On 8-1 Vote, Accomack Supervisors Approve Townhouse Development

By Carol Vaughn

The Accomack County Board of Supervisors Wednesday approved rezoning and a conditional use permit for a proposed mixed-use development with 140 townhouses, planned to be rentals, on property surrounded on three sides by the Captains Cove community.

The two 8-1 votes, with Supervisor Paul Muhly voting no, came after public hearings in which 13 Captains Cove residents spoke against the development, citing concerns about the developer's plan to use Captains Cove's private road, Captains Corridor, to access the new development and to use Captains Cove's water and sewer utilities to serve it, among other concerns.

"Listening to the audience tonight, I haven't heard any consensus that the legal issues have been settled," Muhly said.

CCG Note LLC requested the county conditionally rezone 24.41 acres, the former Hastings/Mariner farm on State Line Road, from residential to village development and applied for a conditional use permit to build a 140-townhouse and commercial mixed-use development there.

The board's May 18 meeting packet included 152 pages of letters submitted by Captains Cove residents opposing the townhouse development.

Among speakers was Linda Reece, who lives on Captains Corridor.

"Captains Cove resources are for the residents and property owners, not the county or any developer to misuse," she said.

Reece said the developer made a profit when, as president of the Captains Cove property owners' association board, he sold the water and sewer system "to his own utility company."

The sales agreement says the system is for the property owners in Captains Cove, according to Reece. "No other use is permitted," she said.

Reece and other speakers talked about poor water quality in Captains Cove and the danger of saltwater intrusion with additional withdrawals for the new development.

Laurence Berger, another resident, said the developers do not live in Accomack County. "There is one thing they are not — your constituents," he told the board.

He directed the board's attention to the large crowd of Captains Cove resi-

Ride a Painted Pony

The carousel ponies at the Chincoteague carnival grounds got a facelift recently when a group of friends that usually band together to place pony auction bids came together to voluntarily paint the carousel ponies. Chincoteague (Carousel) Ponies Get Facelifts From Friends Group

By Carol Vaughn

A group with a tradition of bidding together on Chincoteague ponies at the annual Pony Auction recently helped paint the carousel horses at the Chincoteague carnival grounds.

The Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company invited members of the Chincoteague Legacy Group to help freshen up the paint on the carousel horses, according to legacy group member Steffie Rau, of Bethlehem, Pa.

CVFC spokesperson Denise Bowden said it has been more than 40 years since the carousel horses were last painted.

“We were absolutely thrilled that they took on this task,” Bowden said, adding, “The CLG ladies and gentlemen have always been huge supporters of the fire company and we appreciate their efforts in breathing new life into this carousel. I’m so anxious to see which pony will be the most popular one that kids will want to get on; I’m sure Riptide will be at the top of the list!”

The legacy group got its start around seven years ago.

“Back in 2015 a few of us said we wished we had enough money to bid on a pony at auction. A woman by the name of Yvonne Shaw from North Carolina offered to gather the money we all sent to her to use to bid on a pony. We won the bid with $25,000 on our first Chincoteague Legacy Group pony, CLG Surfer’s Blue Moon,” Rau wrote in an email to the Post.

“Since then we have become a strong friendly group and continue the tradition of chipping in and the group administrators do the rest,” said Rau, one of the original members.

In the past, any leftover money was donated to the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company and to the Feather Fund, a nonprofit organization that assists children with purchasing a Chincoteague pony at the auction.

Rau, a frequent visitor to Chincoteague, where her sister and brother-in-law own a home, said she does not have an art background but wanted to help with the painting project.

“I paint rocks and leave them on trails and did a couple acrylic paintings at my local senior center,” she said.

Some of the other members are artists who sell their work, she said. The carousel horses are painted to match some of the favorite Chincoteague ponies that live on Assateague.

The project took a weekend to complete, with another day or so scheduled for touch-up work.

dents in the audience, saying, "That is your constituents."

"Every single one who has spoken either before the planning commission or before the board of supervisors has expressed his or her opposition to this project," Berger said.

He noted "well over 600" Captains Cove property owners recorded their opposition to the project.

"Such an overwhelming number of taxpayers and citizen voters should not be arbitrarily or summarily dismissed by their representatives," he said.

Carol Gardner said the plan to use the main road in and out of Captains Cove to access the development is a concern.

"This is a private, deeded road and it is paid for by the residents of the community. None of the developers own that road," she said, adding, "... Unfortunately, these same developers are on the board of directors for the Cove, which creates a clear conflict of interest and a dubious representation of the Cove community."

Gardner said residents have hired an attorney "to intervene just in case this project gets approval. We can't just stand by and let the developers claim our assets. ... Like you, we work very hard for our money, so it's impossible to watch the potential for our dues to be utilized on a rental housing project that will in essence be funded by our community funds."

Supervisor Ron Wolff, whose district includes Captains Cove, made both motions for approval.

"The planning commission has vetted this entire project, the process that surrounds it. It has met the approval of our county attorney and of you (speaking to Rich Morrison, deputy county administrator of planning and community development) ... that it does meet all of the conditions that are set forth in our ordinances as far as you know," Wolff said, asking Morrison for confirmation, which Morrison gave.

The Accomack County Planning Commission in two 6-3 votes in March recommended approval of conditional rezoning of the property from residential to village development and of the conditional use permit, including 13 conditions.

The board's vote to approve the conditional use permit included waivers to required setbacks for each of the 140 townhouse lots; approval of one access to a private street, provided that there is also one direct access to State Line Road; and allowing the development to be served by private roads.

The county received letters from NASA and the Navy about the need for housing in the area, according to Morrison.

He said the planning commission listened to residents opposed to the development, noting two conditions included in the conditional use permit reflect a response to citizens' concerns.

One condition is that no building permits are to be issued until the entrances on Captains Corridor are deemed to be lawfully established after review and approval by the county administrator in consultation with the county attorney.

"The developer is going to have to prove to the county that they have the right to use this road," Morrison said.

Another condition says that, in the event Aqua, the utility that provides water and sewer service to Captains Cove, refuses to provide or is unable or precluded from providing water and sewer service to the townhouse development, the conditional use permit shall be null and void.

Mark Baumgartner, the applicant's attorney, said the development fits the requirements of the village development zoning district. "Putting this project where it is under the village development area makes all the sense in the world," he said.

"I want to talk first about why this development is good for the Shore," Baumgartner said, citing the need for multifamily housing in the county.

Baumgartner said most of the comments from speakers at the hearing "concerned private rights. ... This board doesn't grant private rights and it doesn't take away private rights. ... That's in another forum."

He said legal documents related to Captains Cove are "complicated" and were misconstrued by commenters.

Shore Housing Needs Assessment, Part I: Identifying the Gaps

By Carol Vaughn

The Eastern Shore has just over 29,000 housing units, according to the 2020 U.S. Census.

Accomack has around 4,500 renter-occupied homes and Northampton has around 1,800, according to the recently released Eastern Shore Housing Study.

The study's purpose is to provide government, developers, and the community "with a meaningful sense of the bi-county housing market in order to formulate affordable housing priorities and detail actions for the foreseeable future," according to the introduction.

The 259-page plan was released in March.

"This plan came out of the regional housing summit in 2019," said Russ Williams, director of housing services for the Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission.

Williams presented the study to the Accomack County Board of Supervisors Wednesday.

A-NPDC was tasked with doing what at the time was called a needs assessment for housing on the Shore.

The A-NPDC selected consultants to develop the plan, on which work began in July 2021.

The work, in addition to physical and statistical analyses, included four public open house events last fall, as well as surveys of residents, landlords, and businesses.

Additionally, "windshield surveys," in which consultants drove through neighborhoods to do a visual assessment of housing conditions, were conducted in Exmore, Nassawadox, Treherneville, Onancock-Bayside, and Atlantic-Wishart Point Road.

"This is the first regional housing study or plan that has been produced since 2002, so it was sorely needed," Williams said.

The study shows low-income rental households "are experiencing excessive housing costs," Williams said.

It suggests multifamily housing may be the most cost-effective way to meet the demand for affordable housing, due primarily to the large increase in building costs, according to Williams.

The study also projects growth in housing demand on the Shore over the next 10 to 20 years and makes detailed recommendations for housing development.

Chapter 6 of the study includes a housing gap analysis.

Williams said the figure of 1,000 additional housing units being needed, as was said during an affordable housing forum earlier this month, is a conservative estimate and the figure is per county, not for the whole region.

Housing is defined as affordable when a household is paying no more than 30% of its income for all housing costs, including mortgage, taxes, insurance, and utilities, according to the study.

In 2019, 24% of Accomack households and 27.1% of Northampton households were considered cost burdened, meaning they spent more than 30% of their income on housing.

The rates were higher for renters.

In Accomack, 36.1% of renters were cost burdened, compared to 18.3% of homeowners. In Northampton, 34% of renters were cost burdened, compared to 23.4% of homeowners.

The study found the housing gap — the number of additional housing units needed for the housing inventory to match the number of households in the corresponding affordability and income level — among renters in Accomack is greatest in both the highest and the lowest income brackets.

In contrast, Northampton has an overall shortage of affordable, available housing for both renters and homeowners in all income categories.

Read more about the housing study in next week's Eastern Shore Post.

Accomack School Board Approves COVID-19 Plan for 2022-2023 School Year

By Stefanie Jackson

The Accomack school board unanimously approved the updated Return To Learn COVID-19 mitigation plan for the 2022-2023 school year as presented by Assistant Superintendent Rhonda Hall Tuesday night.

She called it the “return to normal – as normal as possible plan,” acknowledging that some COVID-19 measures will remain, but mostly instruction will occur as it did before the pandemic.

Hall highlighted practices that will return to schools, such as using lockers in middle and high school, holding small-group instruction for reading and math in elementary school, and taking field trips.

Parents will be allowed in school buildings without an appointment; for example, they may walk their children into school in the mornings.

Ceremonies and programs will be held normally, although Hall noted this spring’s elementary and middle school graduations likely will be ticketed events.

COVID-19 community levels will continue to be tracked, but there will be no more contact tracing except in the case of an outbreak of COVID-19, said Coordinator of Student Health Services Tonya Martin.

Schools will continue the practice of sending a letter of notification to parents if there is a case of COVID-19 in their child’s class, Hall said.

Certain health and safety measures will continue, such as spraying down buses and classrooms with sanitizer. However, neither wearing face masks nor maintaining 3 feet of social distance will be required, she said.

There is one exception to the face mask policy: if a student tests positive for COVID-19, the student must stay home for five days, and for the first five days upon returning to school, the student must wear a mask.

If the student’s parent does not want the student to wear a mask, the parent can opt to keep the student home for the whole 10-day period.

Hall reported that after the school mask mandate was first lifted (in mid-February, after Gov. Glenn Youngkin signed into law a bill allowing parents to exempt their children from school mask mandates), about 85% of Accomack students voluntarily wore masks in school. After about a month, that number began to dwindle.

She reported no bullying had occurred due to any student wearing or not wearing a mask.

Health Update

Martin reported Accomack’s COVID-19 community level is low, according to the Virginia Department of Health.

As of May 17, Accomack had four new cases of COVID-19 and a seven-day average of five cases per day.

Cases of COVID-19 in Accomack schools included two teachers, two staff members, and 16 students.

Martin said there has been an uptick in COVID-19 cases but transmission remains low.

Bus Transportation

The updated Return To Learn plan includes the school day starting and ending times for next year:

Elementary students will arrive at school at 8:30 a.m., with the instructional day beginning at 8:45 a.m. and ending at 3:45 p.m.

Middle and high school students will arrive at school between 7:10 a.m. and 7:20 a.m., with the instructional day beginning at 7:30 a.m. and ending at 2:30 p.m.

Transportation Supervisor Paul Brabazon noted the differing schedules will enable bus drivers to do tiered runs again next year, which helps the school division address the bus driver shortage by reducing the number of drivers needed.

VDH VIRGINIA DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

TO THE RESIDENTS OF THE TOWN OF ACCOMAC:

The Town of Accomac is having a Spring clean-up on May 23rd 2022

All items must be at curbside by Sunday, May 22nd
Items will be picked up on Monday, May 23rd

- Davis Disposal will take most items that can be reasonably handled by two (2) people
- Items should be boxed or bagged if possible
- Limbs and green waste should be bagged or bundled and not to exceed 4 feet in length or weight of 25 pounds
- No free liquids such as paints, solvents, fuels or any other material deemed hazardous
- Each household is limited to 4 cubic yards of material placed at curbside

Please place materials in a neat group like manner at the curb.

This is limited to properties that are within the town limits only.

The term “tiered run” refers to a bus driver making two separate trips every morning (and afternoon) to transport students who start their school days at different times, allowing both groups of students to arrive at school on time.

A “double run” refers to a bus driver making two trips every morning to a school or schools on the same schedule, often resulting in some students arriving early and others arriving late.

Tiered runs nearly eliminate the need for substitute bus drivers because the substitutes are “built in,” Brabazon said. Middle and high school bus drivers can help out elementary school bus drivers and vice versa.

The Accomack schools transportation department is in “excellent shape” compared to elsewhere in the region such as Newport News, Chesapeake, Portsmouth, and Hampton, each of which has a shortage of more than 100 bus drivers, Brabazon said.

Every school bus driver in those localities is already doing two or three tiered runs per day, and some of the students don’t get home until 6 p.m. All Accomack students who ride the school bus are home by about 4:45 p.m., he said.

Bus driver shortages in other localities negatively impact Accomack when those schools can’t send their students to the Eastern Shore for athletic competitions and Accomack school buses have to make extra trips across the Chesapeake Bay so the students can compete, he noted.

Finance Director Beth Onley said Accomack has 45 bus drivers who do daily tiered runs, and Brabazon added that 23 additional drivers would be needed if the school division returned to the single-run busing system.

Those 45 bus drivers earn higher base pay for the tiered runs, which also increases their retirement benefits, Onley said.

Brabazon said the tiered runs enable school bus drivers to earn good, living wages.

The tiered runs also mean fewer school buses are needed in the fleet, so the buses can be put on a 45-day inspection rotation instead of being inspected every 180 days.

This saves money because parts like tires and brakes can be changed much closer to the actual end of their useful life instead of being changed early to pass the next inspection that’s not due until months later. In the first year of the tiered bus runs, the school division saved about $100,000 in parts, Onley said.

Juneteenth and Summer Work Week

Superintendent Chris Holland proposed Accomack schools should observe the Juneteenth state holiday this year on Friday, June 17, instead of Monday, June 20, which will be the first day of summer school. The school board unanimously approved that proposal.

However, his proposal for 12-month employees to work four 10-hour days every week this summer instead of five eight-hour days did not escape scrutiny.

Holland said he wanted to show employees appreciation for their hard work and noted the proposal will save money since the HVAC and other systems will be running one less day a week.

School board members Edward Taylor and Janet Turner objected to the proposal because, according to their understanding of the proposal as written, each 10-hour day included 9 hours and 20 minutes of actual work time, resulting in a work week of about 37 hours, not 40 hours.

Over the course of a summer, that adds up to about $71,000 paid for time in which employees were not actually working, Taylor estimated.

“This is taxpayer money, and we can’t just give people off because they’re nice or they’ve worked hard at prom,” Turner said.

Holland’s proposal included daily work hours of 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; both Turner and Taylor suggested changing the start time to 7 a.m. to get each employee’s actual hours worked closer to 40 hours a week.

A motion was made and seconded for 12-month employees to work 10 hours a day, four days a week over the summer; details about the breakdown of the work day were not provided in the motion.

The motion passed, with Taylor and Turner abstaining.

About 133 employees will be impacted, and the four-day work weeks will run from June 20 to Aug. 18.

ACCOMACK APPROVES TOURISM GRANTS

By Carol Vaughn

The Accomack County Board of Supervisors Wednesday approved a plan to spend on tourism $260,000 in federal funds received as result of the American Rescue Plan Act.

The funds come to Accomack County through the Virginia Tourism Corporation and must be used for tourism marketing and development.

The program required that the county work with its three destination marketing organizations — the Chincoteague Chamber of Commerce, the town of Onancock, and the Eastern Shore of Virginia Tourism Commission — to come up with a plan to spend the money.

Half of the money will be made available once the county's plan is approved, according to the Virginia Tourism Corporation website.

The remaining money will be disbursed once the VTC receives adequate documentation of payments for items.

There is no local match requirement.

Robert Sabbatini, executive director of the Eastern Shore of Virginia Chamber of Commerce and the Tourism Commission, presented the plan for spending the funds to the board of supervisors.

"I am please to inform you all that everyone I met with is happy," about the plan, he said, calling the plan a model for other localities.

Under the plan as approved, the Chincoteague chamber will receive $80,000; Onancock will receive $50,000; and the Eastern Shore of Virginia Chamber of Commerce will receive $130,000. The ESVA chamber will work with towns without their own destination marketing organization.

The planned expenditure of the ESVA chamber's allocation is:

- ESVA Tourism Commission - $60,000
- Wachapreague - $15,000
- Onley - $10,000
- Saxis - $10,000
- Keller - $10,000
- Parksley - $10,000
- Tangier - $7,500
- Belle Haven - $7,500

Chincoteague plans to rebuild its website, install a digital outdoor kiosk, host an Instagram blogger who will produce a video and photographs, add to the chamber's photograph and video library, and pay for marketing campaigns with two television stations.

Onancock plans to use its allocation to invest in projects to enhance tourism, including a welcome center, an interactive phone application, and printed materials.

The ESVA Tourism Commission plans to use its allocation to explore and lock in a national exposure initiative, such as a travel channel or national magazine, for the Shore.

Additionally, it wants to expand its outreach to Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Tennessee, and southwest Virginia.

Of the towns that detailed plans for the funds, Wachapreague officials wrote that they would like to increase marketing to major metropolitan areas, whose residents typically drive past the Route 180 intersection with Route 13.

Parksley officials wrote that they will use the funds to promote the town's major events, including its "Old Fashioned Christmas" and at least one summer event, along with making minor upgrades to restrooms.

The town plans to unveil a LOVE works sign once a new stage being built in the center of town is completed.

Keller's goals include developing a website and a town brand, logo, and slogan that build on Keller's history, including the Keller Fair, railroad depot, and other history.

Additionally, Keller officials want to develop a "take pride in your community" campaign to improve the town's appearance.

Saxis plans to use funding to possibly create a pamphlet and further develop the town website that will continue to inform tourists about amenities and businesses in town, including the free fishing pier, public restrooms, a pavilion, free boat launch, public beach, museum, vacation rentals, and restaurants, among other amenities.

Onley officials wrote that the town has a rich railroad history, including a restored train station and museum; more than 80 retail businesses, including the Shore's only Walmart; an array of restaurants; a YMCA; the Onley Recreation Association; a women's club; McMath Park, which has a playground, barbecue grills, and a gazebo; and diverse churches.

Additionally, the Eastern Shore Rail Trail will go through Onley.

Tangier wants to develop a rack card and promote its museum.

Belle Haven plans to use the funds to refurbish the marquee and display cases at the historic Idle Hour Theater, with plans to advertise town meetings, announcements, and other community activities.

In addition to this award, the Virginia Tourism Corporation awarded more than $2.7 million for 259 local and regional tourism marketing programs, including in Chincoteague, which received $20,000 for a multi-platform digital marketing strategy focused on Hampton Roads, Richmond, and northern Virginia.

“Concentrated efforts to promote events and offerings to folks within a 4-5 hour drive makes sense in today’s world of high gas prices,” said Evelyn Shotwell, executive director of the Chincoteague Chamber of Commerce. “Nature’s bounty and small town charm are just a short drive away, but miles away from ordinary.”

Northampton Supervisors Remove Tourist Cottages From Zoning Code

By Stefanie Jackson

Northampton supervisors not only have denied a special-use permit to build tourist cottages in lower Northampton County but have now entirely removed the term and use from the county zoning ordinance.

Angelo Manuel, long-time employee of local real estate broker Bill Parr, had applied to build six tourist cottages on farmland near Kiptopeke State Park, but the application caused a controversy related to housing density, leading county supervisors to deny the application in March.

The county zoning ordinance was unclear whether or not Northampton’s rules on housing density should apply to tourist cottages, which are not intended for permanent residence.

Northampton’s housing density limit for agricultural-zoned land is one home per 20 acres.

Even though the tourist cottages would have been tiny – 490 square feet each – and they would have been rented out on a seasonal, short-term basis, each was designed with a bedroom, bathroom, and kitchen, qualifying it as a “dwelling unit,” meaning housing density limits should apply, Supervisor John Coker and others had pointed out.

Northampton supervisors proposed the zoning text amendment that would remove

The Eastern Shore of Virginia Tourism Commission also received $20,000 for its project, “On a wing and a beach,” which will promote off-season and low-impact tourism, with a focus on birding, bicycling, and artisans.

The tourism commission also received $7,550 to promote “Stories of the Shore,” which will help connect visitors to the Shore’s people, heritage, and unique attributes.

“These grants will continue to strengthen the Eastern Shore of Virginia, and I am very grateful to the Virginia Tourism Commission,” said Sabbatini, adding, “The Eastern Shore of Virginia’s culture, outdoors, and, most importantly, people will continue to attract visitors from all over and these grants will help make that possible. Our team here at the ESVA Tourism Commission is ready and willing to be a resource for all here on the Shore.”

“tourist cottages” from the ordinance, and the Northampton planning commission held a public hearing on the matter May 3.

The planning commissioners unanimously recommended eliminating the tourist cottage term and use from the zoning ordinance, and no citizen spoke against the recommendation when supervisors held their own public hearing on the matter May 10.

Ken Dufty, of Wardtown, spoke in favor of the recommendation and of preserving agricultural lands.

He noted Northampton has agricultural-forestal districts (which are taxed at a reduced rate as an incentive to use land for farming and open space) “so we don’t become Virginia Beach with the third-highest tax in the nation per capita.”

“Once we lose our (agriculture) and our ag-rural character, we can never get it back,” Dufty said.

He called Northampton County “the most unique piece of real estate east of the Mississippi” and thanked supervisors for the work they do to protect it.

Chair Betsy Mapp motioned to approve the recommendation to remove all references to tourist cottages from Northampton’s zoning ordinance, seconded by Supervisor Oliver Bennett, and it passed unanimously.

U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Offers Safe Boating Tips

Submitted Article

This article continues last week's discussion of vessel grounding.

If, despite one's best efforts, a vessel runs aground, what does a boater do?

First, have everyone put on their life jackets if not already on. Then, if forward motion has stopped, shift to neutral or loosen sheets as applicable.

If you just hit bottom, slow down. Then:

(1) Check for leaks and repair if able. You wouldn't want to free yourself if you are likely to take on water faster.

(2) Raise outboard or sterndrive. This will place more leverage astern. Also, a good time to check the condition of the propeller.

(3) Move passengers to stern or bow as appropriate to lower weight on the grounded portion of the vessel.

(4) Try rocking the boat.

(5) Place the anchor astern and pull off. You might be able to use an oar or boat hook as well or in addition, to move the vessel off the hard.

(6) Call for assistance.

It is a good idea to check your chart and make note of where you grounded or possibly made a mistake on where you thought you were.

I Am a Dental Assistant

"I wanted a career that I could have no matter where I decide to live," says Reyanna Wade, who completed Eastern Shore Community College's dental assisting class last year.

"It may surprise some people," she explained, "but I always loved going to the dentist as a kid. I took the class because I want to help make others have a great experience like I did growing up."

The course is only eight weeks long and is instructed by Dr. Randi Wingate, DDS, of Eastern Shore Rural Health (ESRH). "It's a way to help prepare students for an entry-level dental assisting position," says Dr. Wingate. The course includes eight hours of clinical observation at one of ESRH's dental clinics. "The clinical experience embedded in the course provides students with exposure to a real-world dental setting," Dr. Wingate explained.

Looking back on the class, Reyanna says, "Dr. Wingate was an amazing teacher. She was always happy to answer any questions you had. In the class we went over all the different instruments for different procedures, what they do, and their names. This truly prepares you for the day-to-day of this role."

The class emerged from a partnership between ESRH and ESCC to expand workforce training and employment opportunities within our local community. Scott Hall, ESCC's Workforce Business Solutions Officer, explained that there is a dire shortage of dental assistants on the Shore. "Eastern Shore Rural Health told us about the need, and we said, 'We can help.'"

Dr. Wingate says ESRH has hired several graduates since the course started in 2020. "This has helped to significantly reduce the amount of on-the-job training that is required upon hiring dental assistants without previous experience," she says. "We have also developed additional opportunities for career advancement within the organization."

Reyanna is currently working in the Pungoteague Elementary School Dental Unit. She says, "Once I have enough hours of experience, I would like to take the exam to become a certified Dental Assistant and then go on to becoming an Expanded Function Dental Assistant."

As Reyanna says, dental assisting is a field with job opportunities no matter where you live in the United States. It's an entry-level position that can lead to other credentials and jobs that pay very well.

Dr. Wingate adds, "We are so grateful to ESCC for making this benefit available on the Shore. In just eight weeks you can complete the course and begin working."

"What a 'YES!' for the Shore," says vice president of academics, Dr. Patrick Tompkins. "In all of our programs, we identify what support students need and then match them with available resources. Sometimes folks are just a little afraid to dream. They think they can't have Reyanna's success. But you should give us a call—we can help."

I Am a Student of Psychology

"I had no idea how practical the information I learned in psychology is," says Victoria Thornton who completed the course this semester. "It's helped me better understand others and has empowered me to be a better communicator."

In colleges across the country psychology is one of the most popular majors. ESCC Professor Julie Nash explains, "Psychology is probably the most interesting class you will take because it focuses on you, the individual. You learn about how people function, why they behave like they do."

Dr. Nash poses the question, "Have you ever asked yourself 'why did I just say that?' right after you blurt something out?" Dr. Nash explains that we are often curious about the workings of our mind.

In Dr. Nash's psychology class, students learn about how unconscious motivations affect behavior. This can also lead to greater understanding and self-control. "By discovering how and what we are motivated by," Dr. Nash said, "we can monitor and change our behavior for our own benefit."

Victoria cites the knowledge she gleaned from psychology as an important reason she was able to secure her current position as Assistant Center Manager at Eastern Shore Rural Health (Atlantic Center).

A 2018 graduate of Arcadia High School, Victoria is pursuing a degree in business management at ESCC, but she plans to transfer and to add a minor in psychology because she wants to work in the field of gerontology and serve our aging population.

Victoria says Dr. Nash has had a big influence on her. "This class really helped me focus on my own personality and helped show me what I needed to work on to be successful."

Dr. Nash expanded on her class, saying, "I look at our psychology classes as a method of allowing people more control of their own behavior and the behavior of others. In Principles of Psychology, you will learn several ways to ethically manipulate your environment to your advantage." Skills are taught to lower anxiety, depression and raise overall health.

Through ESCC's Psychology Club, which Dr. Nash sponsors, students put learning into practice through things like field trips and guided mindfulness training. She said, "It helps you become a better person for your family, your co-workers, your friends, strangers, and most of all yourself!"

Vice president of academics, Dr. Patrick Tompkins, noted "Every semester students tell me how Dr. Nash's classes have changed their lives." Dr. Nash was honored this year with the Faculty Award for Professional Excellence.

Dr. Tompkins added, "The developmental psychology course is where you discover how we grow and change over time. The course is about personal growth, which is a huge part of our 'YES!' culture." He concluded, "It's just another way of ESCC saying to you, 'We can help.'"

Report: Eastern Shore Counties Among Least Healthy in Virginia

By Carol Vaughn

Accomack and Northampton counties are ranked among the least healthy counties in Virginia, according to a recently published report.

A group whose mission is to improve the health of Eastern Shore communities reviewed Accomack and Northampton data from the 2022 County Health Rankings, a nationwide report.

"I hope all of you will use the county health rankings and roadmaps as a strategic planning tool," said Eastern Shore Healthy Communities Executive Director Patti Kiger at the May 12 meeting of the organization, which includes representatives from multiple organizations and agencies.

The report was published in late April by the Wisconsin Population Health Institute and may be viewed at <http://www.countyhealthrankings.org/>

It ranks counties using data about the physical environment, social and economic factors, clinical care, and health behaviors of residents, along with data about health outcomes, including length and quality of life.

Accomack ranked in the bottom 25% of Virginia counties for both health factors and health outcomes; Northampton ranked in the bottom 25% for health outcomes, but ranked in the lower middle range of Virginia counties (25%-50%) for health factors.

"That data shows us our challenges and our strengths," Kiger said.

Demographics may account in part for the Shore's low rankings, as both counties have higher proportions of groups that typically have more health problems.

Accomack has 25.2% of the population age 65 or older and Northampton has 28.6%, compared to 16.3% for Virginia as a whole.

Black residents make up 28.5% of Accomack's population and 32.4% of Northampton's, compared to 19.1% of Virginia's total population.

Among concerning statistics are that Accomack and Northampton have higher numbers of people who die prematurely, defined as years of potential life lost before age 75 per 100,000 population.

Accomack's number was 10,200 and Northampton's was 11,600, compared to 6,700 for Virginia as a whole and 5,600 for the top-performing United States counties.

The numbers are higher for Black residents.

In Accomack, the number for Black residents is 13,000, compared to 9,300 for White residents.

In Northampton, the number for Black residents is 14,600, compared to 11,500 for White residents.

Also of concern is that 10% of Accomack births and 9% in Northampton are low birthweight, compared to 8% statewide and 6% for the healthiest U.S. counties.

Those figures also are higher for Black residents than for Whites, at 16% for Black Accomack residents, compared to 7% for White residents and 5% for Hispanic residents, and 13% for Black Northampton residents, compared to 7% for White residents. Figures for Hispanic residents of Northampton were not in the report.

Life expectancy is more than five years longer for White people (76.5 years) than for Black people (72) in Accomack and six years longer for White people (76.5) than Black people (70.5) in Northampton.

"The disparity between the races is profound," Kiger said.

The report also gives data for behaviors that are health factors, which are self-reported.

In Accomack, 21% of adults smoke; 20% in Northampton smoke, compared to 14% in Virginia.

Accomack has an adult obesity rate of 40% and Northampton has a rate of 39%, compared to 32% in Virginia.

In Accomack, 34% of residents are physically inactive, compared to 25% in Virginia. The figure is 33% for Northampton.

The rate of sexually transmitted infections (defined as the number of newly diagnosed chlamydia cases per 100,000 population) in both counties is significantly higher than the statewide rate, at 717.9 for Accomack and 674.6 for Northampton, compared to 564.3 for Virginia as a whole and 161.8 for the healthiest U.S. counties.

Accomack has a teen birth rate (defined as the number of births per 1,000 female population ages 15-19) of 29 and Northampton has a rate of 32, around double Virginia's rate of 15 and nearly triple the rate of 11 for the healthiest U.S. counties.

The teen birth rate for Black Accomack residents is 38, compared to 47 for Hispanics and 18 for Whites.

In Northampton, the teen birth rate for Black residents is 48, compared to 20 for White residents.

One negative behavior where Shore residents' reported rate is lower than the statewide rate is excessive drinking, at 16% for both Accomack and Northampton, compared to 17% in the state. The measure gives the percentage of a county's adult population that reports binge or heavy drinking in the past 30 days.

Of additional health behaviors that are reported but are not factored into the overall rankings, the rate of motor vehicle crash deaths on the Shore is of concern.

The report used data from 2014-2020.

Accomack had a rate of 19 crash deaths per 100,000 population and Northampton had a rate of 25 for the period, compared to a rate of 10 for Virginia as a whole and 9 for the top-performing U.S. counties.

One bright spot in the Shore's health rankings is in the area of clinical care.

"The Eastern Shore may be the only rural area left in Virginia with a hospital," Kiger said, adding that the various health care organizations on the Shore work well together.

Both Accomack (2,963 per 100,000 Medicare enrollees) and Northampton (2,683) have a lower rate than the statewide rate of preventable hospital stays, 3,896.

The ratio of primary care physicians to residents in Northampton is 840 to 1, better than the state ratio of 1,310 to 1. Accomack's ratio is 2,310 to 1.

The ratio of dentists to residents in Northampton is 730 to 1, and in Accomack is 2,150 to 1, compared to the state ratio, 1,390 to 1.

Still, another clinical care factor, the uninsured rate — 15% in Accomack and 13% in Northampton — is higher than the state's 9% rate.

Among social and economic factors that may affect health, the Shore's rankings in education and poverty lag behind the state.

"Of all our factors, these social and economic factors give us the greatest challenge," Kiger said.

In Accomack, 82% of adults completed high school and 45% have some college. In Northampton, 85% of adults completed high school and 54% have some college. That compares to 90% completing high school statewide and 72% having some college.

The percentage of Shore children living in poverty, 24% in Accomack and 27% in Northampton, also is significantly higher than the statewide percentage, 12%.

In both Accomack and Northampton, 36% of children live in single-parent households, compared to 24% statewide.

Accomack has 10% of youth ages 16 to 19 who are neither in school nor working, double the state percentage. No figure for Northampton was reported.

In a measure of school funding adequacy — defined as the average gap in dollars between actual spending and the estimated spending required per pupil to achieve U.S. average test scores — Accomack is minus $7,389 and Northampton is minus $7,895, compared to the state's minus $186.

According to the report, the living wage (defined as the hourly wage needed to cover basic household expenses plus taxes for a household of one adult and two children) in Accomack should be $33.07 per hour and in Northampton should be $34.96, compared to the state rate, $41.81.

"If we can focus, our county boards of supervisors and the people who recruit new businesses into the area can focus in on bringing employers who can pay at least a living wage or higher, the cascading effect of that will be more people can pay taxes, which would then feed into adequate school funding. Better schools then might engage our youth," Kiger said.

Kiger noted ESHC in July will begin a year-long planning process for its 2024-2026 plan for well-being for the Eastern Shore.

"We have mountains to climb. This is a marathon, not a sprint," she said.

Virginia Rankings and New Measures

In Virginia as a whole, Falls Church ranked as the healthiest locality and Petersburg ranked as the least healthy, according to a press release from the Virginia Department of Health.

The 2022 report focused on the importance of economic security for communities, especially as they recover from the COVID-19 pandemic. As a result, several new measures were introduced in the 2022 report, according to the release.

One is child care cost burden, which can pose a threat to economic security for families. In Virginia localities, it ranges from 14 to 36 percent. The typical cost burden of child care among counties nationwide is about 25 percent of household income, higher than the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' benchmark of 7 percent, according to the release.

Another new health measure is COVID-19 deaths, taken from 2020 data.

Virginia's rate, 56 deaths per 100,000 people, was lower than the national rate of 85 per 100,000. Only 79% (103) of Virginia localities were included in the measure; 26% of those exceeded the national average.

An additional new measure was the average number of mentally unhealthy days people reported in the past 30 days. Virginians overall reported 4.2 days, slightly better than the national average of 4.5 days. Virginia counties ranged from 3.3 to 5.8 days.

"The results of the study make it clear that health disparities and inequities occur, not only between regions of the commonwealth, but also within localities, even the wealthy ones," said State Health Commissioner Dr. Colin M. Greene.

Greene added, "While change in health-influencing factors takes time, the Virginia Department of Health is committed to supporting its local health departments and focusing on improving the health and well-being of all people in Virginia. We will be taking an analytical, evidence-based look at all of these factors, and incorporating them into the next state health improvement plan, Virginia's Plan for Well-Being, with the intent of improving measurable health outcomes that truly matter to Virginians."

Kiger noted that the health rankings do not include measures of how trauma affects health.

"We have a goal of having as many organizations (as possible) on the Eastern Shore become trauma-informed organizations," she said, adding that a trauma-informed community is one "that has much more empathy for some of the problems that people suffer — behavioral health issues, mental health issues — as a result of having had an experience or multiple experiences that impacted them negatively in a way that it had impacted their lives."

Kiger said around 80% of the population has had multiple traumas in their lives.

Eastern Shore Community College and the Nurse-Family Partnership on the Shore both are trauma-informed organizations, she said.

The county health rankings data is a good tool for localities and organizations to use for planning, according to Kiger.

"It is not a picture of doom and gloom. I am so pleased at the strengths that we have, but we still have that cycle of childhood poverty, family poverty, education systems needing help, jobs not in the area that pay a living wage. That's the cycle that we need to break and that we need to address as a coalition," she said.

Accomack Authorizes Hangar Construction

By Carol Vaughn

The Accomack County Board of Supervisors Wednesday authorized County Administrator Mike Mason to enter into agreements needed for construction of a hangar at the Accomack County Airport in Melfa.

The Virginia General Assembly in 2020 budgeted $2 million to build a commercial hangar at the airport, with $1 million financed through bonds.

The funds are to be received by the Virginia Commercial Space Flight Authority (Virginia Space), which will be responsible for the design and construction.

Once it is completed, Accomack will assume ownership and will operate and maintain the hangar.

For the project to move forward, three documents are required: an agreement for construction and operation of the hangar between Accomack County and Virginia Space; a facilities agreement between the Virginia Public Building Authority (the bond issuer), Virginia Space, and the county, stating the responsibilities of all parties; and a certificate of managing agent, by which the county accepts certain responsibilities and risks associated with the project.

According to the county attorney, Accomack assumes some risk in signing the agreements, in particular in that Virginia Space will not be accountable for negligence, design errors, poor workmanship, or defective materials. The county would assume responsibility for costs exceeding the $2 million budget, but payment of those costs is subject to appropriation by the board.

Hazard Mitigation Plan Approved

The board approved the section pertaining to Accomack County in the 2021 update of the Eastern Shore of Virginia Hazard Mitigation Plan. The regional plan profiles both Shore counties and 18 towns.

Localities are required to formally adopt the plan every five years to be eligible for certain types of federal grants, including FEMA assistance.

The plan has been approved by FEMA, according to the agenda item.

Enterprise Zone Additions

The board approved adding to the county's enterprise zone the Virginia Commercial Space Flight property, 29 acres on the road leading to Wallops Island, where a rocket manufacturing facility is planned, along with another parcel, 15 acres on Lankford Highway owned by Jeffrey R. Matthews.

The action leaves around 380 acres available for future expansion.

OBITUARIES

C. Raymond Charnock Sr.

Captain Charles Raymond Charnock Sr., 85, saw his pilot's face as he "crost the bar" to be reunited with his late wife, Janice Parks Charnock, on Sunday, May 8, 2022. A lifelong resident of Tangier Island, Raymond was born Nov. 24, 1936, to Charles Newman "Charlie" Charnock and Maggie Spence Charnock.

Like all true heroes, Raymond was as noble and kind as they come. Following high school, he served his country in the U.S. Army, returning home to Tangier upon honorable discharge. As a tugboat captain for Stewart Transportation and Vane Brothers for more than 36 years, Raymond was a well-respected, "old school" waterman who could captain a tug like no other and never needed the latest and greatest navigation tools to find his way. He was a longtime member of Central Lodge No. 300 AF & AM and a member of Swain Memorial United Methodist Church. Raymond's smile and selfless generosity warmed the hearts of each life he touched and those who knew and loved him will be forever grateful to have shared this life with him.

He is survived by his children, Charlene Crockett and her husband, Jamie, Lisa Langley and her husband, Andy, and Raymond Charnock and his wife, Beth, all of Tangier; sister, Mildred Slusser, of Richmond; grandchildren: Nicole Wheatley, Marissa McCready, Jennie Langley, Beth Crockett (Shane), Drew Langley, and Anthony and John Charnock; great-grandchildren, Addison and Cayson Wheatley, Sullivan McCready, and Trypp, James, Ryan, Kate, Liam, and Neil Crockett; as well as several nieces and nephews; and countless friends.

Funeral services will be conducted from the graveside at the Charnock Family Cemetery on Saturday, May 21, 2022, at 2 p.m., with Jerry Frank Pruitt officiating.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Tangier Volunteer Fire Department, c/o Duane Crockett, P.O. Box 239, Tangier, VA 23440, or simply take a page from Raymond's book and help someone in need.

Fannie Eskridge

Mrs. Elsie Farmer "Fannie" Eskridge, of Parksley, died Wednesday, Jan. 19, 2022, at the age of 99. The daughter of the late Clarence Spurgeon Farmer and the late Goldie Clark Farmer, Fannie was born Nov. 21, 1922, and raised near Fredericksburg, Va., with her sisters, Elizabeth and Polly.

Having grown up on a farm in the 1930s, Fannie was no stranger to hard work, independence, and creativity. She attended Sparta High School, where she was a track star and valedictorian. After she moved to Richmond to pursue her nursing career at Sheltering Arms Hospital, Fannie met, and later married, Walter A. Eskridge, to whom she remained a loving and devoted wife until his passing in 2002. When Dr. Eskridge completed his medical training they moved to the Eastern Shore of Virginia, and together they raised their daughters, practiced medicine in Parksley for nearly 40 years, and were active members of the community and their church, Grace United Methodist. Following their retirement, Fannie couldn't resist her calling to help others and continued to do so as an ER volunteer at the former Northampton-Accomack Memorial Hospital. A natural athlete, Fannie was a regular at the YMCA in Onley, where she was a great support and inspiration to many. She remained dedicated to her church, where over the years she assisted with preparing suppers and organizing the annual bazaar, served as the superintendent of Sunday school, and was a member of the United Methodist Women.

Mrs. Eskridge

A force to be reckoned with, Fannie always strived for excellence and accepted nothing less. She will be dearly missed and forever celebrated for the loving, caring, and wonderful human being she was to so many.

Fannie, known as "E" to her loved ones, is survived by her daughters, Bonnie Reid (Jim), of Richmond and Nancy Eskridge (Rob), of Oceanview, Del.; grandsons, Matthew Reid (Laura) and Daniel Reid (Jennifer); great-grandchildren, Bennett, Matalyn, Natalie, and Julia; and several nieces and nephews. She is also survived by her dear friend, Dottie Smith, as well as her devoted caregiver, Laquanda Godwin, both of whom brought great joy and light to her life.

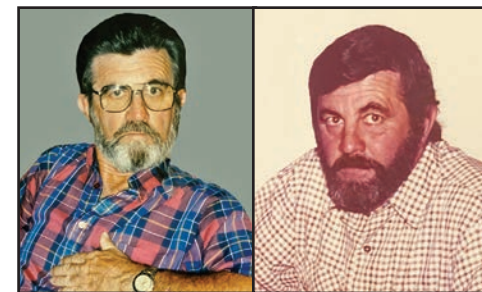

A service in celebration of Fannie's life will be held at the Grace United Methodist Church on Saturday, May 28, 2022, at 1 p.m., with the Rev. Jae-Haeng Choi and the Rev. Don Jamison officiating.

In lieu of flowers, contributions in Fannie's memory may be made to the American Heart Association, 4217 Park Place Court, Glen Allen, VA 23060-9979 (www.donatenow.heart.org/).

Shore Artifacts Featured at Newly Expanded Virginia Museum of History & Culture

By Martha Wessells Steger
Special to the Eastern Shore Post

The newly expanded Virginia Museum of History & Culture, next to the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond's Museum District, sheds a broader light on coastal Virginia and on other regions of the commonwealth, including Virginia's Eastern Shore.

When museums expand, they have an opportunity to do more than simply increase space – and the VMHC has done that, with the addition of almost 50% more exhibition space. Going far beyond that is the complete transformation of the VMHC with a $30 million renovation, the most extensive in its nearly 200-year history.

In reimagining two-thirds of its nearly 250,000-square-foot building, the VMHC has added multiple new exhibitions and galleries. “Our Commonwealth,” a marquee long-term exhibition, is the centerpiece of the museum’s new offerings. It provides an in-depth, multi-sensory exploration of the five major regions of Virginia – Coastal Plain/Tidewater, Piedmont, Blue Ridge Mountains, Valley and Ridge, and Appalachian Plateau. (For a graphic representation of the regions, check out www.virginiahistory.org)

Each region features stories and artifacts from partner organizations and cultural institutions within that region — a unique approach to exhibition development. Our Commonwealth takes visitors on memorable and scenic journeys with vibrant murals — large-scale, changing digital projections — and custom soundscapes that immerse them in the arts, culture, food, music, industry, and people of each region.

Tidewater and the Eastern Shore

In the Tidewater gallery, the geographical term tidewater is graphically illustrated in subsections referring to “Working on the Water”; “Going to the Beach, Oceanfront and Tributary Rivers”; “Building Boats”; “Launching the Fleet”; “Shipping Through Ports”; “Honoring Landmarks”; “Governing the People”; and “Making Music.”

Among the gallery’s exhibits, items on loan from the Eastern Shore Historical Society help tell the story not only of the Eastern Shore but of the entire region. Included are a 2016 mallard drake decoy by Grayson Chesser and a scaup or bluebill hen decoy by Miles Hancock (1887-1974). A log canoe model, also from ESVHS, and a deadrise — the traditional work boat for watermen — illustrate the types of boats used for fishing and oystering until dredging became the norm.

In the cabinet with a U.S. Navy working uniform are, from ESVHS, a “full-dress cocked hat” (Jacob Reed’s sons) and a “white dress cap” (Sze Tailor) along with an 1880s “spyglass or telescope” from William Waters, of Nandua. The detail under the telescope explains that Waters lent his father’s spyglass to the U.S. Navy during World War I; after the war, the Navy returned it to him with a letter of appreciation.

This is all part of an exciting mix of long-term and changing exhibitions plus other amenities: a two-story entrance atrium, an immersive orientation theater, an entirely new research theater, several community and gathering spaces; a new campus connector between the VMHC and the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts; enhanced green space; and a new cafe and museum store.

Upcoming Exhibitions, Film Presentation

In conjunction with its reopening, the Virginia Museum of History & Culture will debut multiple new exhibitions and galleries. These include “American Democracy: A Great Leap of Faith,” a Smithsonian-organized exhibit that will dynamically bring the great American experiment of democracy to life; “Treasures of Virginia,” featuring objects associated with Virginians who, through extraordinary leadership and creativity, have worked to shape the future of both our state and our nation; “Commonwealth Explorers,” a new interactive learning space for the museum’s youngest guests; and “History Matters,” an introductory exhibition that speaks to the ways history connects us all.

The new Lettie Pate Evans Orientation Theater screens “Imagine Virginia,” a 17-minute film highlighting indelible moments and scenes in Virginia history – natural and human — and serving as an introduction to the reimagined museum. Using voices, imagery, music, sound design, and theatrical effects, “Imagine Virginia” explores the natural and socioeconomic forces that converged in Virginia, shaping the commonwealth’s history and culture.

The “History Matters” gallery will feature selections from VMHC’s vast collection of 9 million items, inspiring visitors to seek a deeper understanding of the transformative power of history through several themes, including how history helps us discover ourselves and connect with our communities; how it motivates us to explore and be creative; and how it inspires our future by helping us to understand our past.

Artifacts in the installation include sneakers worn by Rainbow Minute radio show co-host Judd Proctor at his wedding to co-host Brian Burns in 2006, an early 1900s child banjo from Carroll County, a rare portrait of Meriwether Lewis, a shovel used on Admiral Richard Byrd’s exploration of the South Pole, original photographs of Civil War soldiers, and a terra-cotta bowl made by Pamunkey Indian artist Mary Bradby.

Eastern Shore Rural Health Honored at National Conference for Agricultural Worker Health

By Amy G. Bull, director of communications and development

Eastern Shore Rural Health System Inc. was honored at the Conference for Agricultural Worker Health on May 2, in Denver. The Conference for Agricultural Worker Health, sponsored by the National Association of Community Health Centers, is the only annual conference dedicated solely to the health and well-being of America's migratory and seasonal agricultural workers and their families. Rural Health was honored for outstanding contributions in migrant health. The awards this year hold special significance as migrant and community health centers join to celebrate the 60th anniversary of the migrant health program.

"We take pride in recognizing colleagues who have done so much on behalf of our migrant and seasonal agricultural workers," said Rachel Gonzales-Hanson, interim president and CEO of the NACHC. "Each in their own way has shown what it takes to make healthcare meaningful and responsive for this vital part of the nation's workforce under extraordinary challenges. These honorees have lifted barriers to care and advanced equity during an unprecedented global pandemic. We celebrate their service, courage, and contributions to the Community Health Center Movement."

Eastern Shore Rural Health was among a group of migrant health leaders and organizations receiving awards at the national conference. Rural Health received the 2022 Outstanding Migrant Health Center award.

Community and Migrant Health Centers serve approximately 22 percent (nearly one million) of agricultural workers and their families currently living in the U.S. Throughout the pandemic, health centers have responded to the health needs of the nation's essential agricultural workers who harvest the food on our table and who have suffered disproportionately higher rates of infection and death from the COVID-19 virus.

About National Association of Community Health Centers

Established in 1971, the National Association of Community Health Centers (NACHC) serves as the leading national voice for America's Health Centers and as an advocate for health care access for the medically underserved and uninsured.

The Osprey-Eyed Reader Contest

Last Week's Runners-Up

Altogether now: "Aw, how adorable!" Marion Robinson, of Chincoteague, explains that this beautiful photograph is of "baby Eli and his bear."

Last Week's Contest and Winner

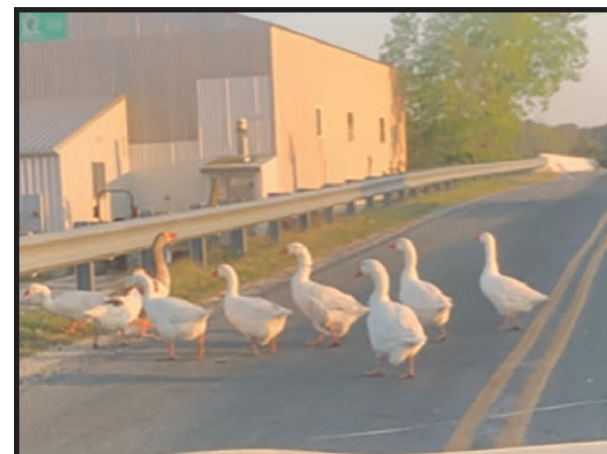

Last week, 82 players became certified contestants, finding the mother ducks on pages 25, 26, 28, 34, 35, 37, 39, and 54. The good news is that we had many first-time players. The bad news is that several players didn't make contestant status and found mother ducks on pages where such creatures didn't exist, at least to the best of our knowledge. Long-time player Mitzi Paul, of Wachapreague, came back to play last week after taking several weeks off, and that was fortunate because she was randomly selected to win the $25 gift certificate to Panzotti's Pizza in Onley. Here's Paul riding to victory!

For the Mary E. Wise Sunday School class, Doug and Carol Wehner, of Belle Haven, organized an Eastern Shore Post find-the-ducks scavenger hunt.

Elegant people in an elegant setting. Sarah Ross, of Chincoteague, explained: "This is a pic of my mom, aunt, cousin, and me enjoying afternoon tea at the Channel Bass."

Carolyn Weatherly, of Painter, said these ducks (geese?) were heading for Terry's seafood in Weatherly's hometown of Willis Wharf.

Kim Granger, of Cape Charles, is holding a Mother's Day Brown Dog banana split, but it was hubby, Jim, who ate the ice cream.

Here are Margie D. Young and her great-grandson, Nolan Garcia, of Onancock. Young, who is 82, works at Jaxson's Hardware in Parksley.

First-time player Carlee Vincent, of Wachapreague, showed her diligence by photographing how she circled each mother duck clue.

This Week's Contest: We Have Questions!

The answers to four questions can be found in this week's edition. To become a contestant, answer all the questions correctly and tell us the page number where you found each answer. One qualified contestant will be randomly selected to win a $25 gift certificate to the Blue Crab Bay Company. See sponsor box on this page.

The Questions

1. What did Thomas Grasso want the press to know?
2. Who provides mast stepping and fuel?
3. Where does "SOO" appear?
4. What is destroyed in the Great Machipongo Inlet?

The Rules

1. Answer the four questions and tell us the page on which you found each answer.
2. Entries MUST have first and last names and your town.
3. Send this information to david@easternshorepost.com.
4. Deadline is noon Monday, May 23.
5. No multiple entries.
6. Anyone submitting a photograph must have taken the picture or have permission to use it.

Random Facts About ... Strange Requests for Last Meals

By David Martin

We lost our appetite when we opened our internet tubes this week and out came all sorts of bizarre information about last meals requested by people condemned to be executed. According to a paper written by a Mercer University School of Law, Georgia, faculty member, the practice of last meals predates Christianity. The paper said that, in Ancient Greece, "you had to feed the person who was going to be executed, so that they could cross the River Styx into the underworld, and not come back as a hungry ghost."

Or maybe a last meal is just a courtesy given to someone who is about to die. In some countries, alcohol and cigarettes have been offered as part of a last meal, but those items are usually not allowed in the United States. In fact, some states don't accept special requests for a last meal; the condemned gets what is on the prison menu. Even in those states that do entertain last-meal requests, there are limits such as monetary (maximum of $40 in Florida, $15 in Louisiana and Oklahoma) and locality (foods must be available locally).

Probably the most expensive last meal was ordered in 2005 by Robert Dale Conklin, who was put to death by Georgia for murder. Conklin ordered filet mignon wrapped in bacon; shrimp; loaded baked potato; asparagus with hollandaise sauce; French bread; goat cheese; cantaloupe; and apple pie with ice cream. Although Conklin was thin, he ate everything, cleaning two plates.

Lawrence Russell Brewer, who was executed in Texas in 2011, ordered a similarly extravagant last meal with 20-plus items. Then, when all that food arrived, he refused to touch a bite. Texas responded by disallowing future requests for special last meals. John Whitmire, the state senator who was behind ending the practice of giving last meals, said "If you're fixing to execute someone under the laws of the state because of the hideous crime that someone has committed, I'm not looking to comfort him."

Sometimes it's the smallest thing that can make a last meal disappointing for the condemned. Thomas Grasso, executed in Texas in 1995 before the last-meal ban, ordered mussels, clams, spareribs, cheeseburger, milkshakes (plural), pumpkin pie, and strawberries. But here's the key: Grasso also wanted SpaghettiOs with meatballs served at room temperature. He got everything he wanted ... except regular spaghetti was substituted for the SpaghettiOs. You'd think he'd be grateful for the substitution but, no, Grasso issued a statement before his execution: "I did not get my SpaghettiOs, I got spaghetti. I want the press to know this."

John Wayne Gacy, executed in 1994 for murdering more than 33 people, requested strawberries and then a lot of fried food: shrimp, KFC chicken, and french fries. Gacy had managed three KFC franchises in Waterloo, Iowa.

The average calorie count of a last meal, not including those super-extravagant ones, is 2,756 calories. KFC and other fried chicken meals, along with chicken-fried steak, are among the top main-dish foods ordered in last meals. But the overall, number one most-ordered item is ice cream — comfort food right until the bitter end.

Fishing from the Shore

By Bill Hall

Fishing over the weekend was either surprisingly good or expectedly bad depending on who you spoke to. Tautog season closed Sunday, May 15, and remains closed until July 1. Unfortunately, the run of windy weather prevented a lot of anglers from targeting the tasty structure dweller during the last week of the fishery. As tautog season closed, the black sea bass season opened and anglers hitting the offshore wrecks were rewarded with limit catches.

Upper Shore – The shallows of Tangier Sound are producing a mixture of speckled trout, striped bass, and the occasional red drum. Bobby Graves, fishing aboard Tangier Sound Charters, landed a huge 30-inch speckled trout while fishing near Deal Island. Flounder catches out of Chincoteague were surprisingly good over the weekend when clean water could be located. Action in the surf included whiting, black drum, and striped bass.

Wachapreague – Amanda Manzella, at the Wachapreague Inn, described the last week of fishing as “slow” due the rain and wind. She added that a lot of people canceled their reservations or left early due to the forecast. Always the optimist, she said “this weekend’s weather looks great” and hopes to have a “more positive report next week!”

Captain Lindsay Paul, at Trident Tackle, said there was not much going on for most of last week, but some flounder were landed over the weekend. Paul anticipated a much more productive week with the current run of nice weather.

Lower Shore – Dez Louie, at Oceans East — Eastern Shore, said a lot of anglers had been wondering if the week of nasty weather had pushed the black drum out of the area, but their question was quickly answered when the bite picked up over the weekend and into the start of the work week. Louie said fish ranging from 20 pounds up to citation release size were caught out of Oyster and on Nautilus Shoal. Louie predicts the fish will soon move inside the bay to their usual haunts near buoys 13 and 16.

Red drum catches were still being made along the surf line of Fisherman Island. Flounder fishing should pick up as the waters clear, with the Ditch and the little bridge suggested as potential productive areas. Anglers taking advantage of last week’s opening of black sea bass season were rewarded with limit catches over the offshore wrecks. Small whiting, hickory shad, gray trout, and ribbonfish are being landed on the Kiptopeke State Park pier.

Jeb Brady, at Bailey’s Bait & Tackle in Cape Charles, said the weather did not allow many anglers to get out on the water until Friday of last week. Once anglers were able to get out, reports of drum catches from buoy 13 and Latimore’s Shoal were received, as well as from the waters north off Onancock. Large striped bass and red drum catches were still reported in the barrier island surf by anglers using cut crab for bait.

Sheepshead catches were made around the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel pilings and as a by-catch in the black drum fishery. Lower Shore flounder fishing remained slow due the dirty water. Sand mullet (whiting) have begun to show up in good numbers, with catches coming out of Oyster and off the concrete ships. Elijah Wesels landed an 18.5-inch flounder from the Cape Charles Pier.

Bill Hall was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Salt Water Master Angler Status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year and is a Virginia Press Association award-winning sports columnist.

2022 Shore Fest Golf Tournament Held at Shore Yacht & Country Club

Submitted Story

Seventy-six golfers waited out a 25-minute weather delay and came back to finish their rounds Friday, May 13, at the Eastern Shore Yacht & Country Club in the 2022 Shore Fest Golf Tournament. The event, sponsored by the Eastern Shore of Virginia Chamber of Commerce, provides funds to the Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital Auxiliary for nursing scholarships.

“Harper Matthews and the club did a great job of monitoring the weather and ensuring the safety of the golfers,” said Robert Sabbatini, executive director of the chamber. “The golfers were patient and in good spirits, and maybe the break helped them to recharge their game.”

“The field was the largest ever for the tournament,” Sabbatini said. He added, “It was a very successful tournament thanks to the tremendous support from our sponsors. We are fortunate to have a strong, local business community that really is a treasure for the Eastern Shore.”

Winning the first flight in the tournament with a 56, using a captain’s choice format, was the Coastline Chemical team of Jonathan Sharpley, Eric Breithut, Jim Lohr, and Kyle Vance. Second place with a 59 went to the Full Measure Oyster team composed of Devin Smith, Kyle Bundick, Mike Lewis, and Dustin Skees. The Taylor Bank team finished third with a 60 and included Adam James, Tyler Ames, Josh Taylor, and Jason Hart.

Winning the second flight with a 64 was the foursome of David Doughty, John Jacob, Chad Kellam, and Johnny Carstens. The Williams Funeral Home team placed second with a 68 and included John T. Williams, Keith Williston, Andre Elliott, and Blake Johnson. Riverside Hospital took third with a 68 with Tiffany Bloom, Michael Hatcher, Luis Galvan, and Aaron Gentry.

Forest Flynn Wins Atlantic 10 Pole Vault Championship

By Whitney Metz

Forest Flynn, a Northampton High School graduate and junior at George Mason University, won the Atlantic 10 pole vault championship Saturday, May 7, at the conference championship meet held at Virginia Commonwealth University.

The conditions were terrible, featuring gusting winds, rain, and cold temperatures. Flynn jumped 14'-10", as did three other vaulters, but he took the win because he had no misses at lower heights. Flynn and his teammate Decker Barboeck, consider themselves "mud-ders" and used the poor conditions as a benefit. The two prepared for the tournament throughout the week, practicing outside in the cold and windy conditions.

Flynn has a good track record in bad weather. He won the states his junior year in an all-day downpour, and as a senior won the prestigious Lee Davis Relays during a wicked crosswind that interfered with the other vaulters. Growing up on the Shore, he's learned to handle a little wind and rain.

Since COVID-19 started in 2020, this is the first full indoor and outdoor year that Flynn has completed. Last year, he competed in six meets. This year, Flynn competed in 13 meets both indoors and outdoors. Flynn finished second at the Atlantic 10 Indoor Championship with a jump of 15'-3". He jumped a career best 15'-7.5" at home at the Patriot Games. He also got to jump at some great venues: Virginia Military Institute, James Madison University, the Naval Academy, Boston University, the Colonial Relays at William & Mary, and at North Carolina State for the Raleigh Relays.

"This accomplishment means so much to me," Flynn said. "It's one of my proudest moments. I transferred to George Mason University last year and struggled to find my footings. I knew I was a better athlete than I had showed and I was going to prove it. This year, at the Atlantic 10 indoor conference championship, I placed second. I was happy but knew I could do more. I had struggles and setbacks and a very frustrating outdoor season, so winning the conference championship was a perfect end to a long season."

When asked about his motivation throughout his journey, Flynn stated there were a few things motivating him.

"I would remind myself who I was and where I was from," he said. "I always told myself that it's easy to quit when times get tough, but it takes a fierce spirit to stick through the tough times and I had an incredible support system from my family, friends, and teammates. I think I called my mom and dad several times a day just to talk about my thoughts or relieve stress."

Flynn also had a few words of encouragement for the younger generation of athletes on the Eastern Shore. "I feel like it's common to hear that it's hard to get off the Shore and it's hard to have lots of opportunities because of where we are," he said.

Flynn said, "I know I heard it when I was in high school. I'd like the young athletes to know that you absolutely can get recruited off of the Eastern Shore. It takes a lot of hard work and dedication, but a college education and the opportunity to keep doing what you enjoy at a higher level is worth it. The more important thing is you have to recruit yourself. It won't be like what you see on TV, coaches don't really see the Eastern Shore. You have to send coaches your own stats and videos to get noticed. Recruit yourself!"

DAR Holds Grave Marker Dedication at Gravesite of Commodore Whaley

The Eastern Shore of Virginia Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, recently held a grave marker dedication at the gravesite of Commodore Zedekiah Whaley. The ceremony was held at Scott Hall Cemetery in Onancock. The DAR places grave markers at the gravesites of patriots who fought in the American Revolutionary War in recognition of their role in the fight for America's independence. Commodore Whaley commanded the "Protector," which participated in the last naval battle of the war, the Battle of the Barges. Ironically, the battle took place the day the Treaty of Paris was signed ending the American Revolution. During the battle, which was fought in the Chesapeake Bay between Tangier and Smith islands, Commodore Whaley was fatally wounded, and his body was brought back to Onancock and buried.

Among those invited to the dedication who attended were Del. Rob Bloxom; Accomack Supervisor Ron Wolff; Maj. Gen. Jim Adkins (retired), past president of the Maryland Sons of the American Revolution; Margaret McKenzie, past NSDAR historian general; members of Maryland Sons of the American Revolution and DAR chapters; members the Northampton County DAR Chapter; and members of the Eastern Shore Historical Society.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Scott Hall, home of Elizabeth Lankford.

The National Society Daughters of the American Revolution was founded to preserve the memory and spirit of those who contributed to securing American independence. Any woman 18 years or older, regardless of race, religion, or ethnic background, who can prove lineal descent from a patriot of the American Revolution is eligible for membership.

On Sunday, May 22, Teresa "Tita" deGavre will celebrate the anniversary of her birth in Oxford, England, 108 years ago.

She and her husband, Brigadier General Chet deGavre – renowned airborne pioneer and woodcarver, moved to the Shore 70 years ago when they purchased Deep Creek Plantation at an auction held in front of the bank in Onancock. For the next several years, they lovingly and with painstaking attention to detail, authentically restored this historic home, often opening it and the beautiful grounds for Garden Week.

A true lover of the Shore, Tita has not only placed her home and the hundred acres in the Virginia Eastern Shore Land Trust, but she has also been an active and enthusiastic supporter of the Garden Club of Virginia and the Investment Club. She served on the vestry of the St. James Episcopal Church in Accomac and on the board of the Riverside Hospital Ball Committee, and has been a loyal contributor to numerous charitable organizations.

She will celebrate her special day with her older son, Tim, and his wife, Caroline, who live in Florida — and phone calls from her extended family which includes five grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren — from the West Coast to England.

We wish her health, happiness, and a very joyous Happy Birthday! We love you!

2021 Annual Drinking Water Quality Report
Town of Chincoteague Waterworks
 PWSID 3001175

INTRODUCTION

This Annual Drinking Water Quality Report for calendar year 2021 is designed to inform you about your drinking water quality. Our goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water, and we want you to understand the efforts we make to protect your water supply. The quality of your drinking water must meet state and federal requirements administered by the Virginia Department of Health (VDH).

Este informe contiene información importante acerca de su agua potable. Haga que alguien lo traduzca para usted, o hable con alguien que lo entienda. For information pertaining to how you may participate in decisions regarding your water supply you may contact:

Harvey Spurlock, Public Works Director
 6150 Community Drive, Chincoteague Island, VA 23336 • (757) 336-3366

GENERAL INFORMATION

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or human activity.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

- Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations, and wildlife;
- Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally occurring or result from urban storm-water runoff, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or farming;
- Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture, urban storm-water runoff, and residential uses;
- Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic system;
- Radioactive contaminants, which can be naturally occurring or be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities

Drinking water, including bottled drinking water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, the EPA prescribes regulations which limit the concentrations of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. Food and Drug Administration regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water, which must provide the same protection for public health.

Maximum Contaminant Levels (MCLs) are set at very stringent levels by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. In developing the standards EPA assumes that the average adult drinks 2 liters of water each day throughout a 70-year lifespan. The EPA generally sets MCLs at levels that will result in no adverse health effects for some contaminants or a one-in-ten-thousand to one-in-a-million chance of having the described health effect for other contaminants.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers.

EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by cryptosporidium and other microbiological contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

SOURCE OF YOUR DRINKING WATER AND TREATMENT

The Town of Chincoteague water system receives its water from wells located on the Mainland. These wells have been determined to be groundwater and not under the influence of surface water. Your water is treated with chlorine to ensure water quality.

The Virginia Department of Health conducted a Source Water Assessment of the Waterworks in 2014. The wells were determined to be of low susceptibility to contamination using the criteria developed by the state in its approved Source Water Assessment Program. The assessment report consists of maps showing the Source Water Assessment area, an inventory of known Land Use Activities and Potential Conduits to Groundwater utilized at Land Use Activity sites in Zone 1, Susceptibility Explanation Chart and Definitions of Key terms. The report is available by contacting the waterworks system owner/operator at the phone or address provided above.

PER-AND POLY-FLUOROALKYL SUBSTANCES (PFAS)

PFAS are manmade compounds used extensively in a wide variety of consumer products and are also components of firefighting foams. NASA conducted training with a commonly-used firefighting foam containing PFAS chemicals at a firefighter training area located on the Wallops Main Base, starting in the 1980's. This resulted in PFAS contamination of shallow groundwater in associated areas. NASA, in collaboration with local, state, and federal agencies, is monitoring the facility's groundwater and drinking water wells, along with the Town of Chincoteague's drinking water wells--located on NASA property.

In 2016, the EPA issued updated Lifetime Health Advisory (LHA) level guidelines of 70 parts per trillion for two PFAS compounds, PFOS and PFOA, in drinking water. NASA has been sampling the drinking water for these compounds since 2017.

NASA will continue to monitor drinking water supplies for the Wallops Flight Facility and the Town of Chincoteague. The agency will continue to share all drinking water sampling results with local officials, EPA, Virginia Department of Environmental Quality (VDEQ) and the Virginia Department of Health (VDH), and will provide information to the public.

For past Wallops Information Sheets on PFAS testing, please see: <https://www.nasa.gov/content/information-on-wallops-pfas-testing>. For additional information on PFAS, visit EPA's dedicated website: <https://www.epa.gov/pfas>.

DEFINITIONS

In this report you will find many terms and abbreviations you might not be familiar with. The following definitions are provided to help you better understand these terms:

- Non-detects (ND) – Lab analysis indicates that the contaminant is not present.
- Parts per million (ppm) or milligrams per liter (mg/l) – One part per million corresponds to one minute in 2 years, or a single penny in $10,000.
- Parts per billion (ppb) or micrograms per liter (µg/l) – One part per billion corresponds to one minute in 2,000 years, or a single penny in $10,000,000.
- Parts per trillion (ppt) or nanograms per liter (ng/l) – One ounce out of 31,250 tons.
- Action Level (AL) – The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.
- Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) – The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.
- Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG) – The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.
- Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level (MRDL) – The highest level of a disinfectant allowed in drinking water. There is convincing evidence that addition of a disinfectant is necessary for control of microbial contaminants.
- Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level Goal (MRDLG) – The level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MRDLGs do not reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contaminants.
- Treatment Technique (TT) – A required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.
- Level 1 Assessment – An evaluation to identify the possible presence of sanitary defects, defects in distribution system coliform monitoring practices, and (when possible) the likely reason that the system triggered the assessment.
- Sanitary Defect – A defect that could provide a pathway of entry for microbial contamination into the distribution system or that is indicative of a failure or imminent failure in a barrier that is already in place.

WATER QUALITY RESULTS

Contaminants in your drinking water are routinely monitored according to Federal and State regulations. The EPA requires that Table I reflect monitoring results for the period of January 1st, 2017 through December 31st, 2021. The state allows us to monitor for some contaminants less than once per year because the concentrations of these contaminants do not change frequently. Some of our data, though accurate, may be more than one year old. Only the most recent sample results from the prescribed period are reported. The table lists only those contaminants that had some level of detection. Many other contaminants have been analyzed but were not present or were below the detection limits of the lab equipment.

WATER QUALITY RESULTS (Detected Contaminants Only)

Contaminant (units)	MCLG	MCL	Level Found	Range	Violation	Sample Date	Typical Source of Contamination
Arsenic (ppb)	0	10	7	N/A	No	01/19/2021	Erosion of natural deposits.
Gross Beta (pCi/L)	0	50*	14.5	N/A	No	4/03/17	Decay of natural & man-made deposits
Radium-228	0	5	1	N/A	No	4/03/17	Decay of natural & man-made deposits

A note about arsenic in drinking water: While your drinking water meets EPA's standard for arsenic, it does contain low levels of arsenic. EPA's standard balances the current understanding of arsenic's possible health effects of low levels of arsenic, which is a mineral known to cause cancer in humans at high concentrations and linked to other health effects such as skin damage and circulatory problems.

*The MCL for Beta particles is 4mrem/year. EPA considers 50pCi/L to be the level of concern for Beta particles.

Because your water was below 50 pCi/L no testing for individual Beta particle constituents was required.

UNREGULATED CONTAMINANTS

Contaminant (units)	MCLG	MCL	Level Found	Range	Violation	Sample Date	Typical Source of Contamination
Sodium (ppm)*	N/A	N/A	41.7	N/A	No	4/13/2021	Erosion of natural deposits widely distributed in nature, discharge from softeners, human or animal waste disposal, leachate from landfill or seawater intrusion

*There is presently no established standard for sodium in drinking water. Water containing more than 270 mg/L of sodium should not be used as drinking water by those persons whose physician has placed them on moderately restricted sodium diets. Water containing more than 20 mg/L should not be used as drinking water by those persons whose physician has placed them on severely restricted sodium diet.

DISINFECTION AND DISINFECTION BY-PRODUCTS

THM (ppb)	80	80	1.5	N/A	08/09/2021	No	By-product of drinking water chlorination

LEAD AND COPPER CONTAMINANTS

CONTAMINANT (units)	MCLG	Action Level	Level Detected	Range	# of samples above AL	Sample Date	Typical Source of Contamination
Copper (ppm)	1.3	1.3	0.440 (90 th percentile)	0.059-0.605	0	2021	Corrosion of household plumbing systems; Erosion of natural deposits; Leaching of wood preservatives.
Lead (ppb)	0	15	0.358 (90 th percentile)	<2.0 – 14.9	0	2021	Corrosion of household plumbing; Erosion of natural deposits

A note about lead in drinking water: If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. We are responsible for providing high quality drinking water but cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in drinking water, testing methods, and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at <http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead>

E.COLI BACTERIA MONITORING RESULTS

MCL	MCLG	Number of Positives	Violation	Sample Dates	Major Source of Contamination

Two Approaches To Save Accomac Elementary

Dear Editor:

There are two ways to approach the cost of building construction. One is sheer practicality. We ask ourselves what is the bottom line to get this building done as inexpensively as possible. We want it to be practical, fairly attractive, maintenance free. We want it to last about 30 years or until it becomes obsolete. Because it is only a practical building, it has no heart and soul. It does not hold memories for those who once inhabited it. And it does not contribute to the character, personality, and history of the community in which it sits.

Riding into Accomac last week past beautiful old homes and buildings constructed with care and purpose, I saw something that made me swell with pride — very plain red and white signs that said simply, “SAVE OUR SCHOOL.” Yes, Accomac School is OUR school. It was built to be loved and admired, with the best materials, with beautiful stately columns so that all who entered and learned there would retain fond memories of things learned and friendships made. It was built to define a proud and historic community. Many of us who spent our days wrapped in the love that Accomac School gave us still live here. We own businesses, have jobs, and contribute to our community. We have children and grandchildren who also live here. We vote in elections and have a voice. Stop looking at the bottom line and start listening to the voices of the community and its future generations. SAVE OUR SCHOOL. That is the second approach.
