ESCC emerges anew from state 'reboot'

What it means

By meeting one of the thresholds, Eastern Shore Community College in Melfa has emerged from the state "reboot." If it hadn't, the state would have conducted an assessment to determine whether ESCC should be consolidated with another Virginia community college.

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

Eastern Shore Community College has had its "reboot" status lifted after the state chancellor said the Melfa college showed progress in addressing certain challenges identified in 2018.

The Virginia Community College System assesses each of Virginia's 23 community colleges annually on four sustainability factors: a minimum service region population of 100,000; a minimum number of 500 full-time equivalent enrollment in academic programs; operating costs no greater than 125% of the system average; and the trend of issuing credentials in workforce programs, according to ESCC President Jim Shaeffer.

ESCC in 2018 was deemed to have failed to meet the established threshold for all four factors.

That triggered a more detailed assessment of the college, which has the smallest

Vandals strike two churches

BY TED SHOCKLEY

Eastern Shore Post

Congregants of two northern Accomack County churches are dismayed at a spate of vandalism directed at their sanctuaries.

"There is a total moral collapse in this country when we have people breaking into churches," said Linda Gordon, a parishioner at rural Chincoteague Baptist Church near New Church.

"It is a sad statement on the times in which we live," she said.

She said a water heater recently was stolen from a bathroom wall and plumbing lines were cut.

In addition, in late September, the Horn-town Baptist Church was ransacked and an area near the altar set aflame. She said there was "feces deposited in the sanctuary."

The Accomack County Sheriff's Office is investigating and can be reached at 757-787-1131.

The vandalism at Chincoteague Baptist follows a recent incident in which historic stained glass was broken.

"It's just unbelievable," said Gordon, saying of the structure, "There's just nothing of value in there other than Jesus."

Funding for concert pavilion hits sour note with some

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

The Onancock Town Council in a special meeting Tuesday discussed a request from Historic Onancock School for $100,000 to help pay for a performance pavilion on the former school property, which is owned by the town and leased to HOS.

The council in March approved the project. Council last month asked Town Manager Matt Spuck to provide information about options for granting the funding.

Spuck on Tuesday said options include funding the request using either cash reserves; money available after the sewer facility transfer to the Hampton Roads Sanitation District; or available operating cash.

Plans for the pavilion were discussed at the Oct. 24 town council meeting and the Eastern Shore of Virginia Chamber of Commerce announced Monday a groundbreaking ceremony for the pavilion, scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 17, at 12:30 p.m.

The pavilion is to include a 2,000-square-foot stage, theatrical lighting and sound systems, and lawn seating to initially accommodate 500 people, according to a presentation by Historic Onancock School Executive Director Joani Donohoe at the October town council meeting.

Work has begun on the foundation for the pavilion, which is being built behind the former school building.

Two couples who live nearby submitted letters to town officials objecting to the pavilion.

Lynne and Caleb Fowler wrote that when they first heard about the pavilion plans, "we thought it was a good thing," but said they thought it would be a covered structure used for gatherings such as picnics, not "a bandstand with music blasting every weekend."

Lynne Fowler wrote of music performed in the past outside at the HOS property, "Not only do we hear every note, our home actually vibrates."

Additionally, the Fowlers in the letter asked, "Does the town really want this type of crowd every weekend?" They also asked if additional police would be hired and when it would be profitable.

Ames Street residents Greg and Patricia Felthousen in a Nov. 1 letter said the town "owes every taxpayer an open and honest dialogue" about the pavilion project.

"A beautiful, quiet, serene residential neighborhood will be changed forever and no one was asked," they wrote, saying many of their neighbors on Ames, Liberty, and Sturgis streets share the concerns.

The Felthousens cited concerns about traffic, crowd control, noise, bathroom facilities, alcohol sales, trash removal, and potential vandalism of the venue.

The Felthousens were among speakers during a public comment period at Tuesday's meeting, reiterating comments in their letter.

Resident Priscilla Hart said she was "surprised" about the funding request, saying it wasn't mentioned when council approved the project.

Resident Glenn Smith said he "would like to see the town honor the request of $100,000."

Two speakers noted the property, when it was a school, hosted football games attended by hundreds, as well as concerts and other events.

Rick Turner, an HOS board member, said the pavilion is "something really positive for the town."

Council member Joy Marino asked HOS representatives to provide the town a written proposal including a budget and business plan.

The council will discuss the pavilion funding again at the regular meeting Monday, Nov. 28.

State warns drivers about deer moving in the roadway

Autumn is here and along with colorful leaves, crisp air, and shorter days, deer are on the move.

Fall is the breeding season for deer, so deer will be more active over the next couple of months than at any other time of the year.

Motorists will also be driving more often in the dark, increasing the likelihood of encountering a deer on the road.

Colliding with a deer can cause considerable damage to the animal, people, and property.

The Virginia Department of Wildlife Resources recommends the following tips to avoid hitting a deer:

- Slow down and be attentive, particularly at from dusk to dawn. If you see one deer, watch out for others.

- Deer habitually travel the same areas. Use caution when you see deer crossing signs installed in these areas by the Virginia Department of Transportation.

- Apply brakes, even stop if necessary, to avoid hitting a deer, but never swerve out of the lane to miss a deer.

A collision with another vehicle, tree, or other object is likely to be more serious than hitting a deer.

- If you hit or kill a deer while driving, immediately report the accident to a Conservation Police Officer or other law enforcement officer in the county or city where the accident occurred.

- If you kill a deer while driving, you may keep it for your own use if you report the accident to a law enforcement officer where the accident occurred and the officer views the animal and gives you a possession certificate.

Community college

enrollment of any community college in the state system, followed by a three-year improvement, or reboot, period.

Shaeffer received a letter from the VCCS chancellor Sept. 12 saying “the results of sustainability analysis presented to the State Board for Community Colleges at the May 2022 meeting showed evidence of progress in addressing the challenges identified,” according to a press release.

Since the meeting, data showed the college is currently meeting one of the four thresholds, resulting in the chancellor lifting the reboot status.

“This was accomplished through the hard work and dedication of our outstanding faculty and staff at your Eastern Shore Community College,” said Shaeffer.

“With the lifting of the reboot, ESCC is now focused on meeting our vision of being the national model of a college serving a rural community through diverse programming that leads to better lives and a better Shore,” he said.

The three-year “reboot” plan was announced in 2019, with the goal being to re-establish the college as “a viable and sustainable college that responds to the unmet educational and training needs of the Shore,” according to a state presentation at the time.

The college in May 2019 announced 12 administrative positions were being eliminated and three new positions were being created as part of the process.

One position was a Workforce and Business Solutions Officer, which Brian Scott Hall was hired to fill.

The other two new positions were in student services.

The official reboot period ended in July, after which the college was again assessed, using VCCS thresholds for the four factors, and was deemed to have made progress, including meeting one of the four thresholds.

“With hard work and the support of the community,

Eastern Shore Community College in Melfa recently emerged from its state reboot.

ESCC has increased workforce and academic enrollments,” according to the release.

Additionally, the college changed its business model and stabilized finances, bringing in more revenue and lowering expenses.

If the college had not met the thresholds, the VCCS board would have gone on to a more detailed assessment to determine whether ESCC should be consolidated with another Virginia community college.

Rural Health

“We have an opportunity to be closer to family and we’ve made the difficult decision to relocate,” he said, adding, “It has been my pleasure working for and serving Rural Health and our community. My family and I cannot thank you enough for welcoming us here on the Shore.”

Rural Health has 325 employees, including 48 providers, 128 clinical support staff, and 149 administrative staff.

Last fiscal year the health care organization saw 30,607 patients and provided a total of 108,305 visits, including 81,779 medical visits, 2,756 behavioral healthcare visits, and 23,770 dental visits, according to Bull.

Clay came to the Eastern Shore from Michigan, where he was executive director of health services at Pokagon Health Services in Dowagiac, Mich.

The health service is the primary care provider for Native American residents in Michigan and Indiana.

The Rural Health board has a succession plan in place, according to the release.

An interim CEO will be named within the next 30 days to allow for Clay to work with his temporary replacement.

The interim CEO will be in place until a permanent successor is hired.

Nonprofit tax filings showed the CEO earned an annual salary of $207,689 during the 2021 fiscal year.

Rural Health reported total revenues of $31.2 million that year.

An announcement will be made once the interim CEO is in place, according to the release.

Finney defeated Deborah K. Bliss, with 115 votes for Finney to 72 votes for Bliss cast. There also were 28 write-in votes.

Wachapreague also will have a new mayor, according to unofficial results.

Town residents in Accomack County Tuesday elected town council members and, in most towns, mayor. In numerous cases, results will be determined by write-in votes.

The official results were certified after press time.

The General Assembly in 2021 passed a law changing all Virginia town elections from May to November.

Thousands of Accomack residents cast their ballots before Election Day, under new, less restrictive early voting laws.

The total is more than three times the number of early voters in the 2018 mid-term election, when 1,226 voted early.

Accomack County's early voting rate per 1,000 registered voters, 179, surpassed the statewide rate, 156.4.

Kiggans downs Luria for U.S. House seat

BY STEFANIE JACKSON
Eastern Shore Post

Republican Jen Kiggans defeated Democratic incumbent U.S. Rep. Elaine Luria in the race for the 2nd District seat in the U.S. House of Representatives Tuesday night.

“My promise to you is that I will always work to help Virginia families and to stand up for our kids,” Kiggans said during her victory speech.

“And my promise to you is that I will wake up every single day and I will work to restore our strength in our economy, and in our border, and in our communities, and on the world stage,” she said.

Kiggans is a state senator representing District 7, which includes a portion of Virginia Beach and Norfolk. She is also a geriatric nurse practitioner and a former U.S. Navy helicopter pilot.

Kiggans won with nearly 52% of the votes compared to Luria’s approximately 48%.

As of Wednesday, Kiggans had 151,591 votes and Luria had 139,675 total votes, with 240 of 247 precincts reporting.

Luria conceded Tuesday night. After the U.S. Navy veteran and small-business owner was first elected in 2018, “we built a movement from the ground up and went to work every day for the people of Coastal Virginia,” she said in an official statement.

“We supported small businesses and working families through COVID-19, passed historic infrastructure investments, secured the largest expansion of veterans’ health care in our lifetime, grew our Navy, and strengthened our military to defend our interests and allies abroad.

“I am immensely proud of the good work we have done to deliver for Hampton Roads and make the United States of America a better place for everyone,” Luria said.

Luria’s accomplishments benefiting the Eastern Shore most recently included securing a nearly $1 million grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development for Northampton County.

The grant paid to replace a high-mileage EMS vehicle and help cover the cost to replace the aged HVAC system at Occohannock Elementary School.

Northampton voters favored Luria on Election Day 2,807 to 2,547, with Luria receiving 52% of the vote compared to Kiggans’ 48%, the reverse of the district’s election results.

In Accomack, Kiggans received nearly 58% or 7,558 votes compared to Luria’s 42% or 5,510 votes.

SERVING VIRGINIA'S EASTERN SHORE

THE PAPER'S POSITION

Veterans should be thanked every holiday

Today is the holiday of Veterans Day, during which we salute the people who have ensured all of our other holidays can be celebrated.

Think not?

U.S. veterans have fought to defend our freedoms, including our freedom of religion. Without freedom of religion, Christmas, Easter, Yom Kippur, Rosh Hashanah, Ramadan, Hanukkah, Palm Sunday, and so many others are imperiled — as is your right to abstain from any or all of them.

U.S. veterans have fought for our American democracy. So our treasured right to vote on Election Day repeatedly has been won by the blood and battle of our veterans.

Name any holiday and it is a certainty that those whose service we recognize on Veterans Day have enabled us to enjoy and celebrate it.

The problem is, some in our society will get more excited later this month about Black Friday deals and specials than they will about the sacrifices we honor on Veterans Day. Unfortunately, even the Super Bowl seems to get a higher pedestal and more fanfare than Veterans Day.

That's backward, for it is the heroes we honor on Veterans Day who have fought for and preserved our American ideals and way of life — and have ensured we can all enjoy our time-honored and sacred holidays.

Veterans Day will be celebrated and observed today. But our veterans should be recognized along with every holiday and special day on the calendar.

The Eastern Shore of Virginia has a deep, rich history of military service. There are many veterans among us in Accomack and Northampton counties. This military tradition continues as our young people serve this country.

We thank them for their service.

Different idea for ad sticker on front page

To the editor:

Being a small-business owner in the past, I understand that making a profit should be the main objective of any business.

However, it is my opinion that your newspaper and the Eastern Shore would have been better served to have placed a sticker on the front page with one word on it.

That word should have been "vote."

Cape Charles is 'a wonderful home'

To the editor:

We moved to Cape Charles in 1997 to become full-time residents. We were drawn to the town's walkable, tree-lined streets, almost European "urban design," the central park, and its unique water assets (public beach, town harbor, and Kings Creek Marina). We realized the town was past its heyday.

Even before we moved, we also experienced the thoughtful, personal interactions extended to us by long-term residents.

Over the last 27 years, people here have worked hard to renew

Cigar boxes were the key to a young man's organization

Someone told me I am disorganized. But that wasn't always the case.

When I was a kid, I was perfectly organized, thanks to my trusty cigar boxes.

Ted Shockley

At 11 years old, I kept my life savings in them — dollar bills in one cigar box, loose change in another.

I kept my really good baseball cards — my most valuable childhood possessions — in a King Edward cigar box. I still do. It is up on my shelf.

I kept the baseball cards of various also-ran players in several shoe boxes. Shoe boxes then were flimsy and the top wasn't attached, so they weren't quite adequate for the cards I considered valuable.

In another King Edward box, I kept my pens, pencils, and erasers, ensuring my workspace was free of clutter.

If I was going to a friend's house for a sleepover, I'd take some small toys in a pretty cigar box labeled "White Owl Invincible." I had to find a dictionary to figure out what "invincible" meant.

I was a well-arranged elementary schooler. My life had order and coordination. My stuff had a place.

But that was 40 years ago. Today people don't smoke nearly as much. It is expensive, dangerous, dirty, and will kill you.

I'm not a smoker. But the cigar boxes were my secret to life.

Once upon a time, when corner stores were locally owned and store owners actually waited on customers, they'd give a kid like me an empty cigar box.

Today, those free cardboard cigar boxes are harder to find.

As a result, my stuff isn't nearly as organized today. As smoking fell out of favor, my belongings fell all over the place.

Without a cigar box, everything on my desk is homeless — flash drives and packets of Theraflu, little scraps of paper and spare reading glasses. It looks windblown.

The table beside my chair at home is a cluttered mess — lip balm and old batteries, drill bits and dry-wall screws, all looking for a cigar box to hide in.

These days, organized people store their stuff on a hard drive or "in the cloud." But it is hard to get toenail clippers and bottle openers and spare garage keys in a cloud.

Items like that are supposed to be kept in a cigar box, a perfect invention that has never been matched or improved.

I understand stores sell other small organizational boxes that could serve the same purpose. Some are made of pink plastic and have a tight latch that is difficult to open. They have rounded tops, so they don't stack well.

Cigar box lids close and open without trouble. They stack nicely.

Before I knew "Antony and Cleopatra" was a Shakespearean tragedy, I knew "Antonio y Cleopatra" distributed its cigars in a small box in which I kept parts to broken toy tractors.

A box made by Garcia y Vega — whose television commercial slogan, "Still an Honest Cigar," is imprinted in my memory — was where I kept my pocket knives.

I went to an antiques store and saw a stack of old cigar boxes for sale.

It is hard to believe they've become a relic. It is hard to believe I have, too.

GUEST COLUMN

Excitement surrounds Cape Charles Rosenwald School

BY TEVYA W. GRIFFIN
Guest columnist

It is with deep respect and excitement for our Northampton community that I reach out to share news about the progress that the Cape Charles Rosenwald School Restoration Initiative is making at the former Cape Charles Elementary.

As many of you may be aware, I embarked on this journey over a decade ago after learning that the school was used to educate African Americans during segregation, some of whom were my high school teachers, family members, and elders.

I saw a unique opportunity to bring people together to resurrect a building that, while built during segregation, represented one of the last known buildings that held within it the voices and memories of African American life and community.

With that in mind, my husband and I gathered Cape Charles Elementary alumni, area religious leaders, friends, and civic and community leaders to begin this conversation.

We have grown in numbers and are proud of the diversity of people uniting to rehabilitate the decayed schoolhouse and repurpose it as a new place of education and lifelong learning accessible to all residents on the lower Eastern Shore.

As the historical blight of segregation gripped this nation, Cape Charles Elementary was a place for resilience, courage, and great achievement that captured the spirit of the community it served.

While everyone's experience at the school was different, when alumni and past teachers speak of the school, it is with joy and fond memories.

We are standing together to repurpose this landmark for generations to come.

It will represent the power of unity and be known as a place of gathering for all.

This is true to the purpose of such schools envisioned by the leader and educator, Booker T. Washington, and heavily financed by his colleague and friend, Jewish philanthropist Julius Rosenwald.

Both men were believers in the power of self-determination. Their alliance led to the construction of more than 5,000 schools to increase education for Black children in the rural segregated South.

Washington believed that education was the building block on which people would build better and stronger lives.

The historic Cape Charles Elementary, a rare brick Rosenwald School, had four classrooms, an auditorium, and an office. It was staffed by three the town's special vitality and fellowship.

On behalf of my family, we are especially grateful to a few that we know well for their continuous efforts to provide much appreciated health, recreation, and economic services: the Rayfield family pharmacists, Dr. Mark Clarke, the Sheppard Family and Arts Enter (love the Friday nights, especially in those dead winter months), Citizens of Central Park (and Mark Usry, who led the park's renovation), and the Main Street program merchants and restaurateurs.

Along with many others, including the town leadership and staff, they make our town a wonderful home, year-round.

When your body develops a glitch

After six million years of evolutionary fine-tuning, your body performs its complex tasks without a hitch. Usually, Food is digested, energy is produced, your brain thinks, the heart beats, the blood flows, waste products are eliminated. Life is a party.

Until, like a fuel pump or brakes on your car, something that had been working just fine, goes wrong.

Your utricle is the organ that helps you keep your sense of balance and enables you to know how your head is oriented. It's a fluid-filled sac, part of your inner ear, and it contains hair cells and calcium carbonate particles that send signals to your brain to help keep you upright and steady.

An injury or infection — or sometimes just age — can cause the calcium carbonate particles, known as otoconia, to get loose and careen around like loose billiard balls.

When they bounce against the cilia, the hair cells that help with your equilibrium, you can lose your balance and either get a little tipsy or keel over like Mike Tyson just landed a knockout punch.

This condition is called benign paroxysmal positional vertigo, or BPPV, and here's the surprising thing about a condition you might never have heard of: It's common.

The Cleveland Clinic estimates that half of all people over 50 will experience at least one BPPV episode in their lives. The condition can occur at any age. In fact, 20% of all dizziness cases are attributed to BPPV. But the older you get, the more likely you will have an episode.

BPPV usually occurs when someone sits up or moves their head up or down or side-to-side. These movements cause the otoconia to move and you to lose your sense of equilibrium.

The condition itself is not considered serious, but it might lead to damaging consequences when BPPV dizziness causes someone to faint, fall, and break a bone or a skull.

There's no cure but there is treatment. First, your doctor will examine you for signs and symptoms. Do eye and head movements cause you dizziness that goes away in less than a minute? Do your eyes move side-to-side involuntarily? Electronic and imaging testing might be needed.

Although BPPV will often go away on its own, your doctor might order a canalith repositioning procedure, also known as the Epley maneuver. Surgery is also an option.

In the Epley maneuver, your head is moved in precise and careful ways to cause the fluid in your inner ear to do its version of sloshing around so that those wayward calcium carbonate particles are moved into areas where the particles' future movements won't cause dizziness and the particles can be reabsorbed. The procedure-maneuver works about 80% of the time.

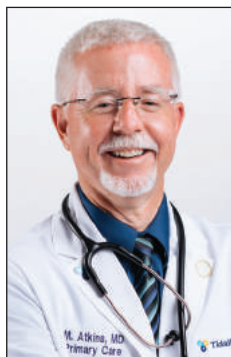

A medical professional can even teach you how to do it at home. ("Hey, hon, are you about ready to go?" "Don't bother me, I'm doing my canalith repositioning procedure.")

It's unsettling to think of all the thousands of workings that are constantly going on in your body, each one an opportunity for something to go wrong.

But we can be reassured that, for the most part, everything runs as smoothly as a good watch — and every day we take a licking and keep on ticking.

Early Detection
is Key!

The earlier lung cancer is detected the easier it is to treat.

Lung cancer is the second most common form of cancer for both men and women in the United States. More people die of lung cancer than breast, colon and prostate cancers combined.

Screen for Lung Cancer with Low Dose CT (LDCT)

LDCT screening finds lung cancer sooner, before you have any signs or symptoms.

Performed annually, LDCT is used to detect lung cancer at an earlier stage when it is easier to treat. A LDCT scan is for individuals who have no symptoms but are at high risk because of their smoking history and age.

This screening only takes a few minutes and is not painful.

Talk to your health care provider if:

- You are between 50 and 80 years old
- You have smoked an average of one pack a day for 20 years AND
- You are currently smoking or quit less than 15 years ago

CHINCOTEAGUE

Business owner speaks against cigarette tax

BY CAROL VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

A Chincoteague business owner asked the town council Monday to reconsider its pending cigarette tax increase, saying the recently passed ordinance would chase customers away.

The 40-cents-per-pack increase, which the council approved in September, will take effect Jan. 1.

Mike Elmquist, of Ridge Road Pit Stop, proposed the town instead impose a 10-cents-per-pack tax, as Accomack County does, and perhaps incrementally increase the tax in the future.

“Our economy is oppressed; our wages are oppressed,” he said of the effect on residents.

Elmquist asked why affected businesses were not informed of the tax proposal beforehand.

Of total sales at his store, 24.8% is for tobacco; 45.6% is for alcohol; and 17% is for prepackaged foods, he said, citing sales since the store opened in April.

“My profit on tobacco is 9%,” he said, adding, “Anybody in business knows you’re talking in that 30% to 40% — 30% is low, you’re going to have your doors closed in six months; 40%, you can hang on.”

Elmquist cited monthly statistics for the store’s tobacco sales, saying the numbers show locals more than tourists are the customers purchasing tobacco products.

With the tax resulting in a higher price, those locals likely will go elsewhere, cutting into the store’s revenue from other purchases they typically make at the same time they purchase tobacco, he said.

“Let’s look at it at the 10,000-foot level, the higher level, and see the broad impact. ... This is going to impact me; it’s going to impact the small mom-and-pops,” he said.

“This is going to impact me; it’s going to impact the small mom-and-pops.”

Mike Elmquist,
Ridge Road
Pit Stop

He asked the council to “look at this one more time” before imposing the tax in January.

Town Manager Mike Tolbert said tracking of cigarette sales by local vendors since July shows potential tax revenue of $27,023 to the town for the first quarter of fiscal year 2023.

Museum visitation high

The Museum of Chincoteague Island had a banner year for visitation in 2022, according to Executive Director Cindy Faith.

The year 2023 will be the museum’s 30th year working with Roads Scholar, an educational travel organization, which brings groups to Chincoteague.

Groups of around 30 people travel to Chincoteague each week through Roads Scholar. The museum typically hosts 30 to 35 programs per year.

The programs benefit the town’s economy, according to Faith, who said not only does the museum employ five people, but an additional 12 part-time contractors work with the Roads Scholar programs.

Additionally, in the past year the program resulted in 2,956 nights of lodging in local motels, bringing in $865,000, in addition to 5,312 restaurant meals sold, along with revenue for caterers, boat cruises, guest speakers, and more.

The museum's winter hours are Fridays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Special events include the 100th anniversary celebration for the Chincoteague Causeway and Drawbridge on Saturday and the Christmas Tree Village in December.

Town manager's update

Legislation to authorize federal funding to replace Chincoteague's wells did not make it into the National Defense Authorization Act, Tolbert told the council.

The legislation would have provided up to $14 million to relocate wells that supply the town's water, after per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) were found in the water several years ago. The wells are located on NASA property.

Since then, NASA installed a filtration system for the town's water supply.

Still, U.S. Sen. Mark Warner and U.S. Rep. Elaine Luria "are hopeful it will be included in a bill currently in conference that is dealing with PFAS," Tolbert said.

NASA agreed to allow wording of the legislation to be changed to allow a 10-year duration for the project and to include the possibility of desalination as an alternative solution to new wells.

Chincoteague's town ordinances now can be accessed on the internet. A link is on the town website, chincoteague-va.gov

State champ Casey Paglia, a student of wrestling, becomes a teacher of it

When former Northampton Yellow Jacket Casey Paglia won his second state wrestling title in 2012, it was a special moment. That year the state tournament featured three returning state champions and six returning state place winners.

Adolphus Ames

“It was also the same year my mother was diagnosed with brain cancer and had brain surgery,” Paglia said. “Winning that tournament and hugging my mom in her wheelchair afterwards is one of my favorite wrestling memories.”

A couple of years later, Paglia stepped onto the wrestling mat at American University. Collegiate wrestling is more challenging than high school wrestling. The training regimen is more strenuous and the separation between great wrestlers and good wrestlers is slim.

“Everybody is tough in college,” Paglia said. “On any given day you can lose to a below .500 wrestler and on the same day beat a nationally ranked wrestler. You have to be on your ‘A’ game at all times.”

During his college wrestling career, Paglia placed in a few open tournaments and defeated a few nationally ranked wrestlers.

Paglia, the younger son of Michael and Karen Paglia of Willis Wharf, fell in love with wrestling at an early age.

He started wrestling for the Northampton Wrestling Club in fourth grade under coach Brian Harman. He had his first match the summer before his eighth grade year.

“One of my favorite things about wrestling is that it simulates life,” he said. “In real life, you can’t call a timeout when you get in a tough situation. You have to keep pushing through until you figure it out.”

“On the wrestling mat there are no timeouts, no blame to be put on others, and you must fight to win. It’s just you versus another person.”

Paglia comes from an athletic family. His brother, Cody Paglia, also wrestled. Cody was a four-time state qualifier and placed fifth in the state wrestling tournament his senior year of high school.

COURTESY PHOTO

When he attended Northampton, Casey Paglia became a four-time district champion, four-time regional champion, four-time state finalist, and three-time state champion. He also was a NHCSA High School All-American.

Paglia concluded his high school wrestling career with 165 wins and 17 losses. He was also selected as the Virginia Student Athlete of the year by the Virginia Chapter of the National Wrestling Hall of Fame.

Those accomplishments didn’t come without challenges. Practices can be physically grueling and wrestlers have to manage their nutrition and weight off the mat.

“It requires a bit of discipline to become good,” said Paglia. “I didn’t win my first few matches. It took time for me to learn how to win.”

Even though Paglia has stopped competing, he continues to be involved in wrestling. Since returning to the Shore, he’s helped coach at Northampton and Nandua and worked with Broadwater’s lone wrestler, William Wehner. Paglia also recently launched the GOAT House Wrestling Club, where he teaches kids from ages five to 18 about the sport.

“I learned a lot during my high school and college wrestling career,” Paglia said. “And I’d like to take those lessons and share them with the kids I’m blessed to coach so they can have positive wrestling experiences.”

Warriors fall but head to playoffs

The Nandua Warriors went head to head with West Point last Friday night and came up short, 14-0.

"It was a tough defensive game," said Warriors head coach Dennis McCall.

"It was scoreless at halftime. Our linebacker core of Nazere Blake, Tristen Williams, and Austin Wert really held their ground."

Linebacker Makai Dorn led the defense with nine tackles.

The Warriors concluded their regular season with a 6-4 record. This past Thursday, the Warriors traveled to Poquoson High School for a playoff matchup.

Jackets down Firebirds, earn playoff spot

Yellow Jackets defenders try to bring down Arcadia running back Nasir Dorsey.

The Northampton Yellow Jackets bounced back from their loss against the Nandua Warriors last Friday night by defeating the Arcadia Firebirds, 42-0.

The Yellow Jackets built a lead early in the first half. Mahkai Spady intercepted a pass near the goal line, leading to a rushing touchdown by Tanner Feltes.

A few possessions later, quarterback Ronrico Bugg scored a rushing touchdown. Corey Ardrey also forced a safety.

At halftime, the Yellow Jackets led, 16-0. In the second half, the Yellow Jackets outscored the Firebirds 26-0 to capture the victory.

The Yellow Jackets concluded the regular season with a 5-5 record.

Falling water temps open the way for rockfish run

The fall fishing season is almost complete, as any upcoming significant drop in water temperatures will probably push most of the remaining summer and autumn species populations out of the Chesapeake Bay and seaside shallows to more southernly waters for the winter season.

Bill Hall

However, all is not lost. The declining water temperatures will open the door for the highly anticipated arrival of striped bass, also called rockfish.

Some stripers have already been beached by anglers fishing the barrier island surf. Lower water temperatures should push bodies of larger striper schools migrating down the coast from more northern waters into the Chesapeake Bay, where they will feast on the remaining schools of bay anchovies and menhaden.

Tautog, a cold-water-loving species, will also become more active around submerged structures from the southern Chesapeake Bay out several miles into the Atlantic Ocean.

“Some stripers have already been beached by anglers fishing the barrier island surf.”

Bill Hall
Fishing columnist

Chincoteague

Jimmy Vasiliou, of Captain Steve's Bait and Tackle, told me that there is some flounder action still occurring in the back bay.

Slot-sized puppy drum have started to show up in the bay, along with speckled trout. Most of the trout have been undersized.

A 28-inch striped bass caught off the beach on Assateague by Chuck Ritter was the first reported keeper-sized striped bass of the season.

The kingfish (whiting) bite in the Assateague surf has been some of the best of the year, both in size and number. Small sharks have also been a plentiful catch in the surf.

Wachapreague

Captain Lindsay Paul, of Trident Tackle, commented that “there is not much fishing activity going on” out of Wachapreague, even though there are some flounder, speckled trout, and puppy drum still around.

He added that the offshore wrecks are still producing nice-sized black sea bass.

Lower Shore

Dez Louie, at Oceans East-Eastern Shore, told me that number of anglers have decreased over the week, but the anglers who ventured out were rewarded with a larger class of speckled trout.

Limit catches of speckles were reported and the shop weighed in some trophy-sized trout for Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament Awards.

Daniel Pruitt registered a 7-pound, 6-ounce speckled trout. A few puppy drum catches were included with the trout.

There were also a lot of tailor blues attacking chunks of cut mullet baits as well as biting the tails off of soft plastic artificial baits.

The autumn migration of spot has begun and anglers using bloodworm baits on bottom rigs are enjoying success on the tasty panfish as they begin to leave the Chesapeake Bay.

Flounder catches have been plentiful, but keeper-sized fish have been scarce.

Some schoolie-sized stripers have been caught, but numbers are below what is normally expected for November.

The upcoming cold front is expected to lower water temperatures, helping the striper bite, but triggering the final migrations of most of the other summer and autumn species.

The arrival of the first trophy-class stripers traditionally occurs around Thanksgiving.

Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle in Cape Charles, remarked that the “fantastic” weather of last week enabled anglers the opportunity to get out on the water, finding some larger speckled trout and puppy drum.

The best reported action occurred along the southern bayside beaches between Cape Charles and Fisherman Island.

Soft plastics and Mirrolures were the choice of most of the successful casters. Bailey said that some anglers landed a few larger fish, but there were a lot of undersized fish mixed in with the keepers. Schools of puppy drum, with some fish in the legal slot limit, were mixed in with the trout.

The offshore wrecks are still producing medium to large black sea bass, as well as a few gray triggerfish.

The writer was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Saltwater Master Angler status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year. He also has won Virginia Press Association awards for his columns.

The $80 tickets include entrance to the event and a souvenir drink cup, live music by Corn Funk Revue, pulled pork and all the fixins, steamed clams and roasted oysters, bottomless beer, and various nonalcoholic beverages.

The Eastern Shore Polar Bears: This One's for Tate, a local chapter of Make-A-Wish of Greater Virginia, was formed by Zach Annon in winter of 2019.

The mission of this chapter is twofold. First, it wants to give back to an organization that makes a difference in the lives of children who are struggling. The second priority is keeping alive the memory of Tate Annon since his death in October 2018.

Tate and his parents had his wish granted by Make-A-Wish in 2015. They embarked on Tate's Make-A-Wish trip to meet the Kratt brothers, stars of the children's show "Wild Kratts" in Phoenix, Ariz.

"Our granted wish experience was first class from the very beginning. The Make-A-Wish staff sent a limo to pick us up and travel to the airport," Zack Annon said. "Upon arrival in Arizona a rental car was waiting for us to use during our stay. Hotel accommodations were top-notch including a rooftop swimming pool, which was Tate's favorite. Every night Make-A-Wish had lined up a different restaurant to host us for dinner.

"The evening of the 'Wild Kratts' premiere for their live show was nothing short of spectacular. Tate's wish to meet the Kratts brothers came true and amazing memories were made by all."

To raise funds to make other kids' wishes come true, Zach Annon and his team have organized an annual "Polar Plunge" in March for the past several years. For the past two years, they have added a Yeti cooler raffle.

These events have landed Zach and his team on the Make-A-Wish List of Excellent Supporters.

PLANNING FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Give Mom and Dad the Lifestyle They Deserve

Shorter days and turning leaves bring memories of holidays past. Mom going all out with dinner. Dad bringing home the biggest tree. Kids running all over the house. These were festive (if not chaotic) times. But the kids are older now and our parents are too.

During the holidays we all deserve to be surrounded by family and friends: sharing stories, enjoying home-cooked meals, and having the peace of mind that comes with knowing you are loved.

This is what Commonwealth Senior Living communities offer during the holidays and every day. Our families are relieved to know that their loved ones are safe, happy, and enjoying the lifestyle they deserve.

Happy Birthday in Heaven

Is there a party up in Heaven to celebrate today? Did angels frost a cake for you? Or sing to start your day? We're celebrating you down here as they are above. I truly hope your special day is filled with peace and love. This day was always special as we gathered 'round you here. We'd sing and laugh and celebrate your day with so much cheer. I miss those special moments that we shared throughout the years. It's hard to find that on this day my eyes now fill with tears. I'm trying hard to smile for you, but, ohhhh... that empty chair... I turn around and find myself still shocked that you're not there. Please know I'm thinking of you as I go throughout each day. This day is very special though because it's your birthday.

Happy Birthday!

Free football cleats provided by Brock, A.J., and C.J. Custis

Football players from Nandua, Arcadia, Chincoteague, and Northampton high schools have received free football cleats this season from a trio of brothers who want to form an organization that gives back to the community.

Brothers Brock, A.J., and C.J. Custis are forming a community organization called Jump-In that will help local youth in various ways.

Brock (class of 2006) and A.J. (class of 2004) both starred at Nandua with Brock later playing in college at Virginia State and A.J. playing at Morgan State.

Brock and A.J. played in the Arena Football League in Richmond.

Brock said several of their college and Arena Football teammates are now high school coaches at large high schools where cleats are usually provided to the players.

With the help of their former teammates the Custis brothers were able to acquire about 90 shoes that would typically cost $150 a pair for local athletes.

A.J., who handles security for the Washington Wizards of the NBA, also recently donated $800 to the booster club at Nandua that allowed students to enjoy free food and drinks from the concession stand at a recent homecoming football game.

Brock, who is involved with the local Boys & Girls Club and conducted a summer program that provided free food to youth in low-income neighborhoods, says the newly developing charity Jump-In aims to be education based and will seek a variety of ways it can assist local youth.

"It's our way of giving back to the community that helped us when we were growing up here on the Shore," said Brock.

The three brothers are the sons of Alphonso and Kathy Custis of Melfa.

NSDAR contributes to USO group

November is Veteran and Military Family Appreciation Month. To celebrate this observance, the Eastern Shore of Virginia Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution collected and donated food and snack items to the USO of Hampton Roads and Central Virginia, located at the Norfolk International Airport.

The USOHRCV is the premier service organization of the United States military and their families in the region serving the largest concentration of military personnel in the country.

The USO was founded in preparation for World War II by national leaders who understood that maintaining high morale in a fighting force was vital to a nation's military success.

The USO is a family of volunteers, sustained by the charitable contributions of millions of generous Americans.

They are united in their commitment to support America's service members by keeping them connected to the people, places, and things they love. This is done through countless acts of caring, comfort, connection, and support.

Northampton Dems donate to teachers

The Northampton County Democratic Committee recently distributed school supplies to all 140 teachers of the Northampton County Public Schools.

During the week of Sept. 26 all 140 teachers at the Northampton County Public Schools received a trove of school supplies gathered and distributed by the Northampton County Democratic Committee.

On average, public school teachers spend $750 of their own money on supplies they need for their classrooms.

The Northampton County Democratic Committee wanted to help and to show its support for public schools, teachers, and the vital work that they do for the children in our community.

The Northampton County Democratic Committee collected $3,800 from supporters to purchase needed supplies.

Supplies were distributed at Occohannock Elementary and Kiptopeke Elementary Schools and Northampton high school and middle school.

Golf tourney raises money for wrestlers

A golf tournament at the Eastern Shore Yacht & Country Club on Friday, Oct. 14, raised funds for the GOAT House Wrestling Club, a group started in May 2021 by the Northampton High School graduate and three-time state wrestling champion Casey Paglia.

Paglia, a four-time state finalist (2010-2013) and a high school All-American who went on to wrestle at the Division 1 level at American University, founded GOAT House Wrestling for youth 5 to 18 to introduce the basics of wrestling while giving kids a positive outlet.

"In addition to wrestling fundamentals, we want to teach life lessons while developing discipline, self-confidence and a strong work ethic. Wrestling teaches kids so many life lessons that will last them forever," said Paglia.

Paglia, who was always supported by his parents Mike and Karen Paglia, says wrestling promotes a family atmosphere, and the parents of his wrestlers are usually heavily invested in what their kids are doing on the mat and off of it, too.

Paglia adds the high school wrestlers in his program have notched regional championships and his youth wrestlers have competed in regional and state tournaments with good results.

Paglia is assisted by Josh Ford, Matt Evans, and Nate Metzger.

Paglia, who ran the benefit golf tournament, drew support from the wrestling community with 17 teams signing up for the captain's choice format.

The team of Larry Chance, Jack Krieger, Thomas Hoyt, and Eddie Mathews won top prize with a 52 while second place went to Jacob McElligott, Andrew McElligott, Derek Chapman, and Thomas Webb with a 56.

Third place went to Thomas Scott, Jeff Horner, Ryan Horner and Tyler Ames with a 58,

For more information on the GOAT House Wrestling Club, email goathousewrestlingclub@gmail.com or call Casey Paglia at 757-710-0425.

In addition to this tournament, the Eastern Shore Yacht & Country Club has hosted benefit tournaments this year for the chamber of commerce and the local hospital, the Onancock Volunteer Fire Department, and the Nandua baseball team.
