Offshore Wind Farm Threatens Tangier Family's Conch Fishing Livelihood

By Stefanie Jackson

A small group of Tangier watermen find themselves competing with Virginia's biggest power company, Dominion Energy, for natural resources in an area just outside the Chesapeake Bay 27 miles off the coast of Virginia Beach.

Dominion Energy is using a 2,135-acre site in federal waters – leased by the Virginia Department of Mines, Minerals, and Energy – for its recently launched Coastal Virginia Offshore Wind Project, a two-turbine, offshore wind test site.

Each turbine produces about six megawatts of power.

The pilot project will prepare Dominion for 2024, when it plans to begin constructing 188 commercial offshore wind turbines that will produce about 14 megawatts of energy each – or more than 2,600 megawatts.

The offshore wind project is part of a goal for Dominion's Virginia operations to be 100% carbon-free by 2045, as required by the Virginia Clean Economy Act, signed into law by Gov. Ralph Northam in April.

But even in the testing phase, the offshore wind project is interfering with the livelihood of watermen who have had much success in the area fishing for conch and black sea bass.

Todd Janeski, Virginia Coastal Zone Management Program ocean planning stakeholder engagement coordinator, has been facilitating meetings between Dominion Energy and the watermen with the goal of preserving the livelihoods of the Eastern Shore men and a decades-old way of life.

Tommy Eskridge, of Tangier, has been a conch fisherman for 25 y ears, s ince h is s on w as t hree months old.

The conch is a shellfish k nown for its distinctive spiral shape that makes it popular with shell collectors.

The outer shells are used as landfill, but the conch is primarily used for food. Some of the conch Eskridge catches stays in the U.S., but most of it is shipped to Asia.

Conch has similarities to both clam and oyster, but it's richer and more dense, pushing it a "step above" that makes for "very, very good food," Eskridge said.

Conch can be steamed, fried, made into fritters, and cooked in a chowder, just like clams and oysters.

Eskridge's favorite way to eat conch is right out of the cooker at the processing plant.

To say that conch fishing is hard work would be an understatement. On an average work day, Eskridge arises at 3:30 a.m., departs the dock at 4 a.m., and doesn't return until 7 or 8 p.m.

He and his crew work together on a 42-foot deadrise boat with a forward cabin and open deck.

They catch the conch in pots, similar to crab pots but roughly half the size and less enclosed. The conch are caught when they climb up the pot and fall through the opening at the top. They are baited by horseshoe crabs and dogfish heads (the heads of spiny dogfish, a type of shark).

Eskridge, his son, Thomas Reed

Eskridge, and his cousin, James Eskridge, each put out 1,000 pots and work 500 of them per day. They let each pot "soak" for 48 hours to get maximum use out of the expensive bait.

Tommy Eskridge catches blue crabs when conch are out of season. The conch are always there, but they don't come out of hiding until they're done molting for the summer and the mating season is over.

Late fall to late spring is the time for conch to fatten up. The conch fishing season runs from November or December to May or sometimes June, Eskridge said.

An average day's work will yield 1,500 to 2,000 pounds of conch in the shell, but a "hot spot" once yielded 7,200 pounds of conch in one day.

In 2014, the hot spot provided 90% of Eskridge's conch catch for the

That hot spot is in the Virginia Wind Energy Area where Dominion plans to build its commercial wind turbines.

at the bottom of the bay, about two meters deep.

No trenches are dug to bury the cables; instead, a method called jet plowing is used, which blows back sediment as the cable is laid.

The cables will lead directly to Virginia Beach, connecting to three substations along the way.

Dominion representatives told watermen during an Oct. 20 meeting that the EMF from a cable would be comparable to that of a "toaster oven."

That assurance did not appear to instill confidence in the fishermen, who questioned how that comparison was determined and whether even a small EMF could negatively affect a conch.

No scientific study has been done specifically on the effects of EMFs on conch. The most relevant study involved the effects of EMFs on sturgeon, which was compiled by Janeski and can be found on the Virginia Department of Environmental Quality website.

that one goal of their meetings with local fishermen is to determine what additional studies must be done to inform the ongoing planning phase of the wind turbine construction project.

Dominion is considering the Virginia Institute of Marine Science as a research partner, which would solicit input from watermen.

The basic layout of the offshore wind site is done, but small adjustments, or "micrositing," is possible, since construction won't begin for four years and the project is currently in the preliminary design phase.

Kevin Carroll, of Dominion Energy, told the watermen the offshore wind project will proceed "with respect to what you do."

He said "this is going to be good for Virginia" but acknowledged Dominion's responsibility for the farther-reaching impacts of its project.

Lane Johnston, programs manager for the Responsible Offshore Development Alliance, a fishing industry coalition, also attended the Oct. 20 meeting.

She followed up with a Nov. 4 letter addressed to the meeting's leaders, Kevin Carroll, Lloyd Eley, and Scott Lawton, all of Dominion Energy, and Ron Larsen, of Sea Risk Solutions, a marine risk mitigation company.

She wrote on behalf of captains Tommy Eskridge, James Eskridge, Thomas-Reed Eskridge, Spencer Headley, Mark Hodges, Art Hodges, and Kenneth Hodges.

Their requests include limiting construction to seasons when fishing will be minimally impacted, involvement in cooperative research, specific inclusion of black sea bass and conch pot fisheries in Dominion's Construction and Operations Plan, and plans to compensate the fishermen for losses due to area closures and catch reductions.

The watermen's work is challenging enough with "Mother Nature" as their only adversary, and Eskridge worries that the addition of the wind turbines will be "devastating."

He will continue to fight for the preservation of the watermen's livelihoods, but he wasn't talking about the tides when he said, "there's so much against us."

A-NPDC Program Offers Free Septic Pump-Outs to Those With Low to Moderate Incomes

By Stefanie Jackson

The Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission (A-NPDC) is seeking applicants for the Eastern Shore Septic Pump-Out Program.

A successful applicant can get a septic system pumped out for free or receive assistance for the costs to repair or replace the septic system, depending on the applicant's location, income, and other factors.

The program is made possible by funding from the Virginia Department of Environmental Quality for improving the Chesapeake Bay watershed and taking action on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Water Quality Implementation Plan for creeks with bacteria levels above recommended levels.

There are two parts to the program. Low- and moderate-income families who own their homes and live in Accomack or Northampton County, on the Chesapeake Bay watershed, can apply for the free septic pump-out service.

For this benefit, the household income limit is less than 80% of the area median income, or below about $40,000 annually.

The second part of the program applies only to homes in certain areas of Northampton County – homes on the watersheds of Hungars Creek, Jacobus Creek, Mattawoman Creek, Barlow Creek, The Gulf, and Kings Creek.

Primary residences, second homes, and rental homes qualify as long as the applicant is the homeowner, who may apply for septic system pump-out, inspection, and repair or replacement. Applicants can receive cost-share assistance on a sliding scale based on income.

An applicant with an annual income more than 120% of the median area income, or higher than about $70,000, can receive a 50% cost share without providing income justification.

Northampton County Supervisor John Coker recommended the program during a recent supervisors meeting attended by A-NPDC Director of Housing Development Bobbie Jo Wert.

"We need people to pump out their septic systems, and if we can get them done for free, why not?" Coker asked.

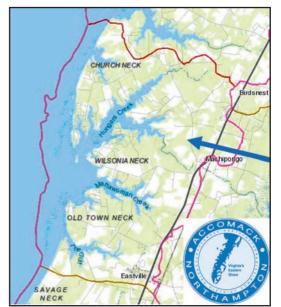

The Virginia Department of Health recommends pumping out home septic systems every three to five years.

The A-NPDC program is especially valuable to applicants who qualify for septic system replacement. A new septic system can cost up to $30,000, Wert noted.

If a homeowner is unsure if property is in a qualifying location, the homeowner may call Wert or A-NPDC Director of Planning Shannon Alexander to look up the residential address before beginning the application process.

The Eastern Shore Septic Pump-Out Program has limited funding and is available to qualifying applicants on a first-come, first-serve basis.

For more information, call 757-787-2800, visit www.a-npdc.org, or email info@a-npdc.org

Many areas eligible for cost assistance for septic system repair and replacement through the A-NPDC Eastern Shore Septic Pump-Out Program are within the colored lines above. The Kings Creek watershed, which includes much of Cheriton, is also eligible. Composite image from A-NPDC sources.

Gov. Northam Urges Continued Vigilance as Vaccine Nears Readiness

By Stefanie Jackson

Gov. Ralph Northam urged Virginians not to become complacent about the coronavirus pandemic after the recent announcement of the Pfizer drug corporation's COVID-19 vaccine that's 90% effective.

"This isn't the magic bullet. Any approved vaccination will still take months to distribute," Northam cautioned.

"When a vaccine is ready, one that is safe and effective, we will be ready, too. in Virginia," he said.

Virginia has been planning for months to distribute a COVID-19 vaccine in an equitable manner.

The Office of Diversity, Inclusion, and Equity also has been involved in the distribution of personal protective equipment, or PPE.

Chief Diversity Officer Janice Underwood has overseen Virginia's Health Equity Work Group as it distributed more than 850,000 masks and nearly 700,000 bottles of hand sanitizer across the state.

The governor also offered advice on handling the upcoming Thanksgiving holiday.

"I'm not saying don't celebrate Thanksgiving, but if you're planning to gather with people outside of your household, think about ways to do it more safely," Northam said.

COVID-19 spreads through the air and is more easily spread indoors. When planning a gathering of family members from multiple households, consider how well the home is ventilated and whether the event can be held outdoors, he said.

There is no "genetic immunity" to COVID-19 that will prevent its spread from one family member to another like a parent or grandparent, Northam said.

Family gatherings should be small and precautions should be taken, such as frequent hand-washing and wearing masks.

Three additional labs have entered contracts to participate in Virginia's One Lab network created specifically for COVID-19 testing.

The network, which included public health labs in Northern Virginia and Richmond, will be joined by labs in Blacksburg, Va., Charlottesville, Va., and the Tidewater area.

One Lab will enable Virginia to conduct about 7,000 more COVID-19 tests per day by year's end. Around 19,000 to 20,000 COVID-19 tests currently are done daily statewide.

An order of 200,000 rapid antigen tests is arriving and being distributed to nursing homes and other facilities. More than 52,000 rapid tests from the federal government also have been distributed.

COVID-19 tests are being sent to the Virginia Hospital and Healthcare Association, institutions of higher education, and local health departments.

Virginia's COVID-19 testing response has greatly improved since the beginning of the pandemic. When the state's first COVID-19 case was identified March 7, it took one to two weeks to get test results.

Now results for COVID-19 tests are determined in one to three days, or as little as 15 to 20 minutes for the rapid test. Northam said.

As of Tuesday, there were 1,435 new cases of COVID-19 and 13 additional COVID-19-related deaths in Virginia, bringing the state's COVID-19 totals to 194.912 cases and 3.726 deaths.

The COVID-19 test positivity rate has risen from less than 5% to 6.2%, and the number of people hospitalized with COVID-19 has risen.

Southwestern Virginia continues to be a region of concern, with more COVID-19 cases and fewer hospitals. Its COVID-19 positivity rate is 9%, Northam said.

He reminded listeners that Virginia has a mask mandate in effect in public places, indoors. Violators can be fined $500 - a civil, not criminal penalty, he noted.

The governor did not indicate he was planning what reporters called "new lockdowns," even though the overall COVID-19 positivity rate has increased.

Northam's focus remained on existing COVID-19 mitigation strategies, not additional restrictions.

He advocated for more testing and better communication "to be able to get the message out that this virus is still there. We can't get complacent. This is not the time to give up. ... We've got to continue the push until that vaccination is available."

Rep. Luria Hears About Internet Woes on Eastern Shore Community College Tour

Story and Photos by Connie Morrison

With re-election behind her, Rep. Elaine Luria toured the new administration building at Eastern Shore Community College Nov. 9, speaking with administrators, instructors, and students.

One thing she heard from all corners: internet on the Eastern Shore is a barrier.

"It's lumpy," said Vice President of Academics, Workforce, and Student Programs Patrick Thompkins. He acknowledged Luria's efforts to improve rural broadband. "I know it's a passion of yours."

When Luria asked students what they would like to see her working on in Washington, D.C., Graciela Diaz answered, "The internet. It's just terrible here." When the building was closed to the public, Diaz studied from her car where she could access the college's wireless internet. Since the building reopened, she has found a corner indoors where she can work.

"We have put a lot of money at the federal level into (internet) in rural areas," Luria told the students, adding, "It's the final mile that remains to be the challenge" and making the connection to nearby infrastructure affordable.

At press time, Luria was scheduled to join Spectrum and Gov. Ralph Northam, Sen. Lynwood Lewis, and Rep. Rob Bloxom in Onancock for an announcement about Spectrum's $20 million expansion of high-speed broadband to residential customers and business clients in areas of Accomack and Northampton counties. The network is expected to reach 17,500 homes and businesses. Phase I, serving 7,000 homes, is complete, with project completion expected in the first quarter of 2021.

Microfarm Brings Fresh Greens and Herbs to Senior Living Community

By Carol Vaughn

Commonwealth Senior Living on the Eastern Shore in Onancock has something new — a microfarm growing fresh greens and herbs for residents' meals.

The indoor, hydroponic farming system was installed in October and comes from Babylon Microfarms of Charlottesville, Va., the same city where Commonwealth Senior Living is headquartered.

Babylon was started by Alexander Olesen and Graham Smith, who met at the University of Virginia, where they first designed a low-cost microfarm to provide nutritious produce for food-insecure refugees in the Middle East, according to the company website.

They developed technology to remotely manage crops grown using the Babylon supplies the systems to senior living facilities, corporate cafeterias, the food service industry, hotels, resorts, universities, country clubs, hospitals, and more.

"I've been with Commonwealth a little over six years, and one of the things that I've really looked at in the organization is ensuring that the residents receive the freshest made-to-order items as they are enjoying their times with us," said Bob Raymond, vice president of dining services and procurement for Commonwealth Senior Living.

"One hundred percent, all of our cooking, is from scratch," he said.

The company, which has 34 facilities in four states, in 2015 started a farmto-table program, contracting with 47 Virginia farms to purchase 85% of the fresh produce used.

Commonwealth received a national award for that program.

Additionally, the company the next year instituted its "Today from the Bay" program, purchasing fresh seafood locally.

Numerous recalls of fresh produce around the country in recent years led to a desire to grow some produce on "One of the things I had been looking at for a number of years was hydroponics. ... How could we grow our own leafy greens, herbs, and microgreens in house at a cost effective rate." Raymond said.

Two years ago, he was introduced to Babylon Microfarms.

The system developed by Babylon makes growing produce indoors effective and is simple to operate, Raymond said. It is entirely organic.

"The unit itself is completely self-contained," he said.

After seeds planted in the system, Babylon has an app that tells the community's dining service director when to transplant seedlings and even when to harvest the crop.

Depending on the crop, it takes 30 to 45 days to get a harvest.

The unit includes LED lighting, so crops are growing around the clock. It also has a 75-gallon water reservoir and a pump.

"Once the cycle is going, we have a continuous supply of fresh, leafy greens, microgreens, and herbs," Raymond said, adding, "... We're harvesting it right in front of the residents;

they are eating it for lunch and dinner."

"Because they are the ones that want to consume it, we let them pick what they like," Raymond said, "... They are watching it grow. We've just had such success with this."

It also brings back good memories of gardening or farming for some residents.

Commonwealth so far has installed the farming systems in six of its Virginia communities, including in Onancock. The company was the first to bring the indoor farming system to the senior living industry, according to Raymond.

"Our plan is to continue with our remaining communities," Raymond said, adding the COVID-19 pandemic has slowed the pace of installation somewhat.

Because of the microfarm program, Commonwealth Senior Living won the 2020 Best of the Best National Award from Argentum, a national association for companies operating senior living communities.

Accomack Students Get Firsthand Civics Lesson as Election Day Pages

Accomack County Public Schools high school students participated this year as pages on Election Day.

Seventeen students volunteered as part of their required community service hours for graduation. The students were required to be in high school, under the age of 18, and to be Virginia residents and U.S. citizens.

The students signed a sworn oath and had training on their responsibilities as election pages.

Some of their responsibilities included helping elderly or disabled voters into and out of the polling place, greeting voters as they arrived and directing them to the check-in table, asking voters if they had identification with them, and assisting election officers with various tasks, such as helping set up the polling place.

Most importantly, students had the opportunity to observe the voting process, remain impartial while they served as election pages, and be a part of history. ACPS appreciates the opportunity and the collaboration with the Office of Voter Registration & Elections and the Electoral Board for giving students this experience. The following is a list of students who volunteered as pages and their respective high schools:

Safe Boating Tips from U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 12-02

Submitted Article

Every November we feature our popular topic of gifts for boaters.

For instance, one of the worst things about Eastern Shore boating is the corrosion that occurs on metals immersed in seawater. To combat this, every boat should have fresh zincs at least every other year. These are inexpensive and come in numerous sizes. Just be certain to get one that matches what is already on the boat.

Also, every boat needs an emergency kit. It should have at least three in date USCG approved flares or one of the new USCG approved SOS LED floating lights. They never expire and they replace the flares. The kit should also have some sort of orange flag that can be waved during the day. An extra USCG approved fire extinguisher is always a safe bet under the tree. If you only have one 5-pound extinguisher consider a second one or the next size up.

If the anchor chain is rusty or the line is frayed, replace it or get an extra anchor in case the first one is lost.

Here is a free gift: Simply call an auxiliary vessel examiner and have the examiner come inspect your boat. It's free and a great safety gift.

Every boat needs a damage control kit. Most people never consider these but what are you going to do if your boat springs a leak? You can purchase a complete kit, but putting one together is easy and makes lots of gifts. A damage control kit has a variety of items like a couple of wooden wedges, a (2x2) block of plywood, some soft wood plugs of various sizes, a rolled-up 4x4 sheet of neoprene or rubber, about a pound of brown oiled oakum, silicone sealing tape, a roll of heavy-duty duct tape, a variety of hose clamps and a nut driver for the clamps, a folding saw and a good waterproof box to hold it. Except for the oakum, you can get almost all of this at local hardware stores so make it a treasure hunt. Then if you join the auxiliary we'll show you how to use it all.

Finally, how about signing up the gift recipient for a safe boating class? Flotilla 12-02 still has gift certificates that allow the bearer to take any boating safety course we offer in 2021. That includes the online class the auxiliary will offer through the Eastern Shore Adult Lifelong Learning program in March 2021. The cost is $15 and certificates can be purchased from any flotilla member or Russell Vreeland at 757-442-7029.

Accomack County Circuit Court

Michael Lee Camper Jr., 32, of Oak Hall, was sentenced to 43 years in prison with all but 10 of those years suspended. In September, Camper pleaded guilty to the abduction, malicious wounding, and robbery of a young woman working at The Wine Rack in Onley. A plea agreement capped his active prison time at 10 years in exchange for his admission of guilt.

In October 2019, Camper was waiting when the woman closed the store for the night and walked to her car. He accosted her and forced her to get into her car with him. While inside her car, he struck her in the face with his gun and took her wallet and cellphone. Camper threatened to kill her if she called police, saying he knew where to find her. When he left, she got out of her car and ran across U.S. Route 13 into the Walmart parking lot where she sought help.

Judge W. Revell Lewis III said he had never seen a victim impact statement written as a letter addressed to her assailant. "Her life will be forever different because of what happened that night," he said. He said she wrote she had never been so frightened. "I am trying to get on with my life," she wrote. "I will not allow you to ruin my life."

Defense attorney Carl Bundick said Camper was remorseful for his actions. On the witness stand, Camper told the court he was under a lot of stress that day. "I wasn't able to support my family," he said. His father testified on his behalf describing him as "a good young fellow who made bad decisions."

Judge Lewis sentenced Camper to 10 years with eight years suspended for abduction, 10 years with eight years suspended for malicious wounding, 20 years with 17 suspended for robbery, and three years for use of a firearm. He will be on indefinite supervised probation and must be on good behavior for the rest of his life. Camper was tried and acquitted of the rape and strangulation of a girlfriend in 2018.

David Joseph Godbold, 35, of Temperanceville, was found not guilty of the March abduction, strangulation, and assault of a woman who had lived with him for three months.

During a bench trial, alleged victim Lisa Villareal testified she and Godbold left his house and walked to Saxis Road to watch illegal drag races that she said continued throughout the entire evening. She said she met a man she knew there who hugged her. It angered Godbold, she told the court, even though she admitted he said nothing to her about it. They went back to his house, stayed a few minutes, and walked back toward the race again where she said he wanted to return home again. She described his grabbing her around her throat and dragging her along until she lost consciousness. Villareal said she awoke to find Godbold performing CPR on her. She said she got up and ran but he knocked her down again. She testified she went to a neighbor's house and called her mother who came and took her to the hospital.

An emergency room doctor from Shore Memorial Riverside Hospital said he saw her that night and that there was swelling and tenderness around her neck.

Defense attorney Tucker Watson questioned the fact that Villareal testified there were approximately 50 people nearby when she was assaulted and no one intervened.

"The commonwealth's evidence is that she was assaulted, strangled, abducted, and dragged six minutes by the defendant," said Judge Lewis after hearing an hour and a half of testimony. "We didn't hear from the neighbor who took her to the hospital or any of the 50 people. I am not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt." He found Godbold not guilty of all charges.

Lorenzo Jenelle Stith, 37, of Cheriton, was sentenced to three years and 10 months on each of three counts of petty larceny, third or subsequent offense.

Stith testified he was involved in several programs while in jail that have turned his life around, including working on a GED. He said he has learned to think before he acts. "He is changed from the programs," said defense attorney Carl Bundick.

Commonwealth's Attorney Spencer Morgan recited Stith's lengthy criminal history. "It is frustrating to the commonwealth," he said. "He has repeatedly engaged in fraudulent behavior. He makes stupid decisions." He said Stith had pleaded guilty and been cooperative with authorities. Morgan recommended Stith receive a sentence at the low end of the guidelines. All but 10 months on each count was suspended. He will spend 30 months of active jail time and must pay $176.22 in restitution. He will be on indefinite supervised probation and must be on good behavior for 10 years.

Kevin Leigh Taylor, 49, of Parksley, pleaded guilty to threatening to kill or do bodily injury.

"He made threats to his brother Greg Taylor with text messages," said Commonwealth's Attorney Morgan. "He already didn't have a good relationship with his brother and then their father died," said defense attorney Tucker Watson. He said the problems only got worse after that. He said his client struggled with substance abuse and is now focused on improving himself. Taylor is set to be sentenced March 25, 2021.

Jushia Roshon Wise, 34, of Exmore, pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine, distribution of an imitation controlled substance, and driving on a suspended license, third or subsequent offense. In an agreement with the commonwealth, his active jail time will be limited to 45 days and a marijuana charge will be dropped.

Bail was denied for Aleakie Treonte Tazewell. 21. of Exmore. He is charged with possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, carrying a concealed weapon, and brandishing a firearm. "There is a video of the defendant at Royal Farms taking the firearm out of his pants and brandishing it," said Commonwealth's Attorney Morgan. He listed Tazewell's earlier convictions, including assault, obstruction, burglary, and more. Judge Lewis noted that possession of a firearm by a person convicted of a violent felony carries a mandatory minimum sentence. "The presumption (against bail) has not been rebutted," he said. "The court will deny bail."

ESCC Announces Fall Successes and Plans for Spring

By Dr. Jim Shaeffer, President

Do you remember it was March, nearly eight months ago, that Your Eastern Shore Community College pivoted to offering nearly all our classes remotely? It seems like ages ago. In August, we launched the first eight-week session of classes for the fall semester with more on-campus classes, expanded hours in student services, and access to the library.

Eight-Week Session Success

And our students, staff, and faculty accomplished something remarkable—students completed one, two, or three courses and earned college credits on Oct. 20. At most colleges, it takes students until near the end of December to earn any college credits, but ESCC is now the leader among Virginia's community colleges in offering all classes, except healthcare, in eight-week sessions.

Why did we do it? Because research shows that students are more successful when taking fewer classes at a time over fewer weeks. Because if a student does not succeed in a class in the first eight-week session, they do not have to wait until the next semester or even longer to retake the class and regain momentum.

And, because there are more opportunities for students to jump on the educational causeway when it aligns with their calendar and jump off if they need to return to work, care for children, or just take a break.

Safety Close to Home

At ESCC our YES! is celebrating what students, staff, and faculty have accomplished, while at the same time maintaining our guard with the COVID-19 crisis. We see what is happening at some colleges in the commonwealth where they have had multiple outbreaks of COVID-19.

I am so proud of our faculty, staff, and students because they continue to be vigilant in taking the appropriate steps of wearing masks, maintaining social distance, and sanitizing. I can tell you that the path to getting back to normal is to continue to be vigilant.

It would be easy to let our guard down—I join all of you who are simply tired and worn out because of this crisis. However, we are reminded every day that we need to continue our fight against this crisis. ESCC invites all residents on the Shore to join us in renewing our efforts' in doing the right things, not so much for ourselves, but for our families and friends.

Spring Registration is Now

We are now registering for the eightweek sessions that start in January. Students should not delay in signing up for classes because some of our classes will sell out early and because research shows that students who enroll earlier are more likely to pass classes and graduate from college.

ESCC is modifying some of our instructional practices based on comments from students and faculty about what is working. We will continue with fully online instruction, online instruction with Zoom meetings, and onsite instruction for hands-on classes like welding.

But we are making two enhancements. The first we call Optional Zoom Online. These classes will meet at scheduled days and times through Zoom, but for students who cannot attend one or all sessions, recordings will be available.

The second enhancement is offering more opportunities for on-campus classes. ESCC has not had a confirmed COVID-19 case traced to the college because everyone has been observing safety precautions. We believe we can now allow more on-campus sessions, such as chemistry labs. Of course, should the virus surge on the Shore, we are prepared to return to all remote instruction.

Stay Safe, Stay Local

We especially invite any students who went away to college but had to return home or anyone who delayed starting college because of uncertainty and safety concerns. As president of Your Eastern Shore Community College, I am committed to ensuring the 2020-21 academic year does not become a gap year for those who want to learn.

We have a scholarship or grant available for almost every student, we'll lend you a computer, and we're the mightiest small college in Virginia, leading the commonwealth in enrollment growth and innovations like our eightweek session strategy.

Your future is waiting for you, but you have to act. Contact the friendliest college staff you'll ever meet through email, phone, or by coming on campus.

ESCC support services are open Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and can be reached at studentservices@ escc.edu or 757-789-1720. YES! we'd love to hear from you.

Broadwater Girls, Boys Sweep Home Meets

Submitted Article

Broadwater Academy's girls and boys cross-country teams both scored big victories at home over the weekend, defeating Gateway Christian Academy, Hampton Christian Academy, and Atlantic Shores Christian School.

Before the start of the races, the team honored the leadership and accomplishments of its senior student-athletes, co-captains Mahika Patel and Michael Brickhouse.

In the varsity race, grade 8 Viking Meredith Hill crossed the line first, followed two seconds later by Mahika Patel. Emma Philpott, Lindsey Smith, and Marguerite Custis rounded out the Viking top five. The Vikings defeated its closest opponent, Gateway Christian, 10 to 26.

The Broadwater boys were led by junior co-captain Ture Gustafson, who won the meet, crossing the finish line in 21 minutes flat. Sophomore Carson Savage was close behind to place second for the Vikings and second overall. Logan Hickman, Braden Carlsen, and Kolby Evans all ran personal best times to propel Broadwater to victory. Alex Mendrinos, Caleb McIntyre, John Watson, and Michael Brickhouse also had exemplary races.

"We are seeing some outstanding improvement from our team at just the right time," said Broadwater head coach Eric Hack. "Nine of our athletes ran personal bests today, some by over two minutes. Ture, Carson, Meredith, and Mahika all had breakthrough days, finishing one-two in both races. We are well-positioned for a competitive Metro conference meet at Broad-

Give Mom and Dad the Lifestyle They Deserve

Shorter days and turning leaves bring memories of holidays past. Mom going all out with dinner. Dad bringing home the biggest tree. Kids running all over the house. These were festive (if not chaotic) times. But the kids are older now and our parents are too.

Given our current world, Mom and Dad have likely been isolated for months. While phone calls and distanced visits have been a good way to check in, are they really happy, and more importantly, are they safe at home? Is this how they should be spending their golden years - alone and afraid?

During the holidays we all deserve to be surrounded by family and friends: sharing stories, enjoying home-cooked meals, and having the peace of mind that comes with knowing you are loved. This is what Commonwealth Senior Living communities offer during the holidays and every day. Our families are relieved to know that their loved ones are safe, happy, and enjoying the lifestyle they deserve.

Easements Preserve Northampton's Arlington Historic Site, Custis Tombs

By Jim Ritch

Six years of work and 24 years of dreaming came to fruition on Sept. 18, when the Northampton County Circuit Court recorded preservation easements for the Custis tombs and Arlington Archaeological Site near Cape Charles.

"The easement will make sure the property will remain open space, publicly accessible, and available to future generations," said Joanna Wilson Green, easement program archaeologist for the Virginia Department of Historic Resources.

"It's a gorgeous, waterfront parcel that would be very attractive to anyone. It was an enormous kindness that (the Arlington Foundation Inc.) did for Virginia residents and preservationists," Green said.

The larger easement, valued at $395,000, covers 7.3 acres of open meadow, including the site of the former Arlington mansion.

The smaller easement, valued at $1,000, covers about one-tenth of an acre, including the walled area around several Custis family tombs.

Both easements were donations by the Arlington Foundation Inc., a local non-profit that manages the adjoining sites.

Rick Hubbard, foundation president and former town manager of Cape Charles, said that the easement will prevent subdivision of the property.

"This has been a long time coming," Hubbard said.

When the foundation was formed in 1996, the dream of an easement was seen by Mary Peacock and historian Jean Mihalyka, he said.

Together with Harry Holcomb and M. Lee Payne, then chairman of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel Commission, the founders each pledged $10,000 and raised the remainder to purchase Arlington and the Custis Tombs from Virginia Beach developer Patrick Hand. Hand charged $120,000, about half the appraised value, according to a 2015 article in the Virginia Beach Daily Press.

Work to apply for the preservation easement began about six years ago, Hubbard said.

The Arlington preservation easement includes 609 feet of waterfront on Old Plantation Creek.

Construction on the site would be tightly limited to a visitors center of up to 2,500 square feet, reconstructions of historic buildings, pervious roads, and temporary structures.

Only 1% of the property may be built on.

Archaeological digs are permitted, although they must be conducted by professionals and their plans must be approved by the state.

In its easement, the Arlington site is described as being historically significant because "for its association with William Burdett (1633-1643), John Custis II (1656-1696), and John Custis IV (1696-1721) each of whom held important local and colonial political positions."

It is also significant because of its relation to "Late Woodland and Accomac culture, interactions between native and English populations, Virginia Company settlements, plantation culture, the Arlington mansion and the Custis family occupation, and post-Custis enslaved populations."

Arlington Foundation

Even as the Arlington Foundation Inc. achieves one of the most of significant dreams of its founders, the organization struggles to survive.

With the recording of preservation easements on the Custis Tombs and Arlington Archaeological Site, the foundation reached a major milestone and made a lasting contribution to future generations of Eastern Shore residents.

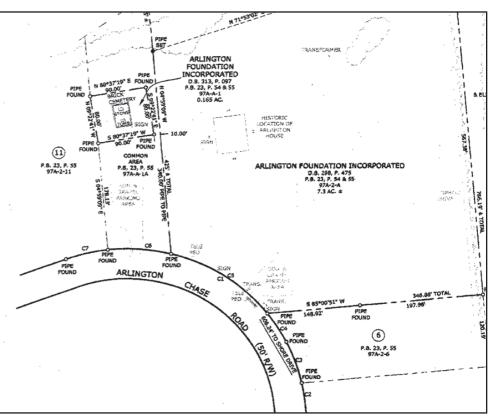

But without help, those generations will never know the foundation.

"We desperately need new members, new blood," said Rick Hubbard, foundation president and former town manager of Cape Charles.

The foundation plans final appeals to merge with two Eastern Shore groups before further exploring a merger with a national one.

Each of the local groups have indicated an interest in partnering in the past, but neither has shown recent interest, said Hubbard.

The Northampton Historic Preservation Society is busy raising $100,000 to preserve the 1907 jail located on the Northampton County Historic Courthouse Green.

A portion of the survey showing the new easements protecting Custis family tombs and the Arlington archaeological site near Cape Charles.

The Virginia Department of Historic Resources wrote the following historical summary of the Custis Tombs and Arlington Archaeological Site in its recently recorded easement on the properties:

John Custis emigrated to Virginia from the Netherlands about 1649, and soon grew wealthy through both trade (serving as the Virginia agent for merchants from the Netherlands and New England) and through agriculture.

He built the mansion known as Arlington, the archaeological remains of which are located immediately east of the Custis Tombs.

A long career in the militia ended with Custis serving as Major General in Governor William Berkeley's army during Bacon's Rebellion (1676), after which the deposed Governor took refuge at Arlington.

Custis served in the House of Burgesses until just prior to his death in 1696.

In 1696, John Custis IV inherited Arlington from his grandfather, who had previously paid for almost seven years' education in England under the tutelage of a powerful London tobacco merchant.

Custis IV parlayed his education into a profitable business planting and selling to-bacco grown on his many Virginia estates.

Custis IV also served in the House of Burgesses, and by 1717 had left Arlington for a home in Williamsburg where he represented the College of William and Mary.

In his will, written shortly before his death, he required his son (on pain of being cut off with no more than a shilling for inheritance) to place a magnificent marble tomb at his gravesite.

This son, Daniel Park Custis, became the first husband of Martha Custis, who would later become Martha Washington.

Custis IV's great-great-granddaughter, Mary Anne Randolph Custis, would become the wife of Confederate General Robert E. Lee.

The Cape Charles Historical Society recently published a newsletter article saying that the society had declined any agreement.

"The maintenance on (the Arlington sites) is more than we want to take on, and it's not in Cape Charles," said John Griffith, president of the Cape Charles Historical Society.

Unless one of the groups changes directions or new volunteers join the foundation, it will continue to explore combining with The Archaeological Conservancy. Officials of the conservancy visited earlier this year and are interested in taking over the site, Hubbard said.

Fishing from the Shore By Bill Hall

This is the time of the year when a lot of local outdoor enthusiasts are weighing the decision on whether to participate in the autumn deer hunting season or pursue the late season speckled trout and puppy drum fishery or the ever-improving striped bass fishery. Other available fishing options include the offshore and lower bay wreck fishery for tautog, black sea bass, and sheepshead. Swordfish are also available offshore, but there is little local recreational effort in pursuing the broadbills.

Lower Shore – Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle in Cape Charles, said that the speckled trout fishery off the lower Shore slowed some over the last week, with anglers reporting a scarcity of fish that lasted until the weekend with limits of fish, once again, becoming the trend. The best trout fishing seemed to occur on the bayside of the Shore, inside the lower Shore creek mouths. Several schools of puppy drum were encountered, though most were under the minimum slot limit. A few striped bass over the 20-inch minimum bayside size limit were a welcome bycatch during the trout fishery. For the second week in a row, the tackle shop weighed in multiple citation sheepshead catches, including Nathan Richardson (11 pounds, 4 ounces) and Winston Rayfield (14 pounds, 8 ounces).

Wachapreague – Captain Lindsay Paul reported little recent angling activity out of the seaside port, though flounder, speckled trout, puppy drum, and schoolie-sized striped bass are still available inside the inlet. Bluefish, tautog, and black sea bass are hanging over the offshore wrecks.

Amanda Manzella, at the Wachapreague Inn, reported that the majority of her guests were in town for deer hunting, though one group ventured offshore, encountering pods of whales on Saturday as well as schools of bluefish. Manzella said that Captain Meriwether Payne was leading clients in catch and release fishing for schoolie-sized stripers on the seaside.

Chincoteague – Pete Vasiliou, at Captain Steve's Bait and Tackle, reported that the shop had received reports of red drum off the beach on Assateague Island. Included in the drum catches were some puppy drum that fit inside the slot limit. Surf anglers are also seeing an increase in the number of schooliesized stripers, though they have been below the 28-inch minimum coastal size limit. In the back bay, Vasiliou said that speckled trout, small puppy drum, and flounder catches continue to be made. A group of anglers ventured offshore over the weekend to fish the wrecks and were rewarded with catches of nice-sized black sea bass. Robert "Nick" Nickell registered a citation 4-pound gray triggerfish. Swordfish are available offshore also, as evidenced by the crew of the Never Enough, who returned to port with an impressive 320-pound sword that was landed with an electric reel.

Upper Shore – Captain Alan Ring, at Sea Hawk Sports Center, reported that rockfish were starting to school up around the southern Maryland river mouths, while fish in the main stem of the Chesapeake Bay could be found feeding under flocks of diving birds. Buoys 72 and 72A were cited as recent rockfish-producing areas. Shallow-water rockfish were hitting jigheads with paddletails and curly-tailed grubs. Ring and his wife, Donna, fished over the weekend, recording a catch of 25 legal rockfish in the Maryland portion of the Chesapeake Bay, measuring up to 26 inches. Ring said that puppy drum have appeared to have departed the Tangier Sound area, though a few were still caught this week in Pocomoke Sound. He said that a few flounder were still being caught on the seaside by anglers using minnow and Gulp bait combinations. Wrecks are holding tautog and sea bass.

Bill Hall was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Salt Water Master Angler Status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year and is a Virginia Press Association award-winning sports columnist.

Osprey-Eyed Reader Contest: You Wanna Piece of Me?

Last Week's

Last Week's Contest: Find the Ballot Boxes

The ballot boxes were easy to find, as they should be in a democracy. More than 40 osprey-eyed readers found the five ballot boxes on pages 4, 22, 29, 40, and 42. From among all those readers, Cindi Bowen, of Wachapreague, was randomly selected to win the $25 gift certificate to C.D. Marsh Jewelers in Onancock.

This Week's Contest: More Cake!

When is more cake too much cake?

You're right: never. In five different locations in this week's edition, we have hidden a chocolate cake with a piece missing. Faithful osprey-eyed readers might recognize this cake from the Oct. 9 contest: same cake, same sponsor. Of all those who find the five cakes, one reader will be randomly chosen to receive his or her choice of a Smith Island cake from Becca's Smith Island Cakes. See sponsor box on this page.

The rules:

• Find the five cakes and tell us where you found them (page number and location on the page). Send this information to david@easternshorepost.com.

• You can start sending your entries now. Entries must have your first and last names and your town. Include a photograph if you choose to submit one and tell us a little something about the picture.

• Entries will be accepted until noon on Monday, Nov. 16. Entries arriving after noon on Monday the 16th will not be entered in the contest.

• Anyone submitting a photograph must have taken the picture or have permission to use it.

• Multiple entries, corrected entries, and entries with explanations will not

The winner and as many runners-up as possible will get their photographs in the paper. If you don't want to use your own picture, you can submit a photo of your child or a pet — or a boat. a hummingbird's ruby throat, or your new winter coat. Just no feet.

Random Facts About ... A Certain Subject, It Escapes Me

By David Martin

After a few weeks of serious subjects such as nuclear war, secret ballots, and healing in times of strife, it was inevitable the internet tubes would spew out facts on a cruder topic.

Flatulence. Although it can prompt laughter or embarrassment, flatulence is a natural and inevitable byproduct of life. Everyone farts. Your schoolteacher, your senator, Mother Teresa and Gandhi when they were alive, the most elegant movie star, and the grubbiest pro football lineman.

Gas inside us must get out. Some of the gas comes from air we swallow when eating or talking (exogenous gas), and other is produced by undigested food (endogenous gas), usually carbohydrates being worked upon by bacteria.

Each day, the average person manufactures about a liter of gas and farts between a dozen and two dozen times. Research shows that 99% of that released gas has no odor, which when it occurs is generally caused by the sulfur in foods such as beans (sometimes known as the musical fruit), Brussels sprouts, and broccoli. Habituation is what protects us from being offended by our own 1% bad-smelling flatulence. We are comfortable with familiar smells, which is why we can walk into our own house and not be bothered by or even notice odors that would make visitors hold their noses. If you retain flatulence until your grandmother or minister or date leaves the room, that fart doesn't go away. It either gets out in small releases that you might not even recognize as flatulence or it's stored for later emission.

Joseph Pujol was a professional farter, known as a flatulist under the stage name Le Petomane, which means the fartiste. Born in France in 1857, Pujol discovered his unusual talent as a child while swimming in the sea: he could draw water in through his anus. On dry land, and with the kind of rigorous training and inspiration that all artists undergo, he discovered that not only could he draw in air in the same manner as seawater but he could also control the release of that air.

Pujol took his act on stage and was so popular that he moved to Paris where he appeared at the Moulin Rouge. Royalty from around Europe attended his performances as did Sigmund Freud and other famous people. His act might begin with a dainty toot that he described as coming from a bride on her wedding night, then move to a 10-second fart that mimicked the sound of cloth being torn, and end with a blast of cannon fire. With the help of a rubber tube and an ocarina, he could play music, such as "O Sole Mio." He sometimes ended his performance by blowing out the gas footlights, one after another. When he took his act on the road, he would compose rhymes, such as one about a farm, and as he recited the verses, he produced the sounds of the various farm animals. People found his performances so funny that nurses had to be stationed to render aid to those overtaken by hysterical laughter. His performances at the Moulin Rouge earned twice the money that the superstar French actress Sarah Bernhardt brought in.

Pujol's act was clean in that he gave himself an enema before each performance and no one complained about odor. He has been the subject of several documentaries and books. Mel Brooks named a character in "Blazing Saddles" Lepetomane in honor of the great flatulist.

Other people have become known for their flatulence even if they never took their farts on stage. Apparently, Queen Victoria was a notorious farter in her later years, and in 1897 she sued an Australian journalist for calling her flatulent. The queen lost. Almost a hundred years later, Caryn Johnson, a young comedian in the U.S., routinely let out farts that her friends said sounded like a whoopee cushion. She changed her name to Whoopi Goldberg.

Army Paratrooper Veteran Chris Needels Reflects on Extraordinary Career

By Bill Sterling

Not everyone has a building named after him, much less while he is still upright to walk through the doors. But retired Army Col. Chris Needels, of Accomac, is such a person.

A 2014 inductee of the Skydiving Hall of Fame, Needels acquired the land for the headquarters of the U.S. Parachute Association outside of Fredericksburg, Va., through a donation and then designed the building while coordinating the construction process.

The association was so grateful for Needels' contributions it named the building the Christopher J. Needels National Skydiving Headquarters in 2016.

"I was flabbergasted when I learned they were going to name the building after me. It was quite an honor and nice I'm still alive to enjoy it," said Needels, who just turned 78 but looks years younger, maintaining the same weight of about 150 pounds he had during an almost 30-year Army career. That career was capped by three-and-a-half years serving in the White House as director of International Programs on the National Security Council Staff for former President George H.W. Bush.

Four years after Bush left the White House, it was Needels whom he asked to help him make his second parachute jump and first skydive. The first time Bush jumped out of a plane was when his torpedo bomber was shot down over the Pacific in World War II. Two of his crewmen did not survive, and Bush barely escaped, hitting his head on the ejection and being rescued from the approaching Japanese by a U.S. submarine.

Needels, who conceived, planned, and conducted Operation Second Look, said Bush's second jump was a long time in the making. "You can't have any mishaps when a former president of the United States is involved," he explained. "We trained for six weeks, planning on anything that could go wrong, from spinning out of control to being upside down. We had given him simple options such as being on a static line or jumping in tandem with a skilled instructor, but he wanted to do this on his own." Needels was among those who jumped with Bush, who was skydiving while staying with instructors assisting in free fall and then pulled his own parachute at 5,000 feet after exiting the aircraft at 13,000 feet. Needels and others were there to congratulate Bush when he landed on the ground.

He coordinated and participated in another jump with Bush several years later, but chose to pass the baton when asked to train the former president for later jumps that concluded by parachuting in tandem for Bush's 90th birthday.

Needels has fond memories of Bush, who passed away at the age of 94 in 2019. "He was a firm leader who could compromise and show great compassion.

"On a personal level, he was very friendly with probably 2,000 best friends whose names he never forgot. He was a great American hero."

During his tenure at the White House, Needels, who has made more than 3,000 jumps, gave Bush a daily briefing in the Situation Room, occasionally showing up still wearing the fatigues from an early-morning military jump made just prior to the meeting. Needels, who doesn't rule out skydiving again, describes the sensation. "The experience of free falling at 120 to 200 miles per hour is without peer. It is the realization of human flight. And for those who are afraid of heights? I won't clean my first-story gutters from a three-foot ladder."

Needels has jumped over three continents and witnessed some memorable scenery out the open jump door on the climb to 13,000 feet or higher, but he said there are also some awe-inspiring, panoramic views from 3,000 feet from under the canopy of the parachute. "Descending into Melfa 'International' while scanning the Eastern Shore from the Chesapeake Bay to the Barrier Islands is right up there with my favorite jumps," said Needels, who noted that the first recorded parachute jumps were allegedly by Chinese cliff jumpers circa A.D. 1200.

Army Life

Needels chose the Army rather than the Army choosing him, although at first it was a reluctant choice. "Graduating from high school I wanted to either be an architect or go into forestry because I loved the outdoors. I was singularly unsuccessful at being admitted for either of those avocations, so I volunteered for the Army nine days after graduating from high school. I spent a year as a buck private and attended a military prep school before being admitted to West Point."

The path to a life in the Army wasn't all that strange for Needels, however, since his father was a career Army officer who also retired as a colonel. In addition, a close family friend, the late Brig. Gen. Chester DeGavre, who had retired to the Eastern Shore and bought an historic home near Deep Creek, convinced the Needels family to move to the Eastern Shore since they shared an interest in old homes.

Needels recalls coming to the Eastern Shore in 1965 with his parents, the late Van and Cathryn "K" Needels, while he was in college and looking at homes, with the family deciding on the Walston Place outside of Accomac. Now the home of Needels and his wife Conny, the Walston Place has been on the Garden Tour four times and has been restored to an appearance much like its 1802 origins.

Gen. DeGavre became a mentor to the younger Needels, encouraging him to pursue parachuting in the Army. De-Gavre served in the 82nd Airborne Division in World War II and was a pioneer in military paratrooper techniques. Among his many deployments over a long military career, Needels was also a platoon leader in the 82nd Airborne Division.

Another post for Needels included commanding the U.S. Army Parachute Team, nicknamed the Golden Knights and based in Fort Bragg, N.C. The Golden Knights parachutist team demonstrates and competes worldwide for the United States.

While an instructor in the Ranger Command at Fort Benning, Ga., Needels met a veterinary student from nearby Auburn University who shared a love of skydiving. And it is she, now his wife, Conny, who can boast of a gold medal won in competition as a civilian parachutist against Russia, among other nations, in 1973 in Yugoslavia.

As a graduate of West Point with a degree in engineering, Needels volunteered for two tours of duty in Vietnam because "the war was heating up and that is what soldiers do." A member of the First Infantry Division, Needels recalled some of the action from the late 1960s. "During the battle of Bong Trang, I became company commander before the day was out because my company commander and another platoon leader were both killed, and I was the last lieutenant still standing when the fight was over."

Among Needels' lingering memories of Vietnam is the loss of fellow Virginians, particularly those who entered West Point with him, graduated in 1965, went to war, and died for their country. "I was very close to Jack Hutton, who was the son of prominent Virginia Circuit Court Judge Hutton, and Spotswood deWitt, a descendant of 17th century Virginia Governor Spotswood," said Needels.

During his second stint in Vietnam, Needels was infantry company commander and assistant chief of staff in the 101st Airborne Division. Needels said although he often thinks of those years in Vietnam because it was a part of his life, he doesn't dream about it or suffer nightmares from that time. Needels is reluctant to talk about any awards or meritorious service designations he received, but the fact is Needels received an array of awards, including two Silver Stars, given exclusively for combat valor, and a Purple Heart, given for a wound Needels said was not all that serious.

After the War

Following the Vietnam War, Needels was able to attend the Navy Postgraduate School in Monterey, Calif., and obtain a Master of Science degree in Operations Research before getting a second Master's in Military Arts and Science at the Army War College.

His postgraduate education completed, Needels said he enjoyed his three years as a brigade executive officer with the 3rd Infantry Division in Germany because he had an opportunity to work with the latest armor and mechanized equipment.

Needels salutes his wife for having to pick up, relocate, and find work with the many moves he made. A veterinarian, she worked in Germany as well.

From 1984 to 1986, Needels, "got to sort of disappear" as a battalion commander of the Special Forces Unit, followed by a stint at the Pentagon with the U.S. Special Operations Command.

It was 1988 when President Bush tabbed Needels as director of International Programs for the National Security Council staff.

In 1992, with his White House duty completed and after nearly 30 years of service, Needels thought it was time to retire from the Army. He then spent a year working for below minimum wage doing all sorts of jobs at a golf course near his home in northern Virginia. "I loved it, being at the golf course in the open air and getting to play free golf when I was not working. I was captain of the golf team at my Washington, D.C., high school and once played to an 8 handicap, but can't come near that now. But the pay didn't quite cut it where I was living."

Needels noted that his old high school, Western High School in Washington, D.C., now is home to the Duke Ellington Academy of Performing Arts, which he finds ironic since he can neither sing nor dance.

After a year at the golf course, he received an offer to become the executive director of the U.S. Parachute Association and felt it was a good fit, given his love of skydiving. He held that position for 13 years and now is executive director emeritus. He is also currently chairman of the International Skydiving Museum & Hall of Fame board of trustees and of the design committee planning the museum, which will be located in Orlando, Fla.

A Move to the Shore

In 2008, Needels and his wife moved to the Eastern Shore and have completed the painstaking restoration of the Walston Place with great attention to detail. His deep love of history led him to join the Eastern Shore Historical Society, which his father led in the early 1980s. He is now chairman of a Time Lines project that will tell Eastern Shore history from the meteorite that formed the Chesapeake Bay to the present. With local historian Dennis Custis, Susan Grove, and Barnaby Conrad on his committee, Needels said the five eras will include Pre-Columbian/Native American, Colonial, Revolutionary War and Political Prominence, Civil War and Reconstruction. The Golden Age, and the Modern Eastern Shore.

"We want it to be totally inclusive," said Needels. "It can't be Onancock-centric because the Historical Society is located there. We need to include everybody."

While his wife enjoys gardening and riding horses — she once kept four horses in a stable near their Accomac home but now has only one — Needels plays golf regularly and broke 80 earlier this summer but is not happy with the state of his game now. "I have a hard time breaking 90 at the moment," he lamented, "but if I can get back to where I was at the beginning of the year, who knows, maybe I can shoot my age one day."

A fourth generation native of California, Needels pays tribute to his hometown of Martinez, a suburb of San Francisco and regarded to be home to the first martini, by having one — preferably dry — most nights.

He has much to contemplate during his quiet time: scenes of horrific battles from the jungles of Vietnam but also the sensations of more than 3,000 jumps which included free falling through the skies and views of grand vistas below. Needels counts himself a lucky man, saying he needed his reserve parachute only twice. much better than the average, and is still fit enough at 78 to play golf and active enough to lead a project that will hopefully capture the complete history of the Eastern Shore, a land he has grown to love.

VETERANS' CORNER

Veterans' News: Farewell Edition

By Alexander Hightower

Veterans' News

VA reaches a milestone, completing nearly half of Blue Water Navy disability claims received since beginning of the year: The U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) announced it had decided more than 34,000 Blue Water Navy disability claims under the Blue Water Navy Vietnam Veterans Act of 2019, effective Jan. 1 — which extends the presumption of exposure to herbicides such as Agent Orange to veterans who served in the offshore waters of the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam War.

As of Sept. 30, VA has processed 34,415 (48%) of 69,570 claims received, of which 24,328 (71%) have been granted — awarding more than $664 million in retroactive benefits to eligible veterans and families.

VA Secretary Robert Wilkie said, "It's important we ensure Blue Water Navy Veterans and their families receive the benefits they've earned. As a result, VA will continue to get the word out via our social media channels, public service announcements, and Veterans Service Organizations (VSO) — to ensure every veteran who is eligible applies as soon as possible."

VA also collaborated with the National Archives and Records Administration to digitize all Navy and Coast Guard deck logs for ships with known Vietnam service. Digitization of the Navy deck logs was completed in December 2019, and Coast Guard deck logs were completed in September. As part of the agreement, VA provided digital images of the deck logs to NARA to make digitally available in the National Archives Catalog. Veterans may contact inquire@nara.gov if the deck log they seek is not available in the National Archives Catalog.

For assistance in filing a claim, veterans may contact the Virginia Department of Veteran Services or an approved Veteran Service Organization.

VA guarantees more than 1 million home loans in a record year: VA announced it achieved a record year in its home loan program by guaranteeing more than 1.2 million home loans in fiscal year 2020, totaling more than $363 billion, to help veterans afford homeownership.

This record loan volume equates to approximately 3,200 loans per day and represents the most home loans guaranteed in a single year in the history of the program.

Private lenders make VA-guaranteed loans. VA's guaranty virtually eliminates the need for a down payment, helping veterans afford homeownership.

Veterans must meet eligibility requirements and qualify for the loan amount based on their credit and income. VA encourages veterans to explore VA home loan options by approaching various lenders to compare loan costs and interest rates. VA advocates for veterans by limiting fees that lenders can charge and monitoring for unscrupulous lending practices. VA's advocacy, along with its minimum property requirements and flexible and sensible credit standards, helps protect veterans' and taxpayers' interests.

Additionally, VA has the authority to intervene if a veteran has trouble making mortgage payments. VA can work directly with the veteran and the mortgage company to seek a mutually beneficial resolution and avoid foreclosure whenever possible. Through such loan servicing efforts, VA assisted almost 120,000 borrowers to prevent foreclosure in fiscal year 2020. These actions saved taxpayers over $3.4 billion in avoided claim payments.

In response to the COVID-19 national emergency, VA continues to provide new ways to assist veterans. Borrowers who are experiencing financial hardship due to COVID-19 can contact their mortgage company directly or call 877-827-3702 to speak with a VA home loan specialist.

Eligible veterans can obtain a certificate of eligibility (COE) for VA home loan benefits through eBenefits or by contacting their preferred lender.

Gov. Northam announces Virginia Values Veterans Program surpasses goal of 65,000 hires: Even though many Virginians are seeking relief from job loss, there is a bright side for veterans. Gov. Northam announced more than 67,000 Virginia military veterans had been hired through the Virginia Values Veterans (V3) Program since its inception in 2012, surpassing the goal of 65,000 V3 hires by the end of his administration.

Virginia was the first state to create an official program dedicated to helping military veterans, transitioning service members, and their spouses find employment in the civilian workforce. The mission of the V3 Program is to educate and train employers throughout the commonwealth on the value of Virginia's veterans and to help employers connect with them to maximize the productivity of their workforce.

The Department of Veterans Services (DVS) administers the program, working with more than 1,300 private and public companies, federal, state, and local government agencies, and colleges and universities throughout the commonwealth to promote the recruitment, hiring, training, and retention of veterans.

"The V3 Program is another example of the unique and innovative ways that Virginia shows its commitment to serving veterans and their families," said Secretary of Veterans and Defense Affairs Carlos Hopkins. "Leadership at all levels of the Commonwealth are committed to ensuring that Virginia is the most military and veteran-friendly state in the nation, and 67,000 V3 hires is a major achievement for which all of us can take pride."

"Helping servicemembers transition to civilian employment is what V3 is all about," said DVS Commissioner John Maxwell. "Our primary mission is to serve Virginia veterans and their families and encourage them to remain in Virginia, and this program helps us do exactly that."

Veterans deals and freebies beyond Veterans Day: Veterans Day has come and gone, but honoring servicemembers and veterans should be an everyday event.

Grace for Veterans is an organization that assists veterans in getting free car washes twice a year. Over 1,600 wash operators across the U.S. give free washes to vets on Veterans Day. You can locate one near you through Grace for Veterans, which compiles participating businesses. Their mission is to honor those who have served or are currently serving their country with a FREE car wash each year on Nov. 11.

Great Clips offers veterans and active military a free haircut on Veterans Day or provides service members and veterans with an "IOU" card to use at a later date this year. They also offer nonmilitary customers a haircut and give a free haircut card to a military member they know.

National Park Service: Beginning on Veterans Day 2020, the Trump administration announced military veterans and Gold Star families will have free access to over 2,000 federal lands, including national parks and monuments, going forward. The entrance fee waiver does not cover amenity or user fees for activities such as camping, transportation, special recreation permits, or special tours.

ESCC Receives Gift Towards Technical Career Support

Eastern Shore Community College Foundation is the recipient of $10,000 in support from ASRC Federal, of Beltsville, Md. ASRC Federal provides a wide array of services to a broad base of federal government agencies, including NASA Wallops Island. ASRC Federal supports the local Wallops community by investing in workforce development programs.

ASRC Federal made the donation to ESCC in support of the school's science, engineering, and technology programs, presenting the check in person on Friday, Oct. 16, with a group representing both ASRC Federal and Wallops Flight Facility.

The donation from ASRC Federal will fund scholarships that will enable more residents of the Shore to earn credentials in technical fields that are important to Wallops and other employers in the region. The Virginia Community College System anticipates a coming surge of interest in short-term technical credentials due to workers displaced and industries realigned as a result of the pandemic. ESCC will deploy these scholarships for students who are not eligible for other forms of aid or where other forms of aid leave a gap in remaining tuition owed.

Bay of Pigs Article Was Excellent

Dear Editor:

I want to commend you all and Mr. David Martin especially for the article in the Oct. 16 paper about the Bay of Pigs. It was excellent and amazing to hear the "rest of the story," as Paul Harvey used to say.

We lived in Grand Isle, La., at that same time with an offshore drilling company (Exxon) and our compound for families was facing south when this incident occurred.

The Exxon engineers and employees were told to ready themselves and families to be put aboard a steel floating barge that had living quarters below the water level for 200 people. We wondered what would happen to the others — Cajun families, etc., that lived on Grand Isle.

That was a perilous time an many people's lives. We had three children under 6 years of age and we had nightmares about nuclear war.

God bless Mr. Martin and the Russian commander who saved us all by protecting his crew and bringing his submarine to the surface next to the Navy ships.

Post Office Mail

President Deserves To Be 'Rehired'

(This letter was received prior to the election, but not in time to run before Nov. 3. The author confirmed she still wanted it published.) Dear Editor:

This is regarding the Oct. 16 "Firing of Trump" letter.

By the authority vested in me by a lot of U.S. citizens, I hereby rehire President Trump and commit myself and a lot of others to pray, support, and serve with him to keep our America great in the next four years.

Also, a word of appreciation to Mr. Cullen and others who participated in the Trump rally on Oct. 10.

I like to see our Grand Old Flag being flown over our land. It reminds me I'm still blessed to be in the "land of the free and home of the brave."

Many Thanks to Hospital Auxiliary Members

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Board of Directors of Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital, I would like to recognize the Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital Auxiliary members for their tireless efforts to support our local hospital. Our community would not have a local hospital were it not for the initial efforts of the Auxiliary in the 1920s, and the Auxiliary's unflagging support and leadership has been an important factor in the hospital's sterling reputation over the years.

The Auxiliary recently decided to pay off an ambitious $100,000 pledge a year early. Originally planning for a four-year payment plan for leading-edge electrocardiography (EKG) equipment, the Auxilians, through tremendous dedication and hard work, are now able to complete this leadership-level gift in only three years. It is a tribute to their exemplary organization and their determination that the Eastern Shore continues to enjoy superb local health care.

The Board, the physicians, the team members and, most importantly, our community members are forever grateful.

Robert Crockett, Chairman RSMH Board of Directors

Election Reveals Narcissism, Hypocricy

Dear Editor:

My following remarks are not intended to impugn the motives and character of any individual voter. The level of turnout is to be commended, regardless of who those coming out to vote actually voted for.

What is troubling is the collective narcissism and hypocrisy that this election shows. In World War II, the American public put up with rationing and shortages with hardly a peep for the better part of four years. No armed thugs stormed a state legislature or plotted to kidnap a state governor.

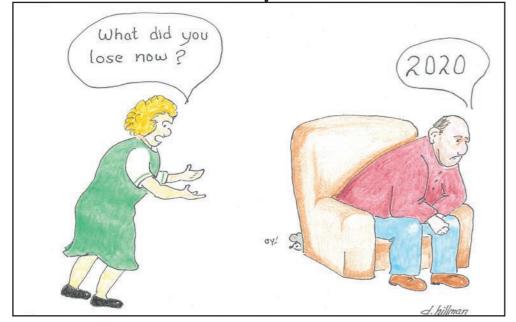

Now there are whole groups of people who refuse to wear masks out of some misguided sense of "freedom." Freedom to infect others? Guess what, your freedom stops at my lungs. And then there are the narcissistic egotistic members of the clergy who feel compelled to assemble large indoor crowds. Whatever happened to the theme of "being your brother's keeper?" Is this being driven by the collection plate? Certainly religious services can be streamed on the internet for a while.

The "pro-life" faction (at the leadership level) is nothing but hypocrites. Backing a president whose ego and mismanagement has knowingly contributed to the death of a quarter million (and still counting) Americans. How is that "pro-life?" Backing a president who locks children up in little wire cages, resembling a concentration camp, where some died from influenza. How is that "pro-life?" Backing a president who wants to strip access to health care from 20 million Americans during a pandemic by overturning the Affordable Care Act, not to mention the implication for millions of others with pre-existing conditions. How is that "pro-life?"

One final miniexample of hypocrisy that I cannot leave unnoted. I have seen in several places properties festooned with Trump signs next to placards showing the Ten Commandments. Trump has shredded at least five of the Ten Commandments. People are free to express themselves in public, but others must feel free to comment on those expressions.
