at least as long as your boat.

Does your boat have a radio? It should, and even if it does, a good handheld submersible VHF radio will allow for communication if everyone is in the water or the electrical system is knocked out.

Another great safety item that should be on all vessels is a floating life ring. Make sure it has rope strung around it so it can be held easily. If you already have one, add a floating polypropylene line that can be tied to the ring so you can retrieve it to throw again or to pull the swimmer back to the boat.

Boats should carry a first-aid kit. If you don't have one, this is a simple gift. If you already have one, consider replacing old bandages or add things that can be used as splints or tourniquets.

Finally, Flotilla 12-02 still has gift certificates that allow the bearer to take any boating safety course we offer in 2020. The cost is $25 and can be purchased from any flotilla member or by contacting Ron West at 757-678-0124.

Local aids notices: On the Eastern Shore, Wachapreague Inlet buoy #2 is out of position about 200 yards north-east of where it should be.

These boating safety articles are a public service of Flotilla 12-02 (Painter) of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary. If you want to learn more about our topics, become a better boater, or help your Coast Guard check out www.USCGAux.org, call me at 757-442-7029 or come to our next meeting on Nov. 26, 7 p.m. at the Exmore firehouse.

Firebirds Land Eighth Place in State Cheer

By Matthew Yoder

The Arcadia Firebirds' impressive journey in cheer ended with an eighth place finish Saturday at the state competition in Richmond. Admitting it wasn't their best performance, coach TJ Smith nonetheless spoke positively of his team's historic season.

"I know they could have done better but I'm still thankful and blessed to have had the opportunity to coach such an amazing group of boys and girls," said Smith.

Near the eve of the competition the team faced the added challenge of having to replace one of its injured members, Kamron Downing. "Friday night after the game we had to stay at the school and redo some stuff," Smith said.

Smith alluded to continuity issues, which he had hoped to avoid going into the competition.

"When a link on a chain is broken you can put that chain back together but it's never as strong as it was. I think the team's mojo was just off with the loss of a member," said Smith.

Under tested circumstances, Smith's roster was filled admirably by alternate Collin Marshall.

"Collin stepped right in and made it happen," said Smith. The competition was a third consecutive coronation for Stuarts Draft. For Smith, who came as a coach and stayed as interested spectator, the performance was transcending.

"They were breathtaking, it was amazing to watch," Smith said. Of his own team, Smith ended with great praise.

"I'm very proud of them for making it to this point. This will be a year I will never forget."

Ponies Lose Semifinals, 3-0

11/7/19 - VOLLEYBALL
RAPPAHANNOCK 3
CHINCOTEAGUE 1

By Matthew Yoder

All great runs eventually come to a conclusion. Chincoteague's historic 2019 season ended with a semifinal loss to Rappahannock in region 1A competition. The three sets to one defeat was not for lack of effort. The Red Raiders just proved to be too formidable for the Ponies.

Chincoteague's focus during pre-game drills was palpable, and it carried over to an all-around inspired team effort in the first set. Alanna Hall was a setting workhorse during drills and opened the set assisting teammate Emma Jackson for a statement-delivering spike on the first point. Strong back line play from Maxine Fernandez, accurate serves from Delilah Flores, and net dominance by Caroline Shelley ignited a raucous Pony Pen and forced an early Rappahannock timeout at 6-2.

The Red Raiders, too, appeared concentrated and technically sound in drills, but at times in the set they looked as a team just feeling out their opponent. Shelley continued to make the net her domain. She would record kills and follow them with blocks and as the Ponies drove the score to 19-10 they forced another Rappahannock timeout. Out of the timeout the Red Raiders made a mini-run to get back into the set. Despite a great dig by Jackson, the Red Raiders bested the Ponies on a long rally and climbed within six points, urging Chincoteague coach Sarah Sharpley to steady her team.

Assistant coach, Jimmy Bloxom, pushed the Ponies to "be aggressive" out of the timeout, as this was the method of play that helped to build the early advantage. Shelley delivered a spike out of the timeout and a couple of points later Chincoteague got within one of earning the set.

The Red Raiders again mounted a charge on great serves from freshman Anna Lee Harris, but a good save from Flores led to things coming full circle in the set for the Ponies, with Jackson securing a lead out the gate with a spike.

The Chincoteague Ponies and their fans were very much alive and Rappahannock was put on notice.

Rappahannock's youth was on display in the second set, and it was an energy well beyond its years. Harris helped her Red Raiders stage a comeback in the first set and opened the second frame with a 9-0 run on her serve. Hall covered the entire court for the Ponies, diving and making great passes deep to the Red Raiders back line, but to no avail. Hall and Flores were great again on the back line and Shelley and Jackson also played well at net, but a real star emerged for the Red Raiders. Candace Slaw delivered an unstoppable performance. Like Harris, Slaw is a freshman, but played like a well-seasoned pro. She tallied spikes in bunches and with great ease and was aided at the net by enthusiastic play from

Julia Whelan.

As Chincoteague transitioned to defensive mode, Harris and Slaw were given too many opportunities for kills, and time and again they were as accurate as they were powerful. The set ended with a spike from Ella Campbell, helping the Red Raiders level the match.

As well as the Ponies played in the first set they needed to sustain that sort of effort and hope to again rattle Rappahannock to keep pace. The Red Raiders wouldn't allow that to happen. They stayed determined and just outplayed with their freshman

Eastern Shore Runners Advance to State

11/6/19 - CROSS-COUNTRY

By Brennan Waldorf

The Division I Region A cross-country meet was held last week Nov. 6 at the Eastern State Hospital in Williamsburg. Chincoteague and Northampton both traveled to the meet to compete against 10 other teams in their division.

In the boys division, Northampton finished seventh overall and was led by Eddie Maldonado-Lopez who finished 17th with a time of 20:08. Chincoteague took eighth place and was led by Connor Dendler who finished 18th with a time of 20:29.

In the girls division, Chincoteague finished sixth and was led by Carli Fradja when she finished with a time of 25:51. Northampton, which didn't have enough runners to record a team score, had two runners named to the All-Region Cross-Country team and will advance to the state tournament. Daniela Gonzalez took top honors finishing third overall with a time of 23:31. Jessica Killebrew will also be running in the state tournament as she finished in 15th place with a time of 25:44.

The Division II Region A cross-country tournament was held simultaneously with division I last week but took place at Bruton High School. Arcadia and Nandua competed against 12 different teams and had great success as both schools advanced runners to the state tournament.

Nanduas boys finished in a close second in the region with 56 points; Bruton High took first with the narrow margin of 60 points. District champion Carlo Balmoria was the first runner to cross the line for the Warriors coming in seventh with a time of 17:46. Ethan Harrower was the next Warrior to cross, finishing with a time of 17:56. Both runners were named to the All-Region Cross-Country team.

The Warriors will advance to the state meet as a team, which speaks volume for the program as there were a total of 91 runners in the event. Finishing in the top 20 for the Warriors were Panuncio Chavez who finished 12th with a time of 18:07, Sebastian Bonilla came in 14th with a time of 18:12, and David Gastelum finished 18th with a time 18:16.

The Lady Warriors registered only three runners in the event and did not qualify for a team score. Areli Enriquez was the top finisher among the Warriors, finishing 14th with a time of 23:07 and will advance to states.

The Arcadia boys team finished eighth with a total score of 234. Arcadia's top runner was Abe Mateos who finished 31st with a time of 19:17. The Lady Firebirds finished fourth overall with 86 points after losing a tiebreaker with Prince Edward County. The Firebirds' top runners were Arisbeth Gomez who finished 13th with a time of 22:58 and Grace Perez who finished 16th with a time of 23:16.

All qualifying runners will advance to the state tournament on Nov. 16 in class. Harris and Slaw increased their efforts, and Whalen brought an intensity too much to overcome. The third and fourth sets were largely copies of the second, and the Red Raiders powered themselves beyond the Ponies for the victory.

The play was competitive throughout, but Rappahannock set leads that were difficult to approach.

"We did all we could living on the edge, we gave them big leads and it's tough fighting back," said Bloxom.

He was still encouraged by the effort.

"We played tough with them, they didn't come over and embarrass us, they're a powerhouse and will be for a long time," Bloxom said. Rappahannock's coach, Kristin Patterson, was unsure of the effect of a four and a half hour drive on her team and what they'd encounter on the Eastern Shore. Ultimately her team looked very prepared, but she was nonetheless congratulatory to her opponent.

"I had no idea what we would get into, the score doesn't do them justice, they gave us a great match," said Patterson.

Everyone in attendance was entertained to tremendous individual and team efforts on both sides from seemingly everyone down the depth charts and fans from both schools remained on the court to celebrate these efforts.

Amid the community of fans, coach Sharpley spoke of her final postgame speech of the season.

"I told them I was proud of them from the get-go," said Sharpley. Rappahannock traveled from a volleyball rich region of the state and Sharpley was proud that her team represented the Shore with composed ability.

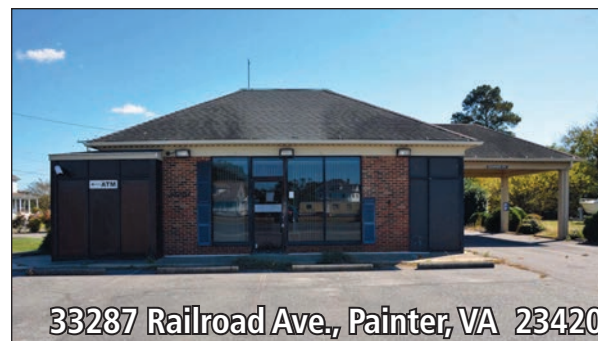

"It's nice for them to see we're competitive," Sharpley said.

The loss negated the opportunity to automatically qualify for the state competition, but Sharpley is optimistic about her team's future. "We still have strong players going into next year," said Sharpley.

With underclassmen contributing from both sides it's reasonable to believe these teams' paths may cross again, and what a match it would be.

Shore Hockey Makeup Summaries from Oct. 25

By Michael Garbacz

Game 1: 3 Knots Taphouse Whalers 8, Blues 2

On a makeup slate of Sunday games, the Whalers sure came out and made up for at least a week's worth of offense on the Blues. In fact, we had ourselves a pair of Old Guy Hat Tricks, between captain Scott Millikin and New York Metzger. Metzger registered a natural hattie in the first and kicked an additional goal plus an assist later; Millikin finished with an eye-popping four goals and two assists for the game. The Blues were never able to find their footing in this one but did manage to stave off a shutout, courtesy of T.R. Hoyt and Matt Yetter, with a little help from James Haley. Brandon Morgan chipped in a pair of helpers for the Whalers; Ryan Parks and Jay Click each also added an assist.

Game 2: Thornton Services Renegades 2, EZ Loan Bruins 2

A hungry 'Gader squad came in looking to feast on a depleted Killer

B's roster, but would have to settle for a tie. Missing gunners up front, the Smooth Criminal put the team on his back and kept them in it through three periods, providing both scores, unassisted. Meanwhile, Trey Lodge had the hot hand for the Renegades, finding the back of the net twice. Neither team was able to break the deadlock after the second period (in fact, the shots wound up even at 17 apiece), so a shootout was in order. There, the goalies won the day, and every shooter was summarily stoned, sealing the tie. The Onancock Kid and Dustin Aigner each threw in an apple for the 'Gaders.

Game 3: Delmarva Soil and Concrete Red Wings 4, K&E Marine Capitals 2

Short benches afflicted both red and blue coming into this tilt, but it was the Wings who were able to steal the win. After falling behind 2-0 courtesy of a duet of Sharkey Parks markers, the Red Wings were able to claw their way back into the contest with a goal in the second and then ran away in the third. In fact, the team effort the Wings put forth netted them a "cycle" on the score-sheet—every player registered at least one point. The Huntsman, Justin Wheeler, Ethan Ayer and Michael Garbacz scored; Stapleton and Ayer also added an assist, as did Devon Corbin, Mike McCready, and George Smith. Jack Smith and the Pat Trick picked up a helper apiece in the loss for the Caps.

Game 4: NeuBeam Harambe 5, Blues 4

The Blues made the most of their chances (converting four times on a modest twelve shots), and received contributions from almost everyone, but still lost yet another heartbreaker, as the gorilla squad was able to edge them out by one goal. Preston Shover turned in a "pace yourself" hat trick along with an assist; power forward Jennie Rice and Zach Webb each tickled the twine and added an apple; Robbie Washington and Luke Webb added an assist apiece. Matt Yetter, not to be outdone by his younger counterpart, also recorded a "pace yourself" hat trick; James Haley scored; Cody Williams and the Parksley Original each registered two helpers; McKaley Parks chipped in an apple.

Game 5: 3 Knots Taphouse Whalers 3, Thornton Services Renegades 7

You could say that the Old Guy energy "carriage" reverted back to a pumpkin in this one, as the 'Gaders ran away with a resounding victory, despite being outshot 24-19. Millikin and New York Metzger were still able to manage a goal and an assist apiece, but it wasn't enough, as it would seem the Renegades' shots had eyes for the back of the net. The Onancock Kid put up a two-goal, two-assist affair; Dustin Aigner tickled the twine two times and added an assist; Ben Bundick, CJ Jones, and Trey Lodge each put the biscuit in the basket; Ray Johnson and Cliff Windsor each chipped in assists. Cory Chance scored the Whalers' other goal; Ryan Parks picked up an assist.

Game 6: EZ Loan Bruins 3, Delmarva Soil and Concrete Red

Wings 2

The penultimate tilt of the day went to Bizarro World, as the Killer B's found themselves hemmed in their own end for vast stretches and managed to register only nine total shots on goal. Meanwhile, the Red Wings' offense was buzzing, but the lack of discipline in their own end, particularly in the first half of the game, cost them the win. What wasn't bizarre, of course, was that the Smooth Criminal led his team in weathering the storm, along with a big performance by goalie Alex McCullough. Williams struck twice; Gabe Nock turned in a multipoint game with a goal and an assist; Chris Potter added a helper. For the Wings, the Huntsman picked up a goal and an assist; George Smith scored; Mike McCready added an apple.

Game 7: K&E Marine Capitals 5, NeuBeam Harambe 4 (Shootout)

The last game was indeed a controversial and wild one, which saw two Caps goals disallowed, only for them to force a shootout and win it there anyway. The gorilla squad, despite being outshot overall 24-13, made the most of their opportunities, exploding in the second period and carrying heavy momentum into the third. However, they could not cut the knot, and the game found itself in a shootout to settle it. Sharkey Parks converted his shootout attempt and then, not to be outdone, newcomer Chauncey Smith followed up with the shot that won the game. Putting away a game via shootout goal is no mean feat, but that was the cherry on top of a pair of markers in regulation for Smith (not a hat trick by the book, but surely one in our hearts—three cheers for Chauncey!). Brett Morgan also found a pair of goals for the Caps; Sharkey Parks added two assists; the Pat Trick had an apple. For Harambe, Preston Shover led the charge, putting up two goals and an assist; Robbie Washington and Johnny Irvin each put home a goal.

Fishing from the Shore

By Bill Hall

The arrival of a weather system last Thursday brought high winds and lower temperatures for the first half of the weekend, but decent fishing had returned by Sunday, lasting through Monday. I don't see such a quick rebound following the predicted arrival of a severe cold front on Tuesday, bringing some cold precipitation and nighttime forecasts of temperatures in the 20s and a daytime high in 30s on Wednesday. This front could very well put an end or at least a lengthy pause in action for most of the warmer water species such as sea mullet (whiting), spot, puffers, and gray trout. Slot-sized red drum were still in abundance as far north as the Ocean City Inlet last weekend. If the water temperatures rebound before these fish pass us, these fish as well some of the more hardy speckled trout could stick around until the next bout of cold weather.

On the positive side, lower water temperatures should result in the earlier than normal arrival of a larger class of rockfish, as well as improved tautog action in the lower bay and over the inshore wrecks. Striped bass fishing effort has been very light for the first part of the season, most likely due to the one fish per person bag limit.

Upper Shore – Captain Matt Abell, at the Seahawk Sports Center, told me that the rockfish were leaving their shallow water haunts and settling into the more temperature consistent deeper water. Captain Abell's recent striped bass charter parties have enjoyed consistent action near the mouth of the Nanticoke River by casting Faux Jigs with Bass Assassins and jigging in the deeper holes in the creeks inside of Smith Island with Got-Cha Jigfish and Crippled Herring jigs. Fellow Seahawk employee Alan Ring was enjoying success on rockfish by concentrating over structure on the north side of Tangier Sound. Both the creeks and the open waters were producing fish in excess of the 19-inch minimum Maryland size limit, with most of the kept fish measuring in the 25- to 26-inch class. Surface water temperatures were down to 54 on Sunday and were expected to fall through the week. Abell noted that speckled trout appear to have already vacated the Maryland bay waters. Black perch were being caught around the mouth of the Pocomoke River as well as inside some of the creeks just south of the Maryland/Virginia state line, while crappie were cooperating inside the freshwater sections of the rivers.

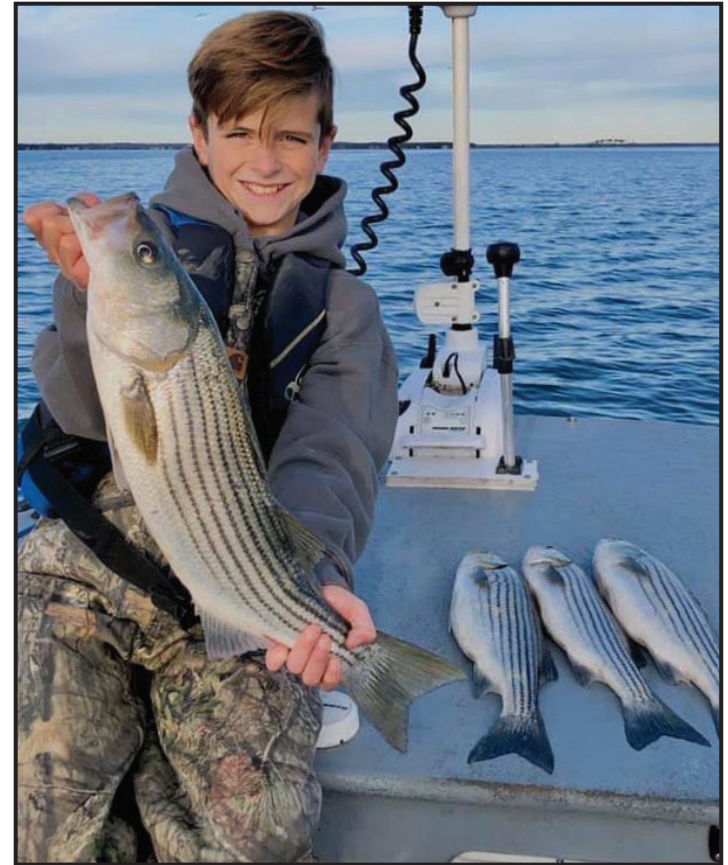

Chincoteague – Jimmy Vasiliou, at Captain Steve's Bait & Tackle on Maddox Boulevard, reported that rockfish were being caught around the bridges of the causeway as well as the bridge to Assateague. A few gray trout, some measuring up to 20 inches and red drum were pulled from the surf prior to the mid-week temperature crash. Vasiliou added that a "few" flounder were still around on the inside. Offshore, false albacore were busting bait on the surface over the wrecks, while black sea bass were being caught on both the inshore and offshore wrecks. Some tautog, black sea bass, and bluefish to 18 inches have been caught over the structures on Blackfish Banks. Vasiliou, Mark Wheatley, Luke Mitchell, and John O'Reilly enjoyed a successful outing with Captain Allen Mitchell aboard the Pipe Layer, landing limits of black sea bass, plus bluefish, while fishing over an offshore wreck. Vasiliou had not heard of any recent speckled trout action but did say that the shop was stocked with fresh small spot for bait.

Lower Shore – Mark Snook, at Chris' Bait & Tackle, said that there were still speckled trout and puppy drum around, with speckles providing action off Kiptopeke. "Other than that, I have not heard of anything going on," he added.

Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle on Cape Charles, told me that anglers are reporting that the speckled trout action has started to slow but there were still some nice-sized fish around. Schoolie rockfish were being caught along the Chesapeake shorelines, but very few have been big enough to keep. Some smaller-sized tautog have been caught around the concrete ships off Kiptopeke State Park and along the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel. Brady said that he expects the size of the togs to get larger as the water temperatures continue to cool.

Bill Hall was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Salt Water Master Angler Status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year and is a Virginia Press Association award-winning sports columnist.

Artisans Guild Holiday Tour Is a Local Thanksgiving Weekend Tradition

Submitted Article and Photos

Just like turkey and sweet potato pie, the Artisans Guild Holiday Tour is a tradition on the Eastern Shore. A 17-year tradition held the Friday and Saturday following Thanksgiving, this year the tour will have almost 50 artists in 17 locations from Cape Charles to Onancock.

The free, self-driving tour promises to take you down country roads, into home studios, historic venues, and a family-owned vineyard and winery. The 2019 tour is Friday, Nov. 29, and Saturday, Nov. 30, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Like mom's pie, the Artisans Tour is a slice of the best art the Shore has to offer. It features juried artisans such as Buck Doughty, who cuts and welds metal into flowers, ospreys, and even depictions of skylines. Doughty will show his work at Windsor House Gallery just north of Cape Charles. Windsor House is the home gallery and studio of Kurt and Sally Lewin, crafters of 18th-century Windsor chairs and furniture, all both comfy and beautifully crafted.

Those who choose to meander along and off the beaten path to Chatham Vineyards in Machipongo will be rewarded with a sampling of the Shore's beautiful landscape, treats from chef Amy Brandt, and tastes of Chatham's award winning wines.

Then travel north and venture off Route 13 to find nationally proclaimed artists such as Elizabeth Rhoades, who loves plein air painting and her new home on one of the Shore's winding creeks. Her inspiration is obvious - it's right out her front door.

The tour will take participants to quaint towns like Belle Haven, Wachapreague, and Pungoteague to visit home studios with painters, glass blowers, sculptors, and even an Alpaca Farm.

At ESO (Eastern Shore's Own) in Belle Haven, tourgoers will enjoy a visit with the llamas that Barbara Baker raises, and inside ESO, visitors can admire the beautiful wares she has designed from their fleece. Carvers, painters, fiber artists, and jewelry will be featured there as well.

Glass vases made by Ken Platt, of Highpoint Glass in Pungoteague, and a necklace made by Christine Richardson, are examples of Artisans' works that will be on display and available for purchase during the tour.

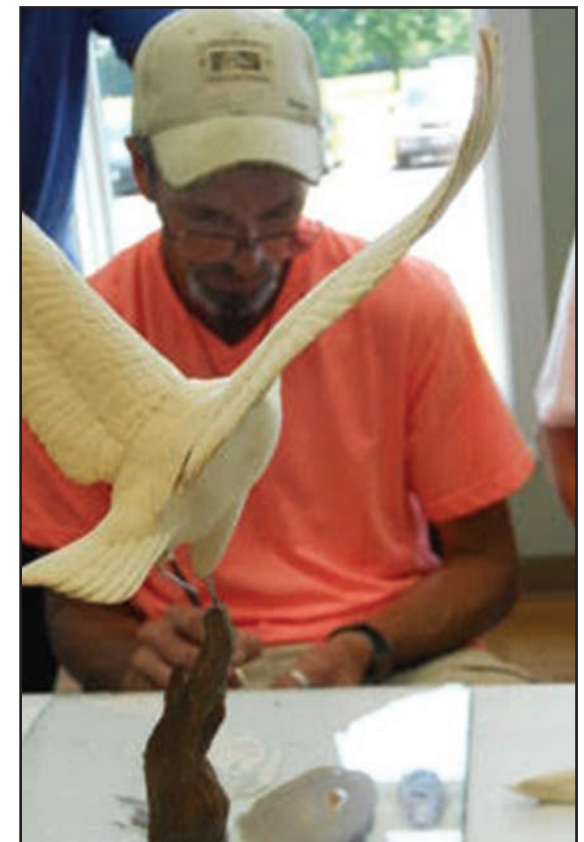

On the outskirts of Onancock, the fabulous home studio of Janis King will be open where she sculpts and paints. She has combined her talents to make one-of-a-kind Santas just for this event.

Finally, the tour winds into Onancock, for a visit to Ker Place, home to the Historical Society of the Eastern Shore. Mansion tours will be paired with the artists such as Richard Toft or David Farlow. Toft paints in the traditional style with egg tempura, much like Andrew Wyeth, while Farlow carves decoy birds as did the "old-timers." History, talent, and a bit of folk lore come together to make his birds.

Onancock has additional stops such as Vesna Zidovec's pottery - beautifully painted pottery; Useful Pots - functional and decorative pottery; and the Historic Onancock School. The school will house ten artists with everything from hand spun wool at Ten Good Sheep to carvings by Master Carver, Billy Crockett, to art quilts by Donna Stuftt and Sarah Jillard. Paintings, sea glass jewelry (Gertrad Fendler of course), handcarved wooden items and crocheted wearables — will all be featured at the Onancock School venue.

A copy of the brochure is available online at www.ESVAArtisansGuild.org or by request at info@ESVAArtisansGuild.org.

Right: Master carver Billy Crockett will be in his studio at the Onancock School during the Artisans Tour.

Off the Shelf: News From Eastern Shore Public Library

Adopt a Book and Help the Library's Collection Grow!

Article and photo submitted by Eastern Shore Public Library

As the end of the year approaches, our thoughts begin to turn toward giving. Gifts may be shared with those near and dear to our hearts, and also with our local community.

This year, please consider giving the gift of reading! The Eastern Shore Public Library (ESPL) has just launched an Adopt-a-Book Program that offers the perfect way to share your love of books and reading with your Shore neighbors.

When you adopt a book for the library, your tax-deductible donation will be acknowledged with a bookplate. The bookplate's inscription can include your name or the name of the person for whom the book was honored or memorialized. Additionally, a letter of acknowledgment can be sent to the recipient of your choice.

There are many adoption possibilities. Choose from a list of bestselling authors or from the upcoming bestsellers list (both available at the library). A nonfiction book about a subject of your choice or a book about the history of Virginia's Eastern Shore would make a great addition to the library's collection. Newly released DVDs and audiobooks are always popular, as are children's and young adult books.

An added perk of adoption is that you can be the first to read your adopted book – even if there is a waiting list for it. Jump to the top of the list for your favorite author's newest release and know that your generosity will benefit all who enjoy the book in the future.

Books can be adopted at all four Eastern Shore library locations: Accomac, Chincoteague, Nassawadox, and Cape Charles. Books, DVDs, and audiobooks are available for $25. Children's and young adult books are available for $20. Multiple month or year-long adoption subscriptions are also available if you'd like to extend your giving over time.

The Adopt-a-Book program is also available year-round, and is an excellent way to celebrate birthdays, anniversaries, and other special occasions. You may want to celebrate the everyday instead and adopt a book just because you love to read. No matter your reason, you'll help the library's collection grow, and you'll make a difference by supporting ESVA literacy.

Visit or call your local Eastern Shore of Virginia public library to find out more. Your ESPL library card can be used at any of the four libraries listed above. To learn about the regional library building project and ESVA Heritage Center in Parksley, opening in 2020, or to donate, visit www.shorelibrary.com For more information about library services, library hours of operation, or your library account, visit www.espl.org, "like" us on Facebook and Twitter, or call the library at 757-787-3400.

Modern Virginians Inspired by Prominent Early Virginia Housewife

By Stefanie Jackson

In November, the thoughts of cooks across America turn to planning the menu for the annual Thanksgiving feast, what is for some the most elaborate meal they will prepare all year.

In modern times, with smaller numbers of women claiming the profession of housewife, it can be mind-boggling to consider that 200 years ago, the lady of the house often planned and managed the preparation of a much bigger meal of more complex dishes every single day.

But that is exactly what a majority of young women did, as Virginia author Leni Sorensen describes in her lecture, “Mary Randolph, the Virginia Housewife and the Unsung Heroines of Her Kitchen, 1780-1826,” as presented at the Barrier Islands Center in Machipongo.

Mary Randolph, born in 1762, was the daughter of wealthy Virginia politician Thomas Mann Randolph Jr.

Thomas Randolph was orphaned at age five and taken in by family friends Peter and Jane Randolph Jefferson, the parents of Thomas Jefferson, who was seven years old at the time.

Mary Randolph, nicknamed Queen Molly, wrote “The Virginia Housewife,” published in 1824 – what some historians consider as the first American cookbook.

It was a guide for new housewives on plantations, who were learning how to run a kitchen.

As early as age 14, these young women were given the responsibility of “keeping the keys.” Common ingredients that contemporary cooks take for granted, like flour and spices, were very expensive and had to be locked up.

Every morning, the housewife would unlock everything and give the head cook only the items needed to prepare the day’s meals.

Spices and seasonings used included parsley, basil, nutmeg, ginger, turmeric, saffron, shallot, and hot peppers.

The black slaves on the plantation were good at using the spices to create “essential” flavors, and they also introduced Caribbean influences into American cuisine.

The plantation housewife usually didn’t cook – that was generally a task for the slaves – but she knew how to cook, and it was her duty to ensure everything was done properly.

In fact, Randolph said “we have no right” as housewives to expect slaves to be more attentive in the kitchen.

Timing was key. For example, corned beef had to begin curing four days ahead of a meal, and herring – while still alive – were put in a brine for 24 hours before they were made into pickled herring.

The Virginia housewife’s culinary repertoire was extensive. She had to know how to make 16 different sauces. She knew how to brew mead and craft spruce beer, fruit-flavored brandy, and cordials.

The housewife also had to know how to prepare white foods like milquetoast and custard, which were thought to be beneficial for the ill or the invalid.

A yeast pot was kept for making white bread, a staple of the upper class. Corn bread was for the lower class.

Most of the cooks were black slave women, and each had a specialty and responsibility for a certain type of dish, such as bread, soup, or meat.

Dinner was the main meal, and since there was no electricity, the meal was served from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., to make use of the day’s last light.

Every dinner featured four courses, including three to four meats, three to four vegetable dishes, soup, salad, plus dessert, which included two to four types of cookies.

Not only were a dozen or more dishes served at every dinner, there were plenty of guests every night. Thomas Jefferson hosted as many as 52 guests at once, all of whom ate dinner and stayed overnight.

Jefferson’s favorite dish was pot roast, made with either fresh or salted beef.

Supper was later, a recapitulation of dinner, served with tea.

Mary Randolph and her husband, David Randolph, moved to Richmond, Va., in 1798 and built a house they named “Moldavia” after themselves – Molly and David.

David Randolph criticized the politics of Jefferson, his second cousin, and there was a major falling out in 1801. After Jefferson became president, he fired David Randolph from his position as a U.S. marshal, and the Randolph family fortune suffered.

Mary Randolph put her culinary skills to new use when she opened a boarding house on Cary Street in 1808. It served black slaves who were “free by night” and had money to buy rations and lodging.

It was through the boarding house that Randolph became famous as a cook and hostess, which led to her writing “The Virginia Housewife” a few years later.

Sorensen is working her way through Randolph’s cookbook, including her recipe for mincemeat – one of the most popular pie fillings in the 19th century.

Mincemeat in the 1800s actually contained meat. Other ingredients included molasses and fruit such as apples, all preserved with brandy.

Sorensen prepares every recipe with admiration for the “incredible, professional, fine work” of the slave women who cooked in Randolph’s kitchens.

She has written cookbooks of her own and teaches cooking classes at Indigo House, her home near Charlottesville, Va.

Corson-Lassiter Named Conservationist of the Year by Conservation Group

Submitted Article

Jane Corson-Lassiter has made a career of forging coalitions for natural resource management. Now, those same skills have garnered her recognition from the Virginia Chapter of the Soil and Water Conservation Society.

The group recently named Corson-Lassiter as its Conservationist of the Year for her outstanding commitment to pollinator habitat establishment and maintenance on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. As the district conservationist for USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service Accomac office, Corson-Lassiter works on a peninsula that supports a diverse ecosystem for butterflies, songbirds, shorebirds, and waterfowl.

Corson-Lassiter was a driving force in establishing a pollinator demonstration site at the Eastern Shore Agricultural Research and Extension Center and an integral player in its maintenance and use as a teaching facility for partners and landowners. Other partners in the effort include the Eastern Shore Soil and Water Conservation District, Virginia Cooperative Extension, and Virginia Tech.

"Our current work with the new Black Duck Initiative has brought several participants in the door for projects that provide habitat for ducks and pollinators, too," says Corson-Lassiter. "We are excited to be working on a range of habitat activities along with multiple best management practices on the area's working farms."

Corson-Lassiter holds a bachelor's degree in biology from Brandeis University and a master's in landscape architecture from the University of Virginia (UVA). Though she received her degrees before environmental science programs were widely available, her studies and career choices have always followed that path. Corson-Lassiter has more than 25 years' experience promoting environmental stewardship, including work with the Eastern Shore of Virginia Soil and Water Conservation District and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in the Upper Ohio River Valley, Florida and Puerto Rico.

In 2009, she began working with NRCS as the coordinator/technical advisor for the Eastern Shore Resource Conservation and Development Council (RC&D), a small nonprofit that builds consensus and solutions for local natural resource concerns.

Using grant funding from the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, the RC&D partnered with the Chesapeake Bay Foundation to initiate the Onancock Watershed Restoration Project, a community-wide approach to addressing local water quality concerns. Under that program, she helped make variable rate N-application technology available to area farmers, installed native plant community gardens, refitted urban parking lots with green bioretention and planted riparian buffers.

Corson-Lassiter's work with RC&D gave her a broad understanding of common resource concerns in other states and regions and led to a new multiyear project focusing on nutrient management in poultry production across the Chesapeake Bay watershed. Her team deployed technology demonstrations in Virginia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania to showcase systems designed to capture energy and nutrients from the manure/litter at poultry farms as an alternative to land application.

The career conservationist just began her sixth year serving farmers and landowners in two of the largest grain-producing counties in the commonwealth. The area is also home to significant aquaculture, poultry, and vegetable (tomato and potato) production. Her current work in the Accomac Field Office provides an opportunity for the Eastern Shore native to work closer to home.

Corson-Lassiter says she still find natural resource conservation to be challenging and rewarding. She is also proud to pass on that environmental legacy to the next generation through her two children, Daniel and Emily. Daniel received his degree in civil engineering from UVA and works on stream and wetland restoration for a Charlottesville-based company. Emily has a doctorate in biological systems engineering from Virginia Tech and is a research scientist for the BSE program on water resource concerns in agriculture.

Kick Canned Cranberries to the Curb With Homemade Relish

By Laura Davis

Thanksgiving is such an exciting time. The preparations, the meal, the family and friends - all giving way to the official kickoff of the holiday season. Growing up our breakfast always consisted of orange sweet rolls while watching the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, while the smell of turkey wafts in the air all morning long. That's a tradition I have kept going with my little ones today. We all have those little traditions that we look forward to every year and make our holidays unique and special.

My husband's mother hosts Thanksgiving dinner on Chincoteague every year, so I usually get to take it pretty easy on Turkey Day. I have a few things that I'm always required to contribute to the feast, however - which I thought would be fun to share with you guys before the big day.

Everyone has their favorite way to cook the bird (myself included - you can find the recipe on my blog), but I wanted to share some things that are super easy to whip up for your holiday table - and so much better than their store-bought counterparts. You'll be kicking that canned cranberry sauce to the curb after one bite of homemade cranberry relish!

Eastern Shore delicacies like salty oysters and sweet potatoes will always have a place shining brightly on my holiday menu - I hope you'll make room for them on yours as well. Happy Thanksgiving, friends.

Laura Davis is a food writer/photographer based on Chincoteague Island. Her work has been featured in publications such as Chesapeake Bay Magazine, Taste of Home, and Savor Virginia. She blogs about food, drinks, and new recipes at www.tideandthyme.com

Fresh Cranberry Relish

12 ounces (1 bag) fresh cranberries
 3/4 cup sugar
 zest from 1 orange or tangerine
 1/4 cup fresh orange juice
 3/4 cup water
 1/2 cup pecan halves

Toast the pecans in a small, dry skillet over medium heat for a few minutes – until starting to brown and are fragrant. Set aside to cool, and then roughly chop.

In a large saucepan combine the cranberries, sugar, water, and orange juice. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Once cranberries begin to burst, reduce heat to low and simmer for about 15 minutes.

Remove from heat, and stir in pecans and orange zest. Place into small serving bowl, cover with plastic wrap, and refrigerate until ready to use.

... and Add Sweet and Savory Eastern Shore Specialties

Eastern Shore Oyster Stuffing

6 cups 1/2-inch-cubed French bread	3 tablespoons fresh parsley, chopped
3 slices bacon, cut into small pieces	1 tablespoon fresh thyme, chopped
3 tablespoons butter	1 tablespoon fresh sage, chopped
1/2 onion, finely diced	1/4 teaspoon hot sauce
2 ribs celery, finely diced	kosher salt
1 pint shucked oysters, liquid reserved	freshly ground black pepper
1/2 cup chicken stock
2 tablespoons white wine	3 tablespoons butter, melted

Heat oven to 250 degrees. Arrange bread cubes on a baking sheet in a single layer and bake, stirring occasionally, until dried but not browned, about 15 minutes. Let cool.

Cook bacon in a large skillet over medium-high heat, stirring frequently, until crisp, about 10 minutes. Add onions and celery, reduce heat to medium, and cook, stirring occasionally, until vegetables are starting to soften, about 5 minutes. Add reserved liquid from oysters, stock, wine, parsley, herbs, hot sauce, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil over high heat and cook, stirring occasionally, for 5 minutes. Scrape the mixture into a large bowl and stir in the bread cubes and oysters. Set aside to allow the flavors to come together for 10 minutes.

Raise the oven temperature to 400 degrees. Transfer mixture to a buttered 2-qt. oval baking dish and cover with foil. Bake for 30 minutes, remove foil, drizzle with remaining butter, and continue baking until golden brown and crusty, about 15 minutes more. Serve immediately.

Use locally grown sweet potatoes for an authentically Eastern Shore end to your meal. Photo by Laura Davis.

Sweet Potato Pie (Thanks to JoSue Carroll for the recipe!)

2 cups sweet potato puree* (about 3 medium sweet potatoes)
 3/4 cup granulated sugar
 1 12-ounce can evaporated milk
 2 eggs, beaten
 1 tablespoon flour
 1 teaspoon lemon extract
 1 unbaked pie shell

Pour into pie shell and bake for around 50 minutes, until crust is golden brown and the filling doesn't jiggle.

Remove from oven to cool to room temperature before serving. Or refrigerate for a chilled pie.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Combine sweet potato puree, sugar, evaporated milk, eggs, flour, and lemon extract in a large bowl. Whisk until combined and smooth.

* To make the sweet potato puree: Pierce sweet potatoes in a few spots with a fork and microwave at high power for about 10 minutes or roast at 350° for about 1 hour, until tender. Let cool slightly, then peel and puree in a food processor.

Marine Recounts Daring Helicopter Rescue in Vietnam

By Linda Cicaira

John Schoolfield, of Franktown, joined the Marine Corps right after graduating from high school and before he could get drafted in 1965. He served until 1969 and vividly remembers his tour of Vietnam.

It was late March 1968 that 21-year-old Schoolfield came in contact with the Tet Offensive, a series of surprise attacks by the Viet Cong. Those rebel forces sponsored by North Vietnam caused a turning point in the war.

There was still “considerable enemy activity” in the area of I Corps, near the demilitarized zone (DMZ) where he was serving as crew chief of YP-21 helicopter stationed at Quang Tri Combat Base, in Central Vietnam.

Schoolfield hailed from Connecticut. His parents were Eastern Shore natives - both writers - Kaatje Hurlbut (his mother’s pen name, sister to artist Babbie Dunnington) and John Schoolfield Sr., a newspaperman, who was raised in Pocomoke, Md.

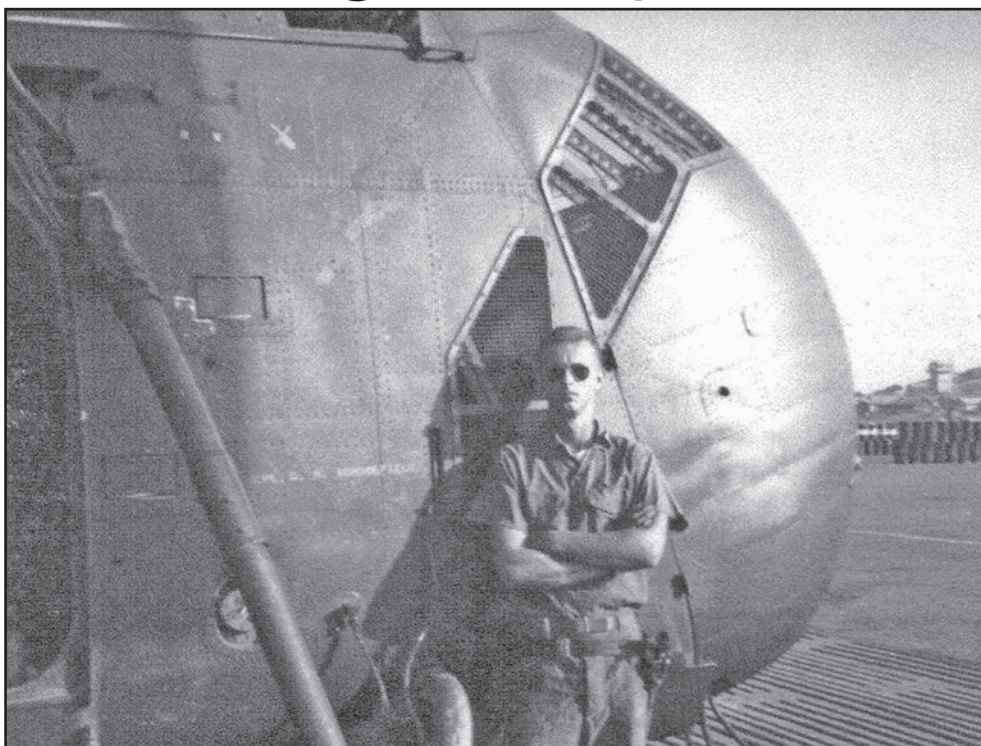

Schoolfield was with Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 163, or “Ridge Runners.” The unit was well known in I Corps and easily distinguished by the large white and black evil eyes painted on the nose of the aircraft.

“It was my last month in Vietnam and my tenth month as a crew chief,” Schoolfield remembered. “There was a significant combat operation in the process just south of the DMZ, about 15 miles to the north of Quang Tri Base and my aircraft was the day’s designated emergency standby bird to be called upon only if the Marines encountered serious problems and the other aircraft were unavailable. We were the helicopter of last resort.”

Schoolfield’s aircraft was pre-warmed and test-flown that morning for the early afternoon scramble. “As our wheels lifted off the runway,” a pilot advised him about “a significant number of Marines” that had been caught out in the open by artillery fire just south of the DMZ. “Casualties were extensive, perhaps as many as 30 wounded.”

Schoolfield’s task was to take out the wounded, so the remaining Marines could clear the area on foot as quickly as possible as there were no roads in the area and not enough helicopters.

The regular four-man crew had been complemented by a Navy corpsman.

“Our pilot that day was a new addition to the squadron and I had not flown with him before,” said Schoolfield. “This mission was clearly high risk and I hoped that he was a skilled pilot. He was a captain, which at least told me that he was likely to be heavy on experience.”

“Just after passing over the Dong Ha Combat Base, the pilot ... announced that we were going Lima Lima, or low level, which was standard procedure on an approach in the vicinity of the DMZ.”

This type of approach was necessary to reduce the likelihood of being spotted by the North Vietnamese Army (NVA) radar or spotters. “If the NVA knew we were inbound, they could destroy us in seconds with artillery once we were on the ground,” said Schoolfield. “We knew they already had the range and bearing of the beleaguered Marines. An unannounced arrival was imperative for this mission.”

“The pilot shoved the nose down with conviction and flew the bird to the ground, pulling up smoothly about 10 to 15 feet from the deck,” Schoolfield said. “The rapid descent was nicely executed and I was encouraged by this pilot’s skill. We hugged the rolling terrain for several miles until the copilot called out a new heading. Then the pilot hauled the H-34 into a gut-wrenching starboard turn as we dove into a shallow valley which would make us less visible to enemy spotters or radar and help mask the sound of our rotors on approach.”

They barreled down the valley at an altitude so low the rotor wash rocked the scrub brush below. The pilot changed direction suddenly and nimbly, slightly to the left and right, to reduce the odds of enemy snipers drawing a bead on the pilot’s windscreen or nose-mounted engine.

Schoolfield was impressed. As crew chief, he was responsible for loading, defending, and repairing the aircraft. Takeoff weight was extremely critical with helicopters. An overload of as little as a few hundred pounds could cause a crash. The pilot had to have an absolutely accurate weight every time. Schoolfield did a quick assessment and determined they could handle 800 pounds of cargo. He added another 100 pounds based on the cool dense air, light breeze, and pilot skill. The total represented five Marines.

“I could see a half-mile of rolling terrain and a broad expanse of dried rice paddies beyond,” Schoolfield said. The pilot announced “we were inbound with an estimated time of arrival of 1.5 minutes and advised them to standby with smoke ... We continued the low and fast approach. About “300 feet out of the landing zone, I hung out the door to watch ... for safety as we executed a high-speed low-level landing. It was a fast but perfect landing.” He put his M-60 machine gun on safety and stowed it while scanning the zone.

“What I saw was a scene from a combat Marine’s worst nightmare,” Schoolfield continued. “The rotor wash had mixed the acrid yellow smoke with gray rice paddy dust and rice straw and the gray/yellow cloud swirled around the aircraft and Marines causing an ugly fog. At our two o’clock, beside a 2- to 3-foot rice paddy dike, were two wounded Marines being flailed unmercifully by the corners of the ponchos on which they were lying. The olive drab of their fatigues contrasted sharply with the white bandages stained red with blood.”

At three o’clock, the radio operator kneeled, head down, as he communicated while trying to shield his face and eyes from the flying straw and grit. There was not a firm number of wounded.

Schoolfield considered the possibility of overload. He could either dump the center fuel tank, which would take four or five minutes and was the most dangerous, or risk a rolling takeoff which could take as much as a mile but could add another 400 to 600 hundred pounds of capacity.

With a warren of rice paddy dikes 200 to 300 feet apart and pocked with shell craters from the artillery barrage, he thought the latter option would be very difficult or impossible.

“I saw the first wounded Marine approaching from the rear,” said Schoolfield. He was tall and thin and was being supported by a comrade.

“I dropped to the step and helped him through the door noticing he was standing on the side of his right boot. His foot was cocked off to the side. Despite his shattered ankle, he seemed oblivious to pain,” Schoolfield noted. “I motioned for him to sit in the jump seat. He shook his head with conviction indicating he wanted to stay by the door and help his fellow Marines as they entered. I shrugged and allowed him to stand as we took in a medevac who had a horrible abdominal wound. His face was pale and his breathing was shallow but he was alert enough to look around the aircraft. The gunner, the doc, the tall marine, and I took the four corners of his poncho and gently placed him crossways in front of the window. I knelt beside him, raised his head, and placed a soft cargo strap under it so that the side of the vibrating aircraft would not cut into his scalp.”

The two badly wounded that were first spotted, and another with equally threatening injuries, would have made a full load. But two more were brought up on the left side.

“There was no discussion of the risk of a takeoff with an overload—we all knew the risks and this was what we had to do,” Schoolfield said. “I slid the legs of the three forward wounded aside and we carefully placed the torsos of the two Marines in the small open space and lapped their legs over the hips of the others doing our best not to cause them further injury or restrict their breathing. Another medivac was brought in from behind the aircraft and we were able to squeeze him in.”

“I turned back to the door and to my disbelief, there was yet another wounded in a poncho being held in the arms of another Marine. I frantically scanned the cabin but there was no usable space left. The only option was to strap him into my chair by the door and stand in the doorway for the return flight.”

Schoolfield and the tall Marine hauled the last wounded man to the door. “To my horror, the Marine’s head rolled from his shoulders into his lap. After recovering from the shock, I slid the soldier back into the arms of the Marine on the ground, dropped down on the step, placed my arm on his shoulder and shouted to him that we were badly overloaded and could not take his friend at this time because he was dead. He simply stared at me with glazed eyes —uncomprehending — clearly in shock. Mercifully, two fellow Marines appeared, quickly assessed the situation, and helped their comrades away from the door.”

“We were so grossly overloaded I couldn’t take a risk for one who had died,” Schoolfield said, adding, another helicopter was sent.

With eight wounded and one corpsman, Schoolfield reached down for his wire cutters preparing to ask to dump fuel. “The Pilot gave me quite a shock as he quickly brought the rotors and engine up to full power and gingerly raised the aircraft on her struts as if to test the weight of the load.

The pilot started rolling the H-34 forward toward the upwind rice paddy dike and simultaneously lifted the tail of the aircraft into the air creating a nose-down attitude—like a wheelbarrow. As he accelerated towards the first dike I took a deep breath—and held it.

I then understood his plan—he was going to use the momentum in the spinning rotor blades rotors for a brief moment to hop over the rice paddy dike. We couldn’t fly, but we could leap.”

“I kept my head out the door watching as we reached the first dike at about 10 mph and made the hop—we cleared the dike by a foot and accelerated to the next and cleared it as well. We continued to accelerate and the hops became faster and faster ... We reached what I estimate must have been 50 mph and were jumping every four or five seconds sometimes clearing the dikes by mere inches. Finally, after leaping over at least a dozen paddy dikes we cleared one at perhaps 70 mph, took a single bounce, and stayed airborne at about six inches above the ground. We raced towards the final paddy dike, lifting slowly and cleared it by less than a foot. The venerable H-34 gained speed and lift rapidly after clearing the last dike and the pilot pulled YP-21 into a sweeping left turn as we headed for Dong Ha’s Delta Med.

“I blasted out a lungful of air and gasped for breath, realizing that I had held my breath through this entire, truly remarkable, takeoff. Not a word was spoken by the crew or pilots. We simply flew towards Dong Ha, amazed I suppose, that we were still alive and were able to bring all of our Marines home. It was my 13th and final month in Vietnam and I had never heard of a takeoff like this one ever.

“The doc and I arranged, untangled, and shut down the numerous IV bags as we approached Dong Ha while the tall Marine crawled around the cabin and comforted his fellow Marines with a hug a handclasp or a thumbs up. Not a single Marine complained about their wounds or the way they were packed into the crew compartment.”

The landing was solid and the wounded were taken into the field hospital. Another man did not survive. Schoolfield reached out to shake the tall Marine’s hand. “But instead he threw his arms around me, gave me a bear hug and began to sob. Tears poured down his face carving pink rivulets in the gray rice paddy dust. ‘Thank you,’ he said. ‘Thank you all for helping my friends.’ I replied that it was he and his fellow Marines should be thanked after what they had been through and survived on that day.”

In Loving Memory of
Mike Huether

4/8/55-11/15/07

Daddy,

We miss you every day and we live with only the memory of a father who lived his life for his girls. Thank you for giving us the love and the laughs. It's been 12 years since we saw your hard-working hands, laughed while you went on and on about what deer eat, or cried when we found out that we'd never hear you say "Dahlin'" again. Until we meet again...

Love,

Angie and Christy (the Huether girls)

Willie (Boot) Giddins &
Linda Watts-Giddins
Happy Heavenly Birthday to my Darling Husband 11/03.

I miss you today as much as before 12/20/09.
Rest in Paradise
Sugarbear.

The Eastern Shore of Virginia is a great place to live. You can refer to our area as the Shore, ESVA, the best part of Delmarva, the land of pleasant living, or just home sweet home.

Town and village names have pronunciations that are sometimes slaughtered by the masses. I saw that two locations here were listed in a guide of Virginia places noted on a television station. Accomack, (AK-uh-mak) the county, and Accomac, the town, are both pronounced the same way in that report, which is correct.

There are a couple of names that make children laugh. Onancock (oh-NAN-kawk) was the way the TV reported it should be said. But most Shore folks say Oh-NAN-cock. I've heard Assawoman pronounced as both Ass-a-woman or Ass-a-woo-man.

As you can see, I prefer to use a radio station's style of written enunciation rather than the phonetic one of a collegiate dictionary.

Painter is a tricky one. Although the name has made artists move to the town or area, the real way to say it, which is the way the natives do, is to forget the "t" and just say Pay-ner.

One would think the name Lee Mont would be self-evident. But I've heard it said Lamont as if one was talking about Fred's son on the old sitcom, "Sanford and Son." And while we're on that subject, the little spot on the way to Saxis (Sax-us) is just like Fred's last name and not Sand-ford.

Nandua was a 17th-century Native American princess. It is also the name of a local high school, a middle school, and an area in Accomack County. Nandua is pronounced nan-DUE-uh, not Nan-duer or Nan-duey.

When I moved to the Shore (at the age of nine), I was very pleased to learn how to say Wachapreague (Watch-ah-prig), which means Little City by the Sea. Other Indian names of towns and villages are Nassawadox (Nass-a-WAD-ducks), Pungoteague (PUN-go-tig), Machipongo (not Macho), Chesconessex (Ches-a-NES-ex), and the most widely mispronounced island of Chincoteague (SHINK-co-tig).

Cheriton (CHAIR-a-ton) is not the hotel chain Sheraton. Quinby is said Quin-bee and not Quim-bee. Onley is pronounced OWN-lee, not to be confused with Maryland's Olney.

This short column is being debated among our staff now. So my final word is my name is Linda (Leenda) Cicaira (Sah-core-ah) or in Italian (Chick-core-ah). Whew!

More on Solar Energy

Dear Editor:

The letter by Jim Belote that appeared in the Nov. 1 edition referenced ANEC's Cooperative Sunshare program, which he correctly states is more expensive than "standard electricity." What he neglected to explain is that this is not the best, most economical way to adopt solar power, but it does allow those homeowners who don't have the capital to install their own system to be able to participate in our growing green economy.

The strongest economic case for solar energy is direct rooftop solar. We purchased solar photovoltaic and hot water panels in 2009; after federal and state tax credits, the payback period was 10.5 years, or right about now. Since the panels typically last 20 to 25 years; that's 15 years of free electricity. And we don't pay any premium for our electricity (actually, we don't pay anything at all for 10 months out of the year, since we generate more than we use) – it's billed to us at the same rate as everyone else.

And the cost of panels is about one-third what it was 10 years ago, and is going down every year.

As for the subsidies, ask yourself about the mortgage interest deduction, or fossil fuel companies that pay no taxes at all.

We need to move away from fossil fuels on a massive scale. Rather than constantly finding the negatives about solar, we should be finding ways to level the playing field, so we can all take advantage of the economics of solar and other renewables.

Bloxom Wrong on Menhaden

Dear Editor:

I sent the following addressed to Del. Rob Bloxom on election day:

I have been and am an ardent supporter of conservative political issues for the entirety of my adult and adolescent life. I have missed zero national elections and have supported every Republican nominee in every race to date from 1972 on.

However, that appears to be at risk today, since I became aware, mistakenly, I hope, of your refusal to support the cessation of legislative direction of the menhaden fishery. It is obvious to any serious conservationist that the legislature of the Commonwealth of Virginia is inept at best, and corrupt at worst, when it comes to management of the menhaden fishery.

All who care are aware of Omega Protein's efforts to effectively buy off the legislature of the Commonwealth of Virginia. I'm sorry to say that apparently, you are included. Shame on you. That is dishonest, in my opinion, and that is the only opinion I care to subscribe to.

Politics Don't Have To Be Ugly

Dear Editor:

Political elections can be contentious times and this past election cycle certainly proved that to be true. Our country and local community appear to be sharply divided along political lines. But there are times when those lines blur and Tuesday's rainy election morning was just one of those times.

I volunteered to campaign from 6 a.m. until 8 a.m. in the rain on election day at Johnson's United Methodist Church, in Machipongo. I came prepared with a warm sweater, raincoat and umbrella, but found I could not hold my umbrella and hand out literature at the same time, so I ditched the umbrella and held the literature inside my jacket to keep it dry.

A local candidate was also campaigning at that polling site with a large umbrella. He insisted we share his umbrella and I must admit, I was grateful.

It was clear we held differing political opinions and we acknowledged that fact. Yet, we continued to spend those rainy two hours conversing about the Shore, hops, and farming in between campaigning. I would like to thank Dixon Leatherbury for embodying the belief that people with opposing political views can be civil and downright friendly with each other. Thank you for sharing your umbrella with me.

As we move into the next election cycle, I hope more people are willing to acknowledge, yes, we see things differently and that's O.K. and we can share an umbrella.

Melody Copper, Machipongo

Candidate Thanks Voters

Dear Editor:

Thank you to all who lent me support, both as a candidate and in the effort to have an elected school board. An especially big thank you to the volunteers, who collected over 4,400 signatures to get the referendum on the ballot and all the people (74%) who voted YES to an elected school board. Tuesday November 5th marked the start of new era for our school division.
