Abracadabra or Fata Morgana — What Made the Ship Hover?

On a recent trip across the bay, Shore native Ed Holland captured an image of a ship appearing to hover above the water. He attributes the oddity to a phenomenon called fata morgana, a mirage caused by alternating layers of hot and cold air. Photo by Ed Holland.

Virginians Age 16 and Up Eligible for COVID-19 Vaccine

By Stefanie Jackson

All Virginia adults who want the COVID-19 vaccine are now eligible to get it, Gov. Ralph Northam announced during a press briefing Monday at the Tysons Community Vaccination Center in Fairfax County.

"Please get vaccinated," Northam implored. "It will keep you safer, it will keep your family safer, and it will keep your community safer."

Virginians eligible to receive the COVID-19 vaccine include everyone age 16 and older, he clarified.

About 50% of all adults in Virginia – around 39% of the state's population – have received at least one dose of the COVID-19 vaccine, and nearly 25% of Virginia adults are fully vaccinated.

Northam predicted every adult who wants the vaccine should be able to receive at least the first dose by the end of May.

When 70% to 75% of Virginians have been vaccinated for COVID-19, herd immunity will be achieved.

Virginia's population is approximately 8.5 million, and about 2 million to 2.5 million are children.

Clinical trials are ongoing on using the COVID-19 vaccines for children ages 12 and up, and Northam expects to hear the results this summer.

If children can start getting vaccinated this fall and winter, by early 2022 "we'll be much closer to herd immunity," Northam said.

"Vaccinations are the only way we end this pandemic and get back to normal," the governor said. "The risks of getting seriously ill ... are just too high."

Stopping the spread of COVID-19 also stops the chance of the coronavirus to mutate, he said.

The new mass vaccination clinic in Fairfax County will be able to administer 3,000 vaccines per day.

Virginia had 978 new cases of COVID-19 as of April 18, and the COVID-19 test positivity rate was 6.1%.

Virginia's COVID-19 metrics have reached a plateau, and some restrictions will be eased in the coming

Chincoteague Discusses Possible Measures Ahead of July 1 Marijuana Legalization

By Carol Vaughn

Chincoteague town council members at the April 15 meeting discussed implications for the town of the legalization of marijuana possession in Virginia, which takes effect July 1.

Other parts of the legislation, including retail sales, do not take effect until 2024.

The legislation makes possession of up to an ounce of marijuana legal for people 21 and older starting July 1. Adults caught with more than an ounce but less than a pound face a $25 fine.

Vice Mayor Chris Bott said he received information from the Virginia Municipal League about recent General Assembly actions, including marijuana legalization.

"July 1, it's on in the state of Virginia," Bott said, adding, "It's a different world in these localities where this is on. I've been in direct experience with this. It's different. It's weird."

Bott said Virginia gave localities options to opt out of "the state-regulated mandates."

"I think we need to kind of aggressively look at this," he said, recommending the ordinance committee review the matter.

Localities may opt out of allowing retail sales, which, Bott said, "We need to do."

Additionally, Bott said localities may prohibit possession or consumption of marijuana on school grounds and in public areas.

"I think we need to take a hard and aggressive look at this, due to the fact that we are a family-oriented destination as well as a community," Bott said.

Council member Denise Bowden noted open containers of alcohol are not allowed on the streets or in the parks on Chincoteague.

"I'm definitely with you," she said.

Council member Gene Wayne Taylor said, "Whatever the harshest restrictions we can put on it by law, that's where it needs to be."

"The reason why people come to Chincoteague as families is they are getting out of the atmosphere from where they're coming, which has all of this," said council member Jay Savage.

Under the state legislation, consuming marijuana in public or offering it to people in public, as a gift or otherwise, remains illegal. First offenses are punishable by a $25 fine, a second offense adds mandatory drug treatment, and a third offense would constitute a Class 4 misdemeanor. Additionally, possession on school grounds while school is open is a Class 2 misdemeanor under state law.

COVID-19 and Emergency Operations Plan Updates

Chincoteague Emergency Management Coordinator Bryan Rush, in an update on the COVID-19 state of emergency, said as of Thursday, April 15, Chincoteague had three additional cases of COVID-19 reported since his previous report to council Monday, April 12.

A total of 1,900 people on Chincoteague have been tested for COVID-19.

Accomack County had 15 additional cases, one hospitalization, and no additional deaths since Monday; Northampton had four new cases, no new hospitalizations, and no deaths reported for the same period.

Rush presented an update to the town's emergency operations plan, after a committee and department heads met several times over the past few months to review the plan, which the state requires to be updated and re-adopted by the Town Council every four years.

The council likely will consider approving the plan at its June 7 meeting.

One major change is the addition of an appendix related specifically to pandemics.

The council voted to accept a deed of gift for a corner lot on Smith Street, where improvements related to the construction of Brianna's Kindness Park on adjacent property are in the works.

A public hearing on the town's fiscal year 2022 budget will be held May 3.

Two Suspicious Fires Each Claim a Life Over Weekend

Staff Report

A woman was arrested and charged with arson and second-degree murder after a man was found dead at a house fire Thursday, April 15, on Bishop Drive in New Church.

Delbert Dickerson, 59, who lived at the home, was identified as the victim by Bureau of Criminal Investigation agents, according to Virginia State Police spokesperson Sgt. Michelle Anaya.

The Accomack County Sheriff's Office and Virginia State Police responded to the structure fire in the 31000 block of Bishop Road Thursday around 8 p.m.

Kimiko Tenallie Dickerson, 40, also a resident of the home, was arrested and taken to the Accomack County jail, where she remained incarcerated with no bond Friday.

In a separate case, the State Police Communications Center received a call of a vehicle fire with a confirmed fatality on TB Road in Exmore around 1:23 a.m. April 18.

The 911 caller, a resident on TB Road, stated that he or she had observed a fire outside on the roadway.

"The Exmore fire department arrived and extinguished the fire and found one deceased male inside the vehicle," said Anaya in a press release.

"The BMW 7 series sedan showed no indication that the vehicle had been involved in a motor vehicle crash. The body was burned beyond recognition and the registration indicated that the vehicle was sold the day before."

The Virginia State Police is asking for any witnesses driving in the area of Exmore, on or near TB Road, prior to or after the incident who may have possible information.

Anyone with information about this vehicle or who may have witnessed suspicious behavior is encouraged to contact the Virginia State Police at 757-424-6800 or email questions@vsp.viriginia.gov.

weeks. Northam said.

He agreed with feedback from Virginia students and parents who stated public performances of music or drama should be treated the same as athletic programs.

Northam said the number of people allowed at public gatherings will be increased to 100 indoors and 500 outdoors, or 30% of a venue's capacity.

Sen. Mark Warner also encouraged all eligible persons to get the COVID-19 vaccine and said, "This is not a question of politics. ... It's about whether you care about yourself, your family, your neighbors, your community."

He noted that 57 weeks have passed since the first COVID-19-related shutdown, and the federal government has invested $5 trillion in COVID-19 relief to date.

Virginia received $4 billion from the most recent COVID-19 relief bill, plus $3 billion for local governments across the commonwealth, Warner said.

Chairman Jeff McKay, of the Fairfax

County Board of Supervisors, encouraged everyone to get the COVID-19 vaccine as an "act of charity ... protecting everyone around us."

Dr. Danny Avula, Virginia's state vaccination coordinator, said the Virginia Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices will meet Friday, April 23, to decide whether or not the state will resume use of the Johnson & Johnson COVID-19 vaccine.

Virginia has received an additional 15,000 doses of the Pfizer and Moderna vaccines in lieu of the Johnson & Johnson vaccine this week, for a total of 220,000 first doses received, he said.

The state will continue to receive 450,000 to 500,000 total doses of the COVID-19 vaccines weekly, Avula said.

His team will work to promote the vaccine in parts of the state where demand has dropped, and "to increase access and to help people understand why they should still be vaccinated ... and help us progress economically and socially moving forward."

How to talk to Mom and Dad about Senior Living

Mom may have had a hard time recalling names when you spoke with her over the phone the last few times, but you weren't prepared for what you found during a recent visit. While you were happy to finally be able to see her again, you were concerned. It was clear the carpets needed vacuuming and the bathrooms had not been scrubbed in some time. Most worrisome, however, was Mom's appearance. She looked like she'd lost a lot of weight.

For many families, sheltering in place due to COVID opened their eyes to the side effects of isolation. You may wonder what is happening when you aren't there. Is Mom safe? Is she happy? Now is the time to make a plan and find a senior living community that you would both feel comfortable with, rather than being forced to make a choice in an emergency.

Here are some tips for discussing your concerns with your loved one:

- Remind Mom or Dad that you love them and are worried about their wellbeing.
- Ask what he/she would need to happen for them to decide it was time to move.
- Discuss his/her concerns about senior living and what he/she would like to see in a community.

While this can be a very difficult time, there is a myriad of support available to you. Commonwealth Senior Living has been guiding families on this journey for almost 20 years. Our caregiver support groups can connect you with families who are experiencing the same challenges and will provide useful tips for ensuring that your

'Bay Barometer' Gives Mixed Results for Bay Protection and Restoration

By Carol Vaughn

A report from the Chesapeake Bay Program shows mixed results on the Bay's recovery.

The report, "Bay Barometer: Health and Restoration in the Chesapeake Bay Watershed 2019-2020," gives information about progress on 10 goals and 31 outcomes designed to advance the bay's restoration and included in the Chesapeake Bay Watershed Agreement.

The 2014 agreement, amended in 2020, commits partners to protect and restore the bay and its tributaries and sets a 2025 deadline for certain achievements.

"It seems pretty clear we are taking some steps forward when you look at water quality on a macro-scale...and that's a really good thing. ... I think it's the product of our investments over the past several decades. We're still a far way off from a fully restored bay, of course," said Joseph Wood, senior scientist with the Chesapeake Bay Foundation.

The CBF in its State of the Bay report issued earlier this year put the bay's state at a D+, slightly down from last year. Still, the decline was mainly due to ineffective management of striped bass, rather than water quality concerns, according to a press release.

The Chesapeake Bay Program — a regional partnership of federal, state, and local governments; academic institutions; communities; businesses; individuals; and nongovernmental organizations — is primarily funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The partnership includes 19 federal agencies; nearly 40 state agencies and programs; around 1,800 local governments; more than 20 academic institutions; and more than 60 nongovernmental organizations.

The program leads and directs bay restoration, guided by the goals and outcomes detailed in the watershed agreement.

The watershed, including more than 180,000 miles of tributaries, spans six states and the District of Columbia.

Gov. Ralph Northam chairs the Chesapeake Executive Council, which includes the six states' governors, the Washington, D.C., mayor, the Chesapeake Bay Commission chairman, and the EPA administrator.

The council establishes policy for the bay restoration program.

"Gov. Northam has made restoring the Chesapeake Bay a cornerstone of his administration and his actions will bring continued improvements in water quality, fish and wildlife, and local communities. As chair of the Chesapeake Executive Council, the governor has prioritized advancing the partnership's work on diversity, equity, inclusion, and justice and the escalating threats to a healthy Bay from climate change. While the Bay Barometer demonstrates we are making progress, strong leadership will be key to achieving the region's goals by 2025," said Matthew Strickler, secretary of the Virginia Department of Natural Resources and chairman of the Chesapeake Bay Program Principals' Staff Committee, in a press release.

The report includes data from government agencies, academic institutions, nongovernmental organizations, and demographic and behavior surveys, according to the release.

The Positives

Areas showing improvement from the previous report include:

- Blue crab management around 17% of female crabs were harvested in 2019, marking 12 consecutive years in which the percent is below the 25.5% target and meaning the bay's crab stock is not being overfished.
- Diversity the most recent survey showed a slight increase, from 13.7% to 14.6%, in Chesapeake Bay Program partners who identified as people of color and an increase in leadership positions held by people of color, from 9.1% to 10.3%. In summer 2020, the Chesapeake Executive Council and the Principals' Staff Committee adopted statements committing the program to embracing diversity and equity.

- Environmental literacy In 2019. 27% of local education agencies responding to a survey said they were well prepared to deliver high-quality environmental literacy programming to students; 52% said they were somewhat prepared, representing an increase since the initial survey in 2015.
- Oysters On 10 tributaries, large-scale oyster restoration is in progress. As of 2019, Marvland had completed 788 acres of oyster reefs and Virginia had completed 539 acres.
- Protected lands Nearly 1.36 million acres in the watershed have been permanently protected since 2010, marking 68% of the goal and bringing the total to 9.16 million acres.
- Public access —194 public access sites were opened around the bay in the past decade, marking a 65% achievement toward the goal to add 300 by 2025.
- Students In 2019, 32% of 132 local education agencies surveyed reported providing Meaningful Watershed Educational Experiences (MWEEs) to at least some elementary school students. In middle school, the number rose to 38%, and at the high school level, to 43%.

The Negatives

Areas showing decline from the last report include:

2025 Watershed Implementation Plans — as of 2019, conservation practices to reduce pollution are in place to achieve 39% of nitrogen reductions, 49%

- of phosphorus reductions and 100% of sediment reductions needed to attain water quality standards when compared to the 2009 baseline established in the Chesapeake Bay Total Maximum Daily Load.
- Blue crab numbers— Between 2019 and 2020, the number of adult female blue crabs in the Chesapeake Bay decreased 26%, from 191 million to 141 million. The number is above the 70 million threshold considered the minimum sustainable level, but lower than the 215 million target.
- Forest buffers 83 miles of buffers were planted in 2018 and 2019, falling short of the annual target by 817 miles; 9,190 miles of buffers have been planted since 2010.
- Underwater grasses In 2019, 66,684 acres of underwater grasses were mapped in the bay, a 38% decrease from 2018, when it was estimated the bay may have had up to 108,078 acres of underwater grasses. The 2025 target is 130,000 acres.
- Water quality standards monitoring and attainment - 38% percent of the bay and its tidal tributaries met water quality standards during 2016-2018 a 4% decrease from the previous assessment period of 2015-2017.

What It Means

Wood said one statistic that stands out to him is the percentage of water quality standards achieved towards the goal.

"It's on the order of 35%, which strikes me just as a really low number. Something that stands out to me always is how much more improvement there could be," he said.

Past investments in improving the bay "seem commonsense now. ... We are really reaping the benefits from those," Woods said, adding, "I think that will be true in the future as well."

The Virginia General Assembly this year made substantial appropriations for clean water initiatives, he noted, saying that kind of funding needs to continue for progress to be made, particularly in the area of agriculture and stormwater improvements.

Woods said planting riparian buffers is one action people can take to help improve the bay's health.

"Those really are so critical," he said, adding, "... The funding is always going to be limited, but the money that we do have, getting that money into forested buffers and getting those implemented is one of the best things we can do from a water quality perspective for the bay. It's also one of the best things you can do from a carbon perspective; it's one of the best things you can do from a wildlife perspective."

"The challenges ahead are substantial," Woods said, noting climate change, resulting in increasing precipitation among other changes, "is really going to make things very difficult" when it comes to improving the bay's water quality.

The main takeaway from the report is "we're inching along, but our progress is really dependent upon our commitment, both financially and on a policy basis," Woods said, adding, "It's no short feat that we are making progress. There are places around the world where estuaries are going backwards, things are getting worse...and here, we're not necessarily in that situation, so I think there's a lot to be optimistic about in the lens of bay restoration. I really do think its a model for solving big, complicated problems with lots of stakeholders."

Corner Bakery Faces Off Against Town of Onancock in Meals Tax Tiff

By Carol Vaughn

An Onancock bakery is challenging the town's assertion that the business is required to collect meals tax on items it sells in bulk.

Pete Smith, of the Corner Bakery, in a Facebook post Wednesday detailed the bakery's stance, saying the business's policy has been to collect the meals tax on sales of items "clearly intended to be eaten in one serving," such as individual donuts, slices of cake and pie, and the like.

"We do not collect a MEAL TAX on items that are sold in bulk and clearly not meant to be consumed in one sitting," the post went on to say.

That would include whole cakes, packaged biscuits and rolls, pastries boxed by the dozen or more, and similar items.

Smith said most of the bakery's sales do not come from customers coming in to eat donuts and a cup of coffee as a meal.

"We are a retail bakery, not a restaurant," the post said.

Smith said the town ordered the business to immediately begin collecting the meals tax on all sales of items that are not factory prepackaged.

"We live in a low-income county. The meals tax the town wants us to impose on a customer who comes in and purchases pastries in bulk...would add a large sum to their total order. This is not fair to the customers and could have an impact on the number of our sales," the post said.

The business received a letter from the town manager about the matter, according to the post.

Smith went on to say, "I have no intention of complying with their order."

Smith in the post asked people who agree to contact the mayor and town council members to voice support "in the fight against an unjust tax," calling the matter "a fundamental issue of fairness."

By Thursday morning, the Facebook post had been shared 500 times and garnered more than 90 comments expressing support for the bakery's stance.

Smith said Thursday he has spoken with council members about the matter and he plans to speak at the upcoming town council meeting.

The council is holding its regular monthly meeting virtually Monday, April 26, at 7 p.m.

The meeting agenda, which was prepared prior to the bakery's statement, as of press time did not include discussion of the meals tax. However, there is a public comment period.

The meeting is virtual, meaning there is no in-person attendance.

To attend the meeting via Zoom, go to: $\begin{array}{l} https://us02web.zoom.us/\\ j/85217006394?pwd=NEk2cEpac-\\ GRjUXZVV0F5ZkEvTGNwZz09\\ Meeting ID: 852\ 1700\ 6394 \end{array}$ or join by telephone at 301-715-8592, meeting ID 852 1700 6394, passcode 513490, or follow the link from the town website at https://www.onancock.com/tc/page/town-council-meeting-55

Passcode: 513490

The town code, which can be viewed from a link on the town website and at https://library.municode.com/va/ onancock/codes/code_of_ordinances, defines a meal as "any prepared food and drink, including alcoholic beverages, offered or held out for sale by a restaurant or caterer for the purpose of being consumed by an individual or group of individuals at one time to satisfy the appetite. All such food and drink shall be included, whether intended to be consumed on the seller's premises or elsewhere, whether designated as breakfast, lunch, dinner, supper or by some other name, and without regard to the manner, time or place of service."

A 5% tax is to be paid by the purchaser of every meal served, sold, or delivered in town by a restaurant or caterer.

Exemptions listed in the ordinance include food sold through vending machines, factory pre-packaged items, and food sold in bulk.

The term bulk sale "means the sale of any item that would exceed the normal, customary and usual portion sold for on-premises consumption (e.g., whole cake, a gallon ice cream)," according to the ordinance.

Accomack Schools Budget Includes 5% Raise for Teachers, Staff

By Stefanie Jackson

The Accomack County Public Schools fiscal year 2022 operating budget of nearly $59.8 million was unanimously approved by the school board Tuesday night.

The approved budget included about $956,000 in additional spending made possible by Accomack schools receiving more funding from Virginia's state budget than originally anticipated.

The budget originally proposed $1.7 million for a 4.5% raise for all full-time Accomack teachers and staff, but $190,000 was added to increase the raise to 5%.

Accomack elementary schools will get nine more instructional assistants at a cost of $200,000. An additional guidance counselor was budgeted for $63,000, whose time likely will be split between Kegotank and Metompkin elementary schools.

Arcadia and Nandua middle schools each will get an assistant principal for a budgeted total of $178,000.

Accomack schools also set aside $95,000 to hire someone to coordinate programs for talented and gifted students, English learners, and migrant children.

Rounding out the additional expenditures were about $196,000 for school facility improvements and $33,500 to cover the shortfall within the budget as it was originally proposed.

School Calendar

The Accomack school board approved the calendar for the 2021-2022 school year. Superintendent Chris Holland said he had received positive feedback on the current school calendar, and next year's calendar will be similar and use the same easy-to-read format.

The 2021-2022 school calendar includes 1.086 instructional hours, about 10% more than required by state law.

Virginia code states a standard school year consists of at least 180 instructional days or 990 instructional hours, with at least 5.5 instructional hours in the average school day.

Accomack schools include six hours and 10 minutes of instruction in each school day.

The new school calendar will include 10 inclement weather days again, plus additional hours for twohour delays and other weather-related school scheduling issues - about 15 total school days that can be missed for inclement weather.

School board member Janet Turner pointed out that the last two winters have been mild and Accomack schools did not need 15 inclement weather days.

Each marking period is actually less than nine weeks, and if Accomack schools reduced the number of inclement weather days, the extra days could be used to extend each marking period, giving teachers more time for instruction or grading, Turner said.

She made a motion to cut the total number of inclement weather days built into the school year from 15 to seven; school board member Edward Taylor seconded the motion.

The motion failed, with only Turner and Taylor voting in favor. A motion to accept the school calendar as presented passed with six school board members in favor and Turner and Taylor opposed.

Accomack schools will continue the practice of lengthening school breaks with unused inclement weather days.

Dental Clinics

The school board also approved Eastern Shore Rural Health (ESRH) applying for a $400,000 grant to equip a new dental clinic proposed at Nandua Middle School.

ESRH already operates two dental units that serve Accomack students, one each at Metompkin and Pungoteague elementary schools, and one mobile unit.

The new dental clinic at Nandua Middle School would be built at no cost to Accomack County.

Dr. Tiffany Nightengale and Dr. Stephanie Shelley, the dentists primarily serving Metompkin Elementary and Pungoteague Elementary, respectively, spoke of the importance of adding a dental clinic to serve Accomack's middle and high school students.

The new clinic would be staffed by one dentist and three support staff members.

If ESRH's application is approved, the grant will be awarded in September and the project must be completed within 120 days. Holland agreed to help find a location for the clinic in the meantime.

The school dental clinics have operated since 1992 and have served more than 5,000 children during more than 33,000 visits.

VIMS Study Shows No Significant Water Quality Changes From Poultry Operations

By Carol Vaughn

A study showed no significant difference in water quality between freshwater waterways where there are poultry operations and waterways with no poultry operations in Accomack County.

Richard Snyder, of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, presented the findings to the Accomack County Board of Supervisors Wednesday.

The study was initiated several years ago when concerns were raised about potential effects on water quality of an expansion of poultry growing operations in the county.

The mass balance study looked at dissolved and total nutrients, including ammonia, nitrate, and phosphate in waterways, and at poultry litter.

"Poultry litter in general has about 3% nitrogen in it and 1.5% phosphorus, and although there is half as much phosphorus as nitrogen in poultry litter, it is the phosphorus that's really the problem for the land application of the litter, because the plants need more nitrogen than they need phosphorus; the phosphorus is in excess," Snyder said.

Ammonia is produced when poultry litter becomes damp. Snyder said most modern operations "are putting serious controls on the water that's in the system and limiting the amount of ammonia that's being converted into gaseous forms."

For the study, 86 streams were sampled on the bayside and the seaside.

Samples were taken following a drought and after two rainfall events. The samples were processed by VIMS' analytical service facility in Gloucester.

Locations of active poultry operations were obtained from Department of Environmental Quality inspection records.

Poultry farmers with modern facilities "are really doing a pretty good job of controlling runoff from these operations and that's showing up in the data," Snyder said.

The data is available upon request and was made available to the Natural Resources Conservation Service and the Eastern Shore Soil and Water Conservation District, Snyder said.

Snyder also presented findings from a study of a waterway near the closed southern landfill in Bobtown.

Samples taken in 2018 from the stream crossing Bobtown Road near the intersection of Hollies Church Road, near the landfill, showed very high levels of nitrogen.

The board of supervisors requested more water sampling in the area to monitor nitrogen levels.

The report Snyder presented Wednesday gave a summary of three years of sampling, which included samples from sites near the landfill and downstream to a place where the stream reaches tidal waters of a branch of Pungoteague Creek. Additional samples were taken of ponds at the landfill.

The majority of nitrogen in the system, 86%, is ammonia, which "is coming from decomposition activities within the landfill," according to Snyder.

The study showed nitrogen and phosphorous levels in the water decreased with distance downstream from the landfill and the situation "does not appear to represent undue harm" to Pungoteague Creek.

"We're seeing the material either dilute out or being absorbed by the time it gets down to tidal water — and that trend is true whether it's winter or summer over two years, and I don't suspect that will change. If anything, it should reduce as the landfill ages and decomposition processes continue in that system," Snyder said.

Tangier Island Gets Broadband

By Carol Vaughn

Tangier is getting broadband internet service.

The Eastern Shore of Virginia Broadband Authority last week had a crew on Tangier installing fiber to provide broadband service to the island town, population around 700.

Just under 2 1/2 miles of fiber was being installed throughout town in the week-long effort — that is sufficient to serve all 300 or so homes as well as businesses.

Tangier is the 19th town where the authority has offered fiber-to-thehome service, according to ESVBA Executive Director Robert Bridgham.

"Out of all the incorporated towns on the Eastern Shore, it's the only town we didn't have a presence in until now," he said.

Still, this particular operation, taking place on an island in the middle of the Chesapeake Bay, was different from the others.

"Operating in a remote place like an island certainly brings a lot of challenges that are not part of our normal efforts," Bridgham said.

"It was a huge logistical challenge... but my staff has worked very hard to make sure that this happens," he said.

Equipment was transported by barge from Crisfield, Md., and crew members had to be prepared to stay on the island during the project. A small-craft advisory could affect whether someone could get there or go back to the mainland.

Additionally, advance planning was paramount when it came to supplies.

"Most of the equipment that we work with, the materials that we work with, are not something that you can commonly get at a local store, so it's very challenging to make sure that you don't forget anything. Here, if we forgot a piece of equipment, we could run back to the office and pick it up. Obviously, it's not quite as easy to run across the bay," Bridgham said.

Questions of how to refuel gasoline or diesel vehicles or equipment on an island where there are no gas stations also had to be resolved.

"How do you fuel up? How do you operate on streets where you can barely drive a golf cart in some cases? There are a lot of tight places," he said.

The service to the island should be up and running by May.

In addition to the fiber-laying operation, the feed from the island back to the mainland, "several microwave lengths," needs to be completed, which involves installing microwave dishes on the island and then aligning dishes on the mainland correctly with them to complete the feed.

"We've been targeting Tangier since the start of this buildup 2 ½ years ago," Bridgham said.

The authority sent mailers to residents last week to let them know the service is available.

"We've started establishing plans so that...we are routinely going out to the island and hooking up customers on an ongoing basis," Bridgham, predicting, "I think for at least the next few months ... we'll be out on the island an awful lot."

"Everybody on the island, from the local power company folks to even the local restaurants...everyone has been very excited and bubbling with anticipation," he said.

The town itself has been "extremely helpful" by providing a place to put equipment and giving access to the water tower needed for the feed back to the mainland, he said.

Residents even offered use of their vehicles if the crew needed them while on the island.

"It's that level of cooperation and support that is pretty amazing, and we appreciate that," Bridgham said.

Tangier residents can inquire about service via email, ojustice@esvba.com, or go through the website, https://esvba.com/residential/ and submit for a quote. People also can call the sales line at 757-709-7080.

Onancock Has $350K in Grant Money To Give to Town Businesses

By Carol Vaughn

Onancock wants to give away $350,000 to the town's small businesses.

The town has 122 businesses, according to Jenny Gehman, Onancock Main Street program manager.

Onancock Main Street, a volunteer-driven, nonprofit organization that works to develop and sustain the historic downtown, is partnering with the town to administer $450,000 of small business recovery assistance grant funds.

So far, $100,000 has been distributed. "We have $350,000 remaining and would love to encourage all qualifying Onancock businesses to ... apply; this includes home businesses," Gehman said.

The deadline to apply is Nov. 1.

Town Manager Matt Spuck encouraged businesses to apply "and let them know we make it easy for anyone who rents or pays a mortgage to receive" funds.

Extra expenses incurred to operate during the COVID-19 pandemic also may qualify for funding.

Each business can receive up to $15,000. The money is a grant, not a loan — it does not have to be paid back.

Gary Cochran, owner of the Charlotte Hotel, is among those who received a grant through the program.

"It was extremely rewarding. I got the grant awarded very quickly and it was not onerous at all," he said of the application process.

"They want to give the money away — that's a nice thing," Cochran said.

The past year has been a struggle, "as it has for all businesses, I think," he said, adding, "...Were it not for grants such as the one we got here and some of the other assistance we got — government assistance with PPP money — and just the general largesse of our customer base, we would not still be in business. We would have been out of business a long time ago."

The grant "contributed greatly to our ability to stay in business — and keep people working," Cochran said.

Onancock is known for its restaurants, as well as other small businesses that bring people to town.

"The Town of Onancock honors and values every one of the businesses and non-profit organizations that choose to call Onancock its home. This last year has shaken many of us to our very core and Town leadership continues to strive to support our businesses to survive the pandemic and thrive when normalcy returns," a letter from the town to businesses said.

A link on the town website, https://www.onancock.com/community/page/grants, gives details about the Small Business Recovery Assistance Grant, which Onancock applied for and received from the Virginia Department of Housing and Community Development.

A link to the application packet is on the same page and includes contact information for members of a team who can help businesses apply.

The town office telephone number is 757-787-3363.

A project management team, including Spuck, Gehman, Onancock office manager Lisa Fiege, Onancock

Main Street board member Carol Tunstall, and community representative Zorylu Diaz-Bonilla, stands ready to assist businesses in applying for the grant — including Diaz-Bonilla being able to provide Spanish-language information.

"The five of us are available and willing to meet with people to review the application process and answer any questions they might have," Gehman said.

Cochran thanked those administering the program.

"I think they've done a wonderful job. ... They have been extremely helpful to me and I think they would be, and are, helpful to anybody who reaches out to them," he said, adding, "They will walk you through the process. ... It's not like you have to do it on your own."

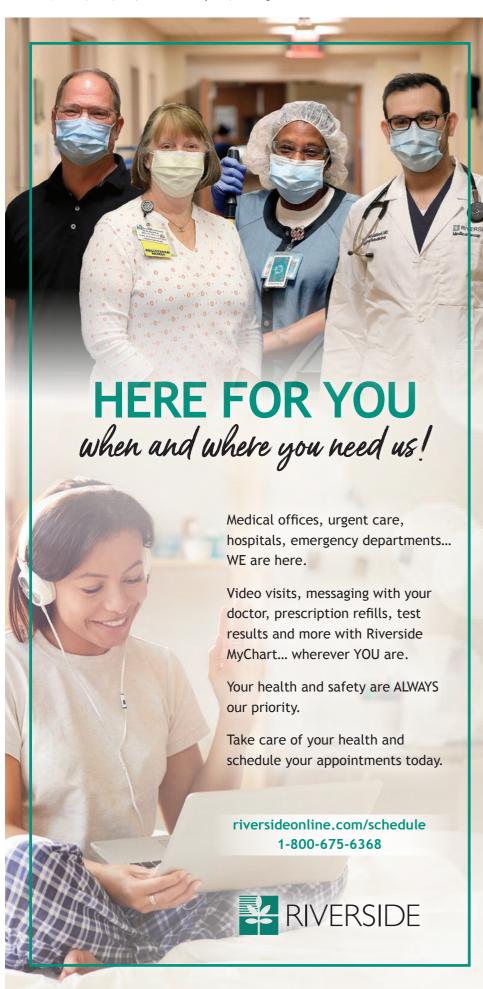

"We just want to let people know that the small businesses are an integral part of our local economy and community and that we really do hope to disburse the total amount that we've been given, so we really want to encourage everybody to apply," Gehman said.

Fewer Students, More State Funding in Northampton Schools Budget

By Stefanie Jackson

Northampton County Public Schools Superintendent Eddie Lawrence presented the school division's fiscal year 2022 operating budget to county supervisors April 13, sharing both the challenges that were faced in writing the budget and his hope for the future of funding local K-12 public education.

The budget was based on a projected average daily membership (ADM) of 1,350 students, down from 1,400 this year.

Estimating next year's ADM was difficult because of a reduction in ADM this year due to COVID-19, and "we really don't know how many of our students that are virtual or who have gone to private school will come back next year," Lawrence said.

He reviewed Northampton's composite index, a number intended to represent how much a locality can afford to pay for its public education.

Northampton's composite index of approximately .46 means that for every dollar of the cost of its public education – not counting federal funding – Northampton is expected to pay 46 cents, a threshold which the county consistently exceeds, Lawrence said.

Because the county is land rich and cash poor, Northampton ends up with a composite index higher than cities like Virginia Beach and Chesapeake.

But that could be getting ready to change for the better. The Joint Legislative Audit and Review Commission (JLARC), which provides oversight of state agencies on behalf of the Virginia General Assembly, will conduct a study this year on the composite index.

JLARC is "realizing that there are counties out there like Northampton where the formula just doesn't capture a realistic picture of economic activity in the county," Lawrence said.

The expectation is that following the study, the composite index will be changed to be more "equitable" for small, rural school divisions, he said.

Virginia's budget included the state's share of the cost to provide public school teachers and employees a 5% raise, which has been included in Northampton schools' budget.

Gov. Ralph Northam had included $2.7 million is his proposed state budget for Northampton and Accomack counties to receive a Cost of Competing Adjustment or COCA, funding traditionally given to Northern Virginia counties that compete with the Washington, D.C., area when recruiting teachers.

The General Assembly removed that funding allocation from its final budget but offered a compromise: one-time funding of $2 million for Accomack and Northampton (of which Northampton's share is $362,000) to make permanent adjustments to teacher salary scales to help recruit and retain teachers.

One reason the General Assembly offered the funding was that the Northampton school division had never turned down state funding in the past, said Chief Financial Officer Brook Thomas.

She expects Northampton and Accomack's representatives in the General Assembly (Del. Rob Bloxom and Sen. Lynwood Lewis) will continue to lobby for permanent funding through COCA.

Thomas would not normally suggest using one-time funding for recurring expenses, but she and the superintendent recommended supervisors accept the offer from the state.

Lawrence said, "If we don't take advantage of this to work on our pay scale, the danger we run is pretty simple. The state legislature may look at us and say, 'Well, they're not really serious about improving their teacher pay."

Supervisor John Coker agreed accepting the one-time funding is a "calculated risk" that should be taken.

After Northampton schools eliminated some funding requests from its budget, a shortfall of about $159,000 remained, which the school division asked supervisors to cover and would bring the county's annual contribution to the school system to about $9 million, an increase of less than 1%.

Supervisors did not make an immediate decision on the proposed budget, but Chairman Dixon Leatherbury commended Northampton schools for its "amazing" ability to keep schools open and keep kids safe during the COVID-19 pandemic, even as other school divisions around the state and country struggled.

Kim was predeceased by his siblings and parents from Jacksonville, Fla., and a foster son from Japan.

It's a challenge for any family to do justice to a life well lived and his is no exception. His was a kind and gentle soul tempered by privation, mindful work, and grace imbued by wise souls too numerous to mention. Born Oct. 5, 1932, in Gainesville, Fla., to Robert and Rhetta Penland, he was the youngest of four. Mistaken for stillborn, his listless body murmured to life in a box under his mother's bed. The smallest and youngest grew to become a man in all the best ways. A Husband. A Father. A Friend. And to the end, A Marine. In the words of a good friend, "He always saw the best in people and made you feel good about yourself."

His wife said it was great to be married to him. They honored and cared for one another "till death do us part." He and Jo lifted up one another, and together, made a loving family.

He knew cars, how to fix things, and how to love. As a high school senior, he cared for his father in his infirmity and always rose to the task before him. He taught his children to make their beds, clean their cars, and return phone calls. He modeled modesty and how to be soft-spoken. He led them to offer a helping hand. He encouraged them not to fear and see their gifts as what they are—unique to them and needed in the world. He showed that love is key to a rich life.

The Great Depression and WWII shaped his early years. He had a paper route, was a movie theater usher, and carried his father's toolbox between refrigeration jobs. After high school he worked in a steel yard where he was taught to read blueprints and learned the day-to-day responsibilities of managing a crew of men. It was here in 1950, Mr. Norman Runyon, an engineer, suggested he enlist in Naval Reserve Officer Training (NROTC) as a way to attend college. He did and attended University of South Carolina where he graduated cum laude. As a member of Sigma Nu fraternity he attended a Pi Beta Phi sorority party. There he met his future wife when she nervously and absent-mindedly spilled punch on his dress whites. He told a friend later that night he would marry her, and six months later he did. Thus began a wonderful journey of 64 years together. From modest beginnings at Camp Lejeune, they began a family. Their first child, Ellen, was born on base while he served as aide-de-camp to General Sidney Wade during operation Blue Bat in Beirut. Four years in the Marines led to a career in the energy industry, that would take the family from Baton Rouge, New Orleans, and Grand Isle on the gulf coast, to Houston, Pittsburgh, London, and ultimately, to Tokyo before settling on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. As the family grew they counted over 13 moves, but the Shore has been a steady beacon as Kim's Florida roots have been counterbalanced by Jo's deep connections through the Gibb, Ward, and Mathias families. The family is thankful.

After 40-plus years as an engineer with Exxon, Gulf, Chevron, and Williams Energy, Jo and Kim retired to the Shore where they enjoyed a satisfying retirement. Kim was a member of the Onancock Lions Club, Naomi Makemie Presbyterian Church, Eastern Shore Antique Car Club, and the VFW. He and Jo volunteered at Habitat for Humanity and the Salvation Army. Kim enjoyed sailing the bay on the Korroboree and sharing rides in old cars. His green '54 MG TD and red '65 Mustang were often part of local parades. Besides old cars, music has been central to the family. Kim loved to sing songs from his fraternity days with Sigma Nu. He and Jo sang many a serenade and weren't above corny folk tunes with their children and grandkids. He shared his wisdom through poems, stories, and Grandpa's Rules. He leaves behind friends and family from around the world who mourn his loss and will remember him fondly. The family invites friends to join them at the Penland home on Back Street in Accomac as they celebrate Kim's life Saturday, May 1, 2021, at

Court Postings By Nancy Drury Duncan

Billy Joe Corbin Jr., 49, of Darien, Ga., was sentenced to time served for making threats in writing to kill or do bodily injury.

The woman with whom Corbin was in a relationship for 18 years left him and came to the Eastern Shore to stay with her sister and her husband. Corbin sent numerous text messages to all three. In them, he explicitly threatened various types of violence against them and their property.

At Corbin's February trial, Commonwealth's Attorney Spencer Morgan presented four pages of the text messages in evidence. "The victim wants no contact with Corbin," said Morgan at the sentencing. "His words were meant to inflict emotional suffering and to instill fear, terrifying his victims."

Judge W. Revell Lewis III sentenced Corbin to three years for making threatening telephone calls and 12 months for making threats in writing, a misdemeanor. All that time except the three months he spent in jail when arrested was suspended. He is required to be on good behavior for five years and to have no contact with the victims.

In a plea agreement with the commonwealth, Gregory Alan Smith, 48, of Painter, pleaded guilty to six counts of larceny, nine counts of forgery, and one count of uttering. Three charges were dismissed in exchange for his guilty plea to the remaining 16.

DREAMS

The checks were stolen from a woman for whom he was doing yardwork. The restitution will be $2,930, said Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney William Fox. Smith will be sentenced May 13.

Jamir Kuamel Giddens, 31, of Parksley will spend one year and five months in jail for possession and distribution of cocaine.

Defense attorney Carl Bundick said his client had no previous criminal convictions and had none since. "He made bad decisions," he told the court. He asked that his client receive a sentence of 45 days so he could serve his time on weekends and continue working.

"You said your motivation for selling drugs was Christmas for your children," said Judge Lewis. He pointed out that the drug sales were made in October and early November. "I don't necessarily buy that you were selling drugs to buy Christmas for your kids. You made terrible choices, Mr. Giddens."

Judge Lewis sentenced Giddens to 10 years on each of three counts, to run concurrently and suspended all but one year and five months. He ordered him to be on two years of supervised probation and to be on good behavior for five years.

Jaylon Harmon, 22, of Mappsville, pleaded guilty to assault and battery of a household member, larceny from a person, and violation of a protective order.

An altercation between Harmon and the mother of his child began in Horntown and continued on to Walmart in Onley where the situation escalated, said Commonwealth's Attorney Morgan. Harmon arrived at the store before she did, confronted her, and pursued her around the store. He grabbed her and grabbed her phone, Morgan said. When police were called, they found Harmon outside the store shouting that the woman was unfaithful to him. Morgan said the woman was visibly upset and had a protective order against Harmon which was in effect at the time. He said Harmon has a prior criminal record of assaulting family members and others. He will be sentenced June 17.

Wachapreague - Captain Lindsay Paul, of Trident Tackle, reported that the shop weighed in a 25.5inch flounder Sunday. The doormat weighed 6 pounds, 4 ounces. Paul described the flounder fishing as pretty decent. He mentioned Bullshead, Green, and Drawing channels as the areas that have been producing the most fish but also receiving the most fishing effort. Berkley Gulp and minnow combinations have been the bait of choice for most flounder anglers. Paul said that black drum were available out the inlet and behind the breakers.

Amanda Manzella, at the Wachapreague Inn, reported that lots of flounder catches were reported over the weekend with many in the 21- to 22-inch range. Pink and chartreuse were described as the most productive bait colors.

Lower Shore - Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle in Cape Charles, said the black drum fishing is getting better. Brady said that most of the catches have come from just behind the breakers of the lower Shore barrier islands. Crab and clam baits have both been productive. Puppy drum are being caught inside the bayside creeks. Reports of flounder catches are trickling in from the seaside creeks and Brady said that he expects it to pick up even more very soon. He added that the offshore wrecks are producing some large tautog.

After a little lull on Monday, fishing action quickly rebounded thanks to the rising air temperatures and diminishing winds. Flounder fishing is getting more consistent, especially on the sunny days, on the shallow flats. A nice-sized flounder weighing 6 pounds, 4 ounces was landed out of Wachapreague on Sunday. Chincoteague - Donna Rae Roeske, of Captain Bob's Marina, reported that the fishing slowed down a little early in the week. She said that the gusty wind had impacted some of the angling effort. Flounder catches were fewer and the black drum became a little more scarce in the surf. As most of the other available species slowed, striped bass action picked up, both in the surf and inside the inlet, providing steady catch-and-release action for those willing to brave the wind and cool temperatures.

Pete Vasiliou, of Captain Steve's Bait and Tackle, reported that the flounder action is steadily increasing. He said black drum continue to be caught in the surf. The shop weighed in its first golden tilefish of the year, caught during an offshore deep-dropping trip.

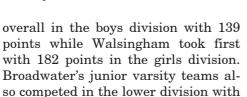

Upper Shore - Captain Matt Abell, of Sea Hawk Sports Center, reported that the Pocomoke River is producing good numbers of perch. He said that flounder fishing on the seaside was slowly improving with the best bite continuing to occur during the falling tide. Folly Creek and Wachapreague were his customers'

Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program Celebrates Top Volunteers

Submitted Article

The Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program (VGFTP) celebrated the achievements of its top volunteers online earlier this month.

In 2020, volunteers in the tagging program had more than 21,123 tags and 1,544 recaptures. Speckled trout led again as the top tagged species, making up 50.8% (10,720 tags) of tagging effort in 2020. The Top Tagger in 2020 was Ed Shepherd, who has tagged more than 83,000 fish during his time in the program.

Greenbackville resident David Gladysiewicz was Top Tagger in the tautog category.

A cooperative program between the Marine Advisory Program at the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS) and the Virginia Saltwater Tournament at the Virginia Marine Resources Commission (VMRC), the VGFTP uses state saltwater license funds to train volunteer anglers to tag and release recreationally important finfishes.

Since the program began in 1995, the volunteers have contributed more than 366,000 tagging records and 36,589 recapture records! These important data are shared with fishery managers, helping contribute information about life history and habitat utilization for some of our favorite species.

Last Week's Contest: Itsy, Bitsy ... Blue Crab Bay?

Although 48 readers found all six spiderwebs, we received complaints from readers that the sixth spiderweb did not exist, that no matter how hard they and their friends looked they could not find that sixth spiderweb, and that they were giving up. The spiderweb under the dock in the first panel of the Seaside cartoon on Page 25 is apparently the one the eluded so many of you. The other five spiderwebs were on pages 5, 24, 32, 40, and 41. The osprey-eyed reader randomly chosen to win the $25 gift basket from Blue Crab Bay Co. was Ashlynn Crockett, of Melfa.

This Week's Contest: "Accept My Proposal" to Win!

In recognition of this week's sponsor, where people go to buy engagement rings, we have hidden four proposals in this issue of the Post. These proposals are either in text, which contain the words "accept my proposal," or they are images that clearly show someone proposing marriage. Find these four proposals but beware: If you submit a text or image that is not a proposal, we will decline your offer of an entry and you will be left at the altar this week. Readers who locate the correct four proposals will become contestants and, from that pool, one lucky osprey-eyed reader will be randomly selected to win a $25 gift certificate to C.D. Marsh Jewelers in Onancock. See sponsor box on this page.

The rules:

- To become a contestant, find the four proposals (text or images) and tell us where you found them (page number and location on the page). Send this information to david@easternshorepost.com.
- You can start sending your entries now. Entries MUST have your first and last names and your town.
- Entries will be accepted until noon on Monday, April 26. Entries arriving after noon on the 26th will not be entered in the contest.
 - Do not submit multiple entries.
- Include a photograph if you choose to submit one and tell us a little something about the picture.
- Anyone submitting a photograph must have taken the picture or have permission to use it.

The winner and as many runners-up as possible will get their photographs in the paper.

If you don't want to use your own picture, you can submit a photo of your child or a pet — or a beautiful wedding, an old dog that is shedding, or even certain brides and grooms you are dreading. Just no feet.

Last Week's Winner

Last week's contestants found six spiderwebs that eluded many of our most osprey-eyed readers. Among those 48 certified contestants was a senior citizen in her 90s and at least one teenager — the one who was chosen by our random number generator to win the $25 gift basket from the Blue Crab Bay Co.: Ashlynn Crockett, of Melfa.

Random Facts About ... Sirens and Other WOO-WOO Noises

By David Martin

When we opened our internet tubes for cleaning this week, we heard an unmistakable sound: sirens.

Sirens got their start around 1800 when Scottish physicist John Robison altered musical instruments to force air through pneumatic tubes in a way that produced such a shrill sound that listeners had to plug their ears. You call that music, John? Charles Cagniard de La Tour, a French engineer, made the device even more ear-piercing by using a disk rotating at speed with jets of air aimed at holes in the disk, creating the sound he called — and we know as — the siren. In Greek mythology, sailors plugged their ears with wax to avoid hearing the alluring song of mermaid-like creatures called Sirens whose songs would lure sailors to their destruction.

The early air-driven sirens — the ones that made noise, not the ones that tempted sailors — gave way to electric sirens so that by the end of World War II almost all the sirens used to warn of impending bombing raids in England were electric. In the United States, large public sirens were established during the Cold War to warn of a nuclear attack but are used today to warn of tornados. Familiar to many residents of the Shore at all hours of the day or night, sirens are also used to call volunteer firefighters to their duty.

In the 1800s, emergency vehicles — police and fire — used bells to warn people to get out of the way. Police adopted use of sirens as soon as they were invented, although many firetrucks kept using versions of bells. By the 1960s, electronic sirens had been devised for police cars. These electronic sirens can, along with the traditional tritone, also produce chirps, yelps, wails, and blasts like an air horn. A police siren called the Rumbler has woofers powerful enough to cause another vehicle up to 300 feet away to vibrate slightly, to get the attention of distracted drivers.

Many European countries use the two-tone siren that's familiar to any fan of foreign films: WEE-oww, WEE-oww, WEE-oww. There's talk in some U.S. jurisdictions to replace the blare-screech-blurt of American cop sirens with the more, some would say, civilized, two-tone siren of the European constabulary. It's a matter of individual taste as some people find the WEE-oww, WEE-oww siren as annoying as those long gaps in European films when the characters stare off into space to think about things.

When noise becomes more damaging than annoying it's often produced by a Long Range Acoustic Device, also known as a sound cannon. The LRAD's manufacturer says it is to be used for long-range communications and to blast noise to keep wildlife away from runways, for example. It can also be used as an effective public address system during large protests and other mass gatherings. But the device's high decibel output and potential to cause pain and hearing damage also make it an effective crowd control weapon. Some LRADs apparently have aiming and focusing devices to concentrate the damaging sound on targeted portions of a crowd.

Meanwhile, you are back in your modern car with its sound-deadening material and noise-cancellation technology, windows up, radio on, and as promised by the new-car brochure, you will not be bothered by outside noises — such as police, fire, and ambulance sirens. Reports are increasing all across the country of people failing to yield to emergency vehicles. Drivers either don't hear the sirens or see the lights; don't know what to do when encountering an emergency vehicle; or simply don't care.

Laws differ in the various states but in general when encountering an emergency vehicle, you must slow down, pull to the right, and yield to the vehicle. If you don't, the next siren you hear might be the one taking you to the hoosgow.

Craddockville Fish Carver Ellen McCaleb Finds 'A Season for Everything'

By Bill Sterling Special to the Eastern Shore Post

Art, says Ellen McCaleb, needs inspiration to devote oneself fully.

The 52-year-old McCaleb realized this following her husband's death in 2012, when she shelved a notable fish carving career to concentrate on her startup business that makes growth charts for children.

A native of Virginia's Eastern Shore who had transplanted to New Hampshire, McCaleb was recognized as one of the world's top fish carvers, practicing a craft founded in Europe at the turn of the 19th century. She would get orders from anglers who fished the world over and released their trophy catches but wanted them remembered in great detail through McCaleb's carvings. Her fish carvings have been shipped to 16 countries among six continents.

Then in 2012, her husband, Jonathan Fischer, died after a short battle with stomach cancer. The hardest thing she says she had ever done was to take each of her two children, Evelyn, then 9, and Nathan, 6, by the hand and lead them into their bedroom to say goodbye to their Dad.

"After Jonathan's death, I didn't have anything to offer. The muse was gone," said McCaleb. "I had two years of work lined up, so I committed myself to completing those fish. But when I got to the last fish, and the buyer had not yet made a down payment, I called him and said, 'I am sorry, but I simply can't do this. I just don't have it in me right now.'"

"When you make something, there is this outpouring of yourself. When Jonathan died, I didn't really have anything to give."

In 2008, McCaleb started a growth chart business. It's taken a considerable amount of time, but the business now has four employees and does a good trade in customized growth charts on Etsy and Amazon. Her company sold more than 18,000 growth charts last year. "I even own a forklift," said McCaleb.

"My business was my constant escape after Jonathan's death. It was my creative outlet during those tough times, through his diagnosis and death. It did a lot to lift my spirits," said McCaleb. "I saw the future in making growth charts. There were bright colors."

But, spurred by three phone calls in the same week asking if she would consider carving a fish, she has pulled out her tools and started shaping fish again. Included among those tools is a drawknife once used by her grandfather.

"The calls may have been God telling me it's the right time, but I also had been thinking that if you invest 10,000 hours in a craft and develop a mastery of something and then not use it, what a waste that is," said McCaleb, now remarried. "I was also asking myself, 'Can I still do this?' I am still quite young, and I was thinking, 'Really, for the rest of your life you are not going to carve a fish?'"

Apparently, her customers believe she can, because McCaleb flatly stated the price would be $7,500 per carving and don't bother to haggle. Two said yes and the third said that sum would cut into his fishing budget. "I told him no problem, I understand, but I made up my mind if I was going to do this, it better be worth my time and effort."

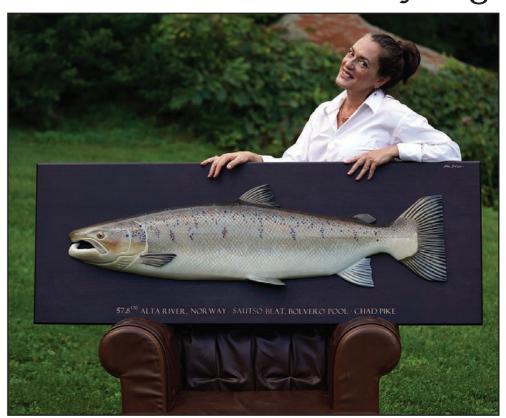

"Sometimes when you live in a small town, you have a small town mentality and think, 'I can't charge that much.' But unlike growth charts, you can't mass produce fish carvings. Each one is unique."

The same profusion of color she professes to love that she saw in the growth charts is now evident in her fish carvings. "It's exciting to figure out the texture you want to represent in the carvings. The same species of trout can show different colors. It's like cooking and putting together a recipe so it works."

Carving wood fish effigies is an art form that flourished in Scotland and England around the turn of the 19th century. "When I first started carving fish in 1997, there was only one person in North America doing this," said McCaleb.

A Childhood Spent in Nature

Some of McCaleb's earliest memories are of fishing with her dad on Craddock Creek on the Eastern Shore. By the age of 9, she was fishing regularly for red drum, speckled trout, flounder, trout, spot, and croaker. Sometimes she would venture to the seaside and fish along the barrier islands for bluefish and striped bass.

"Fishing with Dad and spending time with people outside of the normal hustle and bustle and daily grind was really special. My dad didn't just catch the fish, he had to learn everything about them, eviscerating them to see what they had eaten while cleaning the fish for dinner that night.

"Our freezer was stocked with venison from deer killed on the farm. My father hunted ducks and geese that ended up on our table. We heated the farmhouse with wood we cut nearby. I helped him split and stack the wood. We were always busy. Watching TV was not allowed unless it was a big football game. I can remember him yelling to his kids, 'It's a beautiful day. We are going to pick bayberries to make candles.'"

"When I was a teenager, I started my own bullet manufacturing business, smelting down metals to make bullets for regular customers. Being idle was just not accepted in my family," said McCaleb, whose father died from cancer three years after her husband's death.

In addition to tagging along with her dad on fishing trips, there was another experience that greatly influenced the direction of McCaleb's life. She babysat the children of Mark Mc-Nair, a noted decoy carver who lived one creek north.

"I always thought Mark had the perfect commute," she recalled. "I would imagine him leaving the house in the morning with a cup of coffee and walking across the yard to his shop. When his children wanted to build a saltwater aquarium, Mark would drop his tools and go get his cast net to catch some fish. It was a family-friendly way of earning a living. Actually, it's more about adopting a lifestyle than earning a living."

She carved her first fish, a brook trout, from a piece of 2-by-4-inch wood in the fall of December 1996 and showed it to McNair. "It was pretty crude by my standards today," Mc-Caleb said, "but when I showed it to Mark, he was able to critique it without squashing my ambition. He could have easily told me it was a train wreck, but he didn't. And I am grateful!"

McCaleb graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with a degree in English, but also took a few art and architecture courses as electives. After spending a year in France, she settled in Pennsylvania, where she worked as a manager of investor relations for a venture capital investment firm.

"I was commuting to the city and working a relatively high-tech job, exactly the opposite of how I grew up," said McCaleb. "It really boils down to you don't know what is possible until you are exposed to it. I was fortunate to see how Mark McNair lived his life. And when I was in the business world, I knew there was something different out there. So I started to carve at night and saw an opportunity to turn carving fish into a business, and ultimately a way of life."

McCaleb recalls how the journey started, "There are three major collections of fish carvings in the United States. I got in a car and drove to Ohio and Michigan to see these collections." And she was glad for the effort. "I saw carvings by over 10 carvers from the United Kingdom. It was such a learning experience to see how each one created a piece ... their individual style."

Something Good Came From the Corporate World

The one positive thing that came out of working in the corporate world was meeting her husband, Jonathan, who also worked at the firm. They relocated from Pennsylvania to a rural area in New Hampshire, where he taught Spanish in high school and she carved full-time until two children came along; she then worked part-time.

Life was good until cancer cut short her husband's life at the age of 52. "There is no way around grief," said McCaleb. "The shortest way through it is to actually walk through it. For me, this took the form of a lot of walking down the dirt road across the street ... no one but the trees to hear me. And so each day I devoted time to yell at God, talk to Jonathan, cry and sometimes yell at Jonathan."

"Yes, I have remarried, but I'm still allowed to say that I miss Jonathan. In fact, it was Jonathan, who five days before he passed away, said, 'I will pick someone out for you.' And he did. For me, there's a lot of humor in this story. He sent me Dennis, who is a builder. Being a builder was not on my list of top 10 things I was looking for in a spouse. But our house happened to be one of the town's oldest, and Dennis beautifully remade and renovated it. So again, Jonathan was looking out for me."

Though Dennis Whitcher, 59, may seem not at all like her first husband, McCaleb said there are some similarities. "When I first met Dennis, I told him, 'Jonathan left me this really odd thing, maybe you can tell me what it is.' It was a .22 rifle, a .45 pistol, so it had this folding stock on it."

"He looked at it and said right away, 'That's a 1921 Marble Game Getter. It's my favorite gun. I've owned 10 of those.' So there were all these signs pointing in the same direction."

Today, with a new start in carving fish, McCaleb and her husband have moved back to her birthplace in Craddockville. Whitcher is renovating the house where McCaleb's grandmother lived, next door to the house where she was raised. He hunts deer on the same farm where McCaleb's father hunted and raises oysters on the creek that stops just yards away from the front door.

The renovated house will include McCaleb's carving shop. Her daughter is off to college, and her son attends school a few miles away, often working in his mother's workshop as an apprentice carver once classes let out.

Although she lives in a land renowned for its decoy carvers, McCaleb said she really never had an interest in carving ducks, nor did taxidermy appeal to her because it uses plastic forms.

She works exclusively in basswood, carving the fish to the exact specifications of the trophy catch submitted by the angler. One of her tricks is to use rose thorns for the teeth of the fish.

"Each piece is custom and personal for both me and the client. I'm looking to create an heirloom, which requires a lot of time and energy. But I am happy to say I have rediscovered the joy I once found in fish carving."

"Part of my recovery and the path to carving again was knitting this new family together. It was like pulling at threads and joining them together," explained McCaleb.

McCaleb sees the world in color again, not the dreary grays of the time following her husband's death.

"There is a line in one of my all-time favorite movies, 'The Shawshank Redemption': 'You better get busy living or get busy dying.' But first, as the Bible says, there is a season for everything."

Effort Underway To Remember Local Music Legend Arthur "Big Boy" Crudup

By Stefanie Jackson

Going on 50 years since the death in Nassawadox of Arthur "Big Boy" Crudup, who has been called "The Father of Rock and Roll," interest in the musician's life and work was renewed when a member of a local Facebook group revealed he was in possession of numerous sealed copies of one of Crudup's albums left over long after the closing of a local music store.

Addison Trower Custis, a member of a Facebook group with more than 5,000 members, "Growing Up on the Eastern Shore of Virginia," is the grandson of the late Winston "Dynamite" Custis Sr., who opened the Custis Record Shop in downtown Exmore in 1955.

Crudup (pronounced "crewed up") was born in Mississippi in 1905, the son of migrant workers. He began singing in his early adult years and later moved to Chicago, where a record producer reportedly discovered him living and singing on the street.

The American Delta blues singer and guitarist became an RCA recording artist in the 1940s and earned his nickname "The Father of Rock and Roll" after Elvis Presley covered one of Crudup's songs, "That's All Right Mama," and it was released as Presley's first single in 1954.

Additional songs Crudup wrote and performed, such as "My Baby Left Me," were covered by Presley and other well-known artists, but Crudup was not widely recognized for his work; neither was he receiving royalties.

He received more than $10,000 in royalties a few years before his death, but an out-of-court settlement for about $60,000 in back royalties was never paid, according to Wikipedia.

Unable to support his family solely on his earnings from performing music, Crudup moved back to Mississippi and worked as a field laborer.

He later moved to the Eastern Shore of Virginia with his wife and three sons, who formed a band called The Malibu Boys or The Malibus.

Jane Cabarrus, current owner of the Do Drop Inn, in Weirwood, a restaurant and lounge opened by her father, Lloyd Giddens, in 1967, remembered when the Crudup family came to the Shore.

The sons, James "Jude Baby" Crudup, Jonas "J.C." Crudup, and George Crudup, attended Northampton County Public Schools with Cabarrus and her friends.

Interest in Arthur Crudup's "The Father of Rock and Roll" album has been renewed by the discovery of a stash of the records in the hands of a grandson of a former record store owner. Photo by Angie H. Crutchley.

The Crudup family lived in Nassawadox, across from the site where the Machipongo Clam Shack currently stands, she said.

Cabarrus particularly remembered Jonas Crudup, who entered the military after graduating from Northampton County High School around 1965.

After he returned home from the military, he started the Malibu Boys with his brothers, with himself as lead singer, James Crudup on drums, and George Crudup on the guitar.

Cabarrus described the Malibu Boys as very talented, and any hit song anyone could name, they could play it.

Arthur Crudup worked in the fields by day and played music by night. He often would be the opening act for his sons at the Do Drop Inn, back when the cover charge was only $3, Cabarrus recalled.

He used to catch the bus in Exmore at Lloyd's Drug Store, which was across the street from the Custis Record Shop. That was how he met Winston Custis Jr., who had taken over

Crudup was still working on his music, and Custis bought about 250 copies or eight cases of Crudup's 1971 album, "The Father of Rock and Roll," to "help his cause," said Addison Custis, the son of Winston Custis Jr.

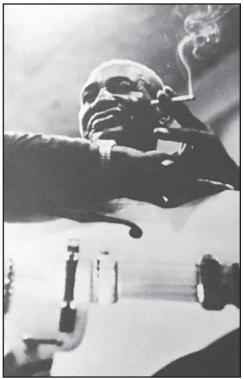

Before that, Crudup had been selling his albums out of the trunk of a car or even by bicycle, Custis said.

The music store sold two cases of the albums, and the Custis family kept the remaining inventory after the store closed around 1977 or 1978.

Winston Custis Jr. died in November 2020, and Addison Custis remembered the first time his father delved into his extensive music collection and played Arthur "Big Boy" Crudup for him.

"We would spin those records; I was probably 12 when I could actually appreciate it some" and learn how Crudup was a "local celebrity," Custis said.

Crudup's music was part blues, part rock 'n' roll, and he even recorded with Presley several times, he added.

Crudup was a man of modest means, and for years after he died in 1974, his grave lacked a headstone. Cabarrus was behind much of the fundraising effort that allowed a headstone to be purchased for Crudup's grave, Custis said.

Arthur Crudup's headstone is in the cemetery at Bethel Baptist Church, Franktown, and was acquired and placed there some time after his son James Crudup died, Cabarrus said.

Now another effort is underway to help ensure Crudup is remembered for his life and contributions to music.

Custis gave away a few copies of Crudup's album to Facebook members before selling them for a modest price to Rob Kellam, who created the "Growing Up on the Eastern Shore of Virginia" Facebook group.

Kellam is confident that he can sell the individual albums for a significant profit and use the money to honor Crudup's legacy in some way, such as funding a highway marker bearing his name to be placed in Nassawadox or Franktown, where he spent the latter part of his life.

Custis said the sale was for "a good cause" to get the little-known music legend "the recognition he deserved."

Public Notice

APPROVAL OF A CATEGORICAL EXCLUSION FROM AN ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT FOR A PROJECT FUNDED THROUGH THE VIRGINIA WATER SUPPLY REVOLVING FUND

Public Notice No.: WSL 004-21 First Publication Date: April 23, 2021

The Virginia Department of Health has under consideration a request for a Categorical Exclusion from an Environmental Assessment for a waterworks project proposed to be funded through the Virginia Water Supply Revolving Fund. The applicant is the Arlington Plantation Property Owners' Association.

Project Description: The project proposes the removal of an old 10,000-gallon water storage tank, remediation of the old tank area, setting of a new 10,000-gallon storage tank and 2 existing transfer pumps above ground, recoating of a 3,000-gallon pressure tank internally and externally, the addition of chlorination treatment capability, and with required piping to connect all equipment. In addition, 2 small buildings (approx. 8 ft \times 10 ft) will be added to house the relocated transfer pumps, chlorination treatment and chlorination supplies storage. These changes would be conducted within the boundaries of the APPOA well lot. The only change outside of the well lot is the installation of a new water meter at an unmetered property in an APPOA common area that already receives service. The project is being implemented in order to improve the level of water treatment by adding the ability to chlorinate the drinking water. The proposed construction does not expand the water system service area or customer base, nor does it change the purpose of the original location.

Keep Cape Charles Safe: Follow Golf Cart Rules

Dear Editor:

The 2021 season has arrived, and after a year like 2020, we're all gearing up for a lot of visitors in Cape Charles this summer. And with the return of all these guests, the Cape Charles Police Department wants to ensure a safe experience for everyone, visitors and residents alike.

One of the things that makes our town a fun and unique experience is the ever-growing use of golf carts. Yet it is important for all of us to do our part to make sure our golf cart culture here remains a safe one.

Unfortunately, the police department has been seeing an increase of inappropriate and unsafe behavior when it comes to golf carts. This bad behavior tends to threaten the overall golf cart culture we've all come to enjoy. So the town will be stepping up enforcement for violations this year.

Please do not operate a golf cart on any road with a speed limit greater than 25 mph (use designated paths in these areas). You cannot drive golf carts in Central Park or on any sidewalk. You must obey all rules of the road, and it is especially important to prevent anyone from operating a golf cart who is underage or who does not have a valid driver's license.

New fines will be assessed for these violations. For example, underage drivers will now be fined $100 for a first offense, and $250 for a second offense. We really do not want anyone to have a bad experience in Cape Charles, so please help us spread the word to follow the rules and to help keep Cape Charles a safe and enjoyable golf cart town for everyone.

Jim Pruitt, Chief of Police Town of Cape Charles

Welcome, Animal Rescue!

Dear Editor:

There is a wonderful animal rescue organization coming to Machipongo in May.

Katie Cook, founder, will be moving her nonprofit operation from Ojai, Calif., to Machipongo. Katie and her husband, Les, recently purchased a 115-acre farm with the dream of moving their children and all their 100+rescue animals to one property.

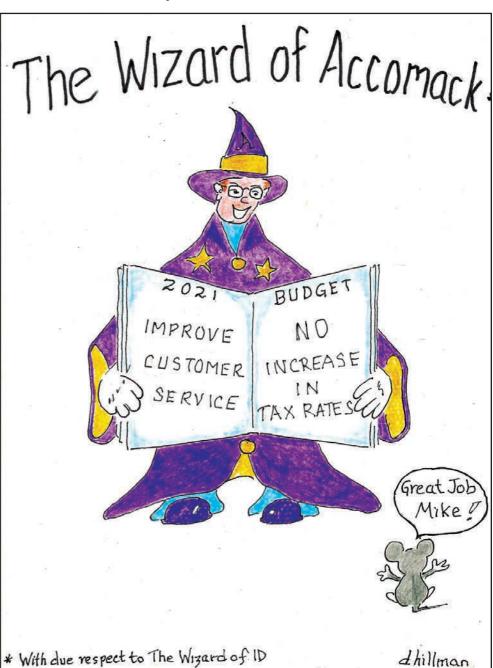

Currently, Katie has the animals housed on three different properties in California. These include alpacas, pigs, horses, donkeys, mules, dogs, ducks, geese, turkeys, and chickens. All were rescued from abandoned, abused, kill pens, or neglected situations. Each has its own story of survival, including many who were rescued from the California wildfires.

It takes great faith, courage, compassion, and love of defenseless animals to do rescue work. Then, add on the work of not only caring for them but moving them from the West Coast to the East Coast, and it becomes quite a feat. But Katie has worked miracles, extending deadlines, contracting with people to build fences and barns, investing her family's own funds, and gathering other nonprofits to help move the animals.

Their dream is becoming a reality and they will be here soon! You can check out her nonprofit, The Little Farm Rescue, on Facebook and wish them the best!
