NASA DENIES STUDY WILL BE USED TO DOWNSIZE WORKFORCE

By Linda Cicaira

A NASA review team that is working on a 20-year facilities master plan has been falsely accused of eliminating jobs at Wallops Flight Facility (WFF) and other centers, according to an email that was sent Tuesday to all area NASA employees.

Christopher J. Scolese, director of the NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center (GSFC), addressed his colleagues by writing, "Recent media reports, based on statements of individuals from outside NASA, have misstated the activities of the Greenbelt-Wallops Review Team, incorrectly stating that the team is considering cost-cutting or downsizing measures. The team is doing nothing of the sort."

"As NASA has increased the emphasis on partnerships and commercial activities, and as the agency as a whole works towards implementation of the new operating model, Goddard management must adapt," Scolese continued. "The team has not been asked to look at potential cuts to GSFC, Greenbelt, Wallops, IV&V, GISS, White Sands, or any other component and will not make any recommendations in that area."

"As an entirely separate activity, pursuant to Office of Management and Budget direction, NASA Headquarters has directed Goddard, as well as all other NASA Centers, to identify strategies to reduce the cost of NASA facilities for purposes of developing an agency 20-year facilities master plan. The master plan will contain no directions for the workforce and is unrelated to the Greenbelt-Wallops Review Team's

Mistrial a Possibility in Murder-for-Hire Trial Underway in Accomac

By Linda Cicaira

The possibility of a mistrial loomed at press time Thursday as testimony continued for a third day in Accomack Circuit Court in the murder-for-hire trial of Roquan T. Rogers, the young man suspected of shooting and attempting to kill a police informant last Halloween in the Boston area of Painter.

Defense lawyer Curtis Brown of Norfolk motioned Wednesday for Judge W. Revell Lewis III to rule the trial as invalid because it was disclosed to the jury that Rogers, who also goes by Kake, Cake, Young Sam, or Little Sam, 19, of Benjamin Banneker Road in Exmore, and his two brothers were charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

The three were indicted on those charges in Northampton in May. Usually, a jury isn't privy to hearing about suspicions that are not part of the charges being decided. In this case, there was a possibility those charges could be linked to the ones being tried.

Police and court records have concluded the murder scheme was fueled by cocaine distribution, revenge, money, and informant Nathaniel "Nate" Johnson, 31, who was shot three times while walking in Linhaven Circle with his girlfriend at the time, Desiree Smith,

19. She was hit in the foot by gunfire.

Johnson was the informant used by the Eastern Shore Drug Task Force to collect evidence against the defendant's brother and another man, who was the mastermind of the murder scheme.

Both Johnson and Smith testified that Roquan Rogers was the shooter. Johnson was shot in the back and buttocks. He said he recognized the defendant that night by the unusual shape of his mouth, his dreads, and his body style. Smith said she saw his face when she turned to look and the flash of the gunfire illuminated him. Both said they knew him.

Commonwealth's Attorney Spencer Morgan and former Northampton Commonwealth's Attorney Bruce Jones were working together to prosecute Roquan Rogers. Morgan was doing the talking. He said the motive was revenge because Johnson testified against his brother, Akeem Rogers, earlier in October, and because he wanted the money that was offered for Johnson's death.

Roquan Rogers pleaded not guilty to attempted murder of Johnson; using a firearm in the attempted murder; conspiracy to commit capital murder between August and November 2017; conspiracy to murder by a prisoner; at-

Comp Plan Hearing Highlights Conflict Between Northampton Factions

By Stefanie Jackson

A public hearing on Northampton's comprehensive plan held by the county planning commission Aug. 7 in the Northampton Middle School auditorium appeared to accomplish little more than highlight the conflict between the commissioners rewriting the plan and the citizens whose interests the plan is intended to protect.

The first sign of conflict appeared at the beginning of the meeting. A complaint about the comprehensive plan often repeated by Northampton citizens is the lack of public input in its rewrite. After the meeting began nearly 20 minutes late due to difficulty unlocking the building, Chairman Mark Freeze spent another five minutes reading the list of names of individuals and organizations who provided input on the plan.

"Can I say something?" Sandra Beerends interrupted. "We know how to read and we have a copy of it."

"I'm reading it into the record," Freeze responded.

Later, Andrew Barbour said, "You're trying to justify that you have citizen input. ...

My name was on there, and I don't really feel like I had a huge amount of input."

He called the planning commission's consideration of public comments from its monthly meetings as part of the "input package" for the comprehensive plan "nonsense" and said, "That is not how you generate focused feedback."

He also questioned the validity of the phone survey conducted six years ago by American Strategies Inc. "ASI is not a survey company," but "a lobbying group" whose role "is not to sample public opinion, it's to shape it on behalf of its clients," Barbour said.

Furthermore, the survey was paid for by the National Association of Realtors at the request of the Eastern Shore Association of Realtors, he added.

There are parts of the plan Barbour agrees with and parts he strongly disagrees with, "but none of that matters because this rewrite should be dead on arrival" because "we have no idea if it accurately reflects the wishes of the citizens of Northampton County."

The citizen input used from meetings in 2009 is "useless, if not deliberately misleading" and came just one year after the Great Recession, Barbour said. "That's why everyone talks about how ugly and depressing" the comprehensive plan is. "This is not the same county."

Andrew Follmer called Freeze's reading of the list of contributors to the comprehensive plan a "disgraceful and disingenuous display" and said, "The only reason to use data that is more than five years old for an exercise that is legally required to be completed every five years is cherry-picking."

Martina Coker disagreed with the plan's statement that "entrepreneurial activity may indicate underlying economic problems" and pointed out that New Ravenna and Moonrise Jewelry, which the plan calls successful manufacturing companies, both were started by entrepreneurs. She also found the de-emphasis of entrepreneurship in the plan "ironic" considering Gov. Ralph Northam's recent visit to the Eastern Shore to celebrate the opening of 14 new businesses in Cape Charles, all begun by local entrepreneurs.

David Boyd added that when jobs are counted in the comprehensive plan, any kind of self-employment is excluded, discounting nearly all aquaculture, ecotourism, and local artisans. "No wonder they think we're hurting for jobs," he said.

Other concerns about the comprehensive plan were the apparent exclusion of the visions of the working waterfront villages of Willis Wharf and Oyster, and the reclassification of 36 hamlets as villages, which would double housing density in many flood-prone areas.

There was also conflict between the planning commission and its own staff. Commissioner Kay Downing blamed Senior Planner Kelley Lewis Parks for not having a PowerPoint presentation on the proposed changes to the comprehensive plan ready for public view.

When Parks asked when the request was made, Downing answered, "At our work sessions. That's it, I'm not hearing anymore."

Superintendent Pleasantly Surprised by Responses in Northampton Teacher Survey

By Stefanie Jackson

Northampton Schools Superintendent Eddie Lawrence said he was pleasantly surprised by several favorable responses on the most recent division-wide teacher survey.

Before reviewing the positive answers with the school board, he advised them to take the results “with a grain of salt” and consider that not all teachers completed the survey. The time of year the survey is given also affects the outcome. This year’s survey was sent on April 20, after spring break.

About 36 percent of the 70 respondents were from Kiptopeke Elementary School, 24 percent were from Occohannock Elementary School, 11 percent were from Northampton Middle School, and 27 percent were from Northampton High School.

A majority, nearly 53 percent, agreed or strongly agreed their school’s schedule allows adequate time for teacher preparation and planning. About 34 percent disagreed or strongly disagreed. Around 14 percent were neutral.

A larger majority, nearly 67 percent, said they took pride in the appearance of their school. About 21 percent were neutral and less than 13 percent disagreed on some level.

Director of Operations Chris Truckner is responsible for the maintenance of Northampton schools, including their exterior appearance or, as he says, “curb appeal.”

An overwhelming majority, almost 83 percent, agreed or strongly agreed that they felt safe in the classrooms. Nearly 13 percent were neutral and about 4 percent disagreed. No respondents strongly disagreed.

Similarly, almost 80 percent agreed or strongly agreed students are safe at their school. Nearly 13 percent were neutral and 10 percent disagreed. No one strongly disagreed.

Lawrence again cautioned the school board to consider the time of year the survey was given. He guessed that if the survey had been given in February after the high school shooting in Parkland, Fla., the answers would have been more negative.

He was also pleased the survey appeared to indicate solid relationships between teachers and administrators.

About 75 percent agreed or strongly agreed that school administrators hold themselves to the same high expectations as others, and 67 percent agreed or strongly agreed those administrators followed up on their commitments.

More than 74 percent agreed administrators involve teachers in decision-making and problem-solving. Less than 19 percent were neutral and only about 7 percent disagreed at some level.

Another 74 percent said, “School administrators back me up when I need it.” Lawrence also reviewed questions that highlighted some challenges at Northampton schools.

More than 84 percent of respondents agreed or strongly agreed they spend a great deal of time dealing with students’ social and emotional challenges, and nearly 74 percent said teachers talk with students about how to understand and control their emotions.

In the upcoming school year, Northampton schools will address this issue through a program called Second Step, chosen by school psychologists Heather Welch and Julia Doherty. It’s designed with lessons and activities teaching and reinforcing social and emotional skills and can be incorporated in the classroom with assistance from school counselors.

Second Step can be used for grades pre-K through eight. Northampton will phase in the program beginning with the lower elementary grades.

Another survey question a bit troubling to Lawrence was the apparent split decision about the statement, “Students respect their teachers.” Nearly 36 percent agreed and another 36 percent disagreed. Less than 1.5 percent strongly agreed, but almost 13 percent strongly disagreed.

Lawrence gave students the benefit of the doubt. Teachers may perceive some unwanted behaviors as disrespectful, but sometimes kids don’t understand what “normal behavior” is, he said.

Next year, Lawrence wants to make room in the school budget for Ruby Payne teacher training. Payne, who has a doctorate degree in educational leadership, is an educator and author who helps teachers learn and understand the culture of poverty and how it affects children’s education.

Exmore Activist Wants Innovation Park For New Roads Community

By Stefanie Jackson

Ava Wise, daughter of the late Ruth Wise – a champion to the success of the New Road Community Development Group of Exmore – is striving to carry on her mother's legacy and fulfill the vision of her organization.

The New Road Community Development Group formed in 1992 with the original goal of providing water and sewer service to homes that lacked indoor plumbing. It also helped many members of the New Road Community become first-time homeowners.

ATTENTION RESIDENTS OF ACCOMACK COUNTY

As of August 13, 2018, County Recycling Centers will NO longer be accepting Glass of any kind for recycling. The centers will continue to accept all other recyclable materials. You may contact the Public Works Department 787-1468 with any questions.

By 2009, most of the 30 acres purchased by the community development group had been redeveloped with either single or multiple family dwellings.

But there is a piece of New Road's master plan that remains incomplete – job creation and economic development.

Traveling southbound on Route 13 in Exmore, before reaching the Shore Plaza shopping center, one can see Ruth Wise Road on the right. The road runs the length of a nearly 4-acre parcel Wise hopes will become what she dubs an "innovation park."

Over the past four or five years, the New Road group has encountered many obstacles in its effort to obtain funding for economic development on this little piece of the Eastern Shore, among them, a lack of infrastructure and "rooftops," Wise said.

She was given a lead at a recent meeting of state and local representatives in Onancock, attended by Gov. Ralph Northam.

Wise was informed New Road's economic development plan would have a greater chance of success in obtaining funding if it included housing. This came as a bit of surprise, as Wise thought New Road was done with housing development, but she was receptive to the idea if it would help bring the economic development concept to fruition.

Wise credits Elaine Meil of the Accomack-Northampton Planning District Commission for the idea to convert New Road's 3.8 acres near Shore Plaza into a mixed-use parcel including housing to gain the interest of potential funding partners.

Wise isn't sure yet how the housing element will be incorporated. One possibility is loft developments with business units below and dwelling units above.

She intends to rally the New Road group together and prepare to apply early next year to the Virginia Department of Community Housing and Development for a Vibrant Community Initiative grant to fund the planning process for the industrial park, aka innovation park. (This year's pre-application deadline was Jan. 31.)

Another obstacle the New Road group has encountered in their pursuit of economic development is workforce readiness. After multiple recruiting experts pointed out skill sets lacking in the local workforce, Wise decided to "flip that on its head and look at the advantages our labor force has."

Wise considered the local workforce's

strengths in agriculture, aquaculture, and food processing, as well as the success of value-added products in the Shore's aquaculture industry (packaging and/or processing the product for sale).

She came up with two ideas for the innovation park: greenhouses for the year-round development and growth of specialty crops, and a commercial kitchen for preparing and processing food for both local sale and mass production.

Wise is interested in collaborating with Eastern Shore Community College to use the new facility for continuing education. She would also like to reach out to colleges in the greater area, like her mother's alma mater, Virginia State University, near Richmond, Va., with its culinary arts program, and the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, in Princess Anne, Md., with its hydroponics program (growing plants without soil).

Wise is ready to help her community "turn innovation ideas into real, live jobs."

Future meetings of the New Road group will be open to the public. "New Road has always been about the larger community," Wise said, and "the entire community will benefit" from its work.

Chincoteague Town Council Takes Stand Against Offshore Drilling

By Linda Cicoira

Chincoteague's town council voted Monday to oppose "offshore oil and gas exploration and drilling including seismic testing in the mid-Atlantic Ocean adjacent to Virginia's Coastline."

A resolution was made in a quest to protect the island and its residents and to continue "to enjoy the economic benefits of its tourism and aquaculture industries associated with these waters. These industries are thriving and growing and constitute an immense value to the local, regional, and national economy," a resolution stated.

The proposed drilling "would occur in the very midst of the flight range for launches (at Wallops Island Flight Facility) and have similar impacts on the Navy's use of our coastline for preparation of our nation's defense," the document continued.

Vice Mayor Ben Ellis said as of June 1, "More than 200 East Coast municipalities and over 1,200 local, state, and federal elected officials, including the governors of Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, North Carolina, and South Carolina, fishery management councils, chambers of commerce, and other industry groups have formally opposed offshore drilling and/or seismic testing." In addition, he said both Virginia senators and the area's congressional representative are opposed. Accomack supervisors voted against the measure months ago.

Matt Heim, Mid-Atlantic organizer for Oceana, spoke to the council and mayor before the vote was taken and at a previous meeting. "Offshore drilling in the Atlantic is a storm ... this resolution is something powerful that you all can do."

It was also announced that property previously owned by Mayor Arthur Leonard and his sisters was sold to resident Dave Lansberger. He said he will donate it for town use. Leonard described the property as "a big lot in back of the old elementary school." Suggestions included a soccer field, playground, parking lot, or pool site. The recreation committee was tasked with making a more thorough list and reporting back to council.

Daryl Chrisman of Poseidon's Pantry on Maddox Boulevard again asked the town to consider eliminating the parking space requirement for his pushcart. "Our island is now more vibrant food-wise" due to the increase in mobile units because sewer needed for sit-down restaurants is not available, Chrisman said. Ellis said the planning commission is looking into the request.

Islander Mike Tolbert, chief of management and operations at Accomack County Public Schools, requested a change in the Public Use Zone to allow installation of a digital sign at Chincoteague High like the ones being erected at other county schools. The sign would be used for cancellations and other school announcements.

Tolbert served on the town planning commission when the council voted to prohibit flashing signs to keep the island from looking like "a Las Vegas strip." He said this sign would not advertise a business and would replace the "outdated" sign at the school that is still welcoming Pony Penning visitors for the event that occurred "two weeks ago."

A public hearing on the issue was scheduled for September. Several of the council members said they would support Tolbert's request. There are already two other electric signs in town that are used for special events and there is one at the entrance to the wildlife refuge.

A representative of the Misty Foundation requested the town erect a sign at the foot of the bridge welcoming visitors to the birthplace of the wild horse, Misty, and the herd of ponies that were made famous by Marguerite Henry's series of books. The foundation will help pay for the sign.

Ellis brought up the cost of EMTs and how a plan to find a funding source for the future is needed. In 2020, the cost will be about $1 million. "We need to work additional revenue sources," Ellis said. The police department needs "two more officers. That needs to be addressed and is going to be a significant expense ... It's going to hit us in the face in a year or so."

work. Any potential facilities impact at Greenbelt, Wallops, and other Goddard components is only a concept at this time. However, the current Goddard master plan concept confirms the importance of all Goddard components, including specifically the importance of the Wallops Flight Facility as a mission critical operational facility."

developments in the surrounding local and global industries, broadening professional networks, and raising professional profiles.

The group's chairman, Peter Bale, reportedly told reporters last week that Goddard is exploring cost cutting measures throughout its agency. He voiced concern about the potential infrastructure reduction and what that would mean to the local economy.

"The bottom line is that if this were to occur and if these reductions took place at either part of the facility, we have a workforce of about two and a half thousand people," Bale told WBOC TV in Salisbury, Md. "I would see within twelve months a reduction of about 1,000 to 1,500 people and also see the loss of revenue on Delmarva."

Goddard is about 6.5 miles from Washington, D.C. in Greenbelt, Md.

Last Friday, WFF issued a statement to dispel rumors. "Wallops is not closing nor is there an effort to look at reducing the workforce."

The press release also quoted Ken Human, who is leading the review team. "The importance of a synergistic relationship between the two campuses is vital to the future of each campus and Goddard Space Flight Center as a whole," he said.

TOWN: CHINCOTEAGUE WATER SAFE TO DRINK

By Linda Cicora

"The water we have is safe to drink," Chincoteague Town Manager Jim West reiterated Monday during a town council meeting.

West gave the water report because a story "that is about a year and a half old" was put out by the Associated Press causing people to panic. "There's nothing in our water now. The water we have is safe to drink. NASA is looking into filtering contamination to clean that water (which is no longer being used) and to help relocate the wells."

In April 2017, wells used for drinking water on Chincoteague were found to have high levels of PFAs or per- and Polyfluoroalkyl substances from firefighting foam used at the fire training area at Wallops Island. Those wells are no longer being used.

Since then, town leaders have spent $300,000 for 30 acres on the mainland so wells could be drilled there for drinking water. Testing at the new site showed no PFAS, no arsenic, or other contaminants.

Farmers Asked To Report Crop Yields

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) is surveying Virginia producers for its County Agricultural Production Survey (CAPS) small grains survey.

The survey will collect information on total acres planted and harvested, and yield and production of small grains crops. CAPS will provide the data needed to estimate acreage and production of winter wheat and barley in Virginia.

"The data provided by producers will be used to set county average yields, which are needed in federal farm programs, such as the Agriculture Risk Coverage (ARC)," said Herman Ellison, Virginia state statistician. "I hope every single producer understands the importance of these data and will take the time to respond if they receive this survey. Producers lose out when there is no data to determine county yields, crop insurance price elections, and more. When enough producers do not respond to surveys, NASS is not able to publish data. Without data, agencies such as USDA's Risk Management Agency or Farm Service Agency do not have information on which to base the programs that serve those same producers."

Within the next few weeks NASS representatives will contact selected growers to arrange telephone or in-person interviews for conducting the survey. NASS safeguards the privacy of all respondents and publishes only aggregate data, ensuring that no individual operation or producer can be identified.

County average yields will be published on December 13, 2018. For more information on NASS surveys and reports, call the NASS Virginia Field Office at 1-800-772-0670.

attempting to intimidate or impede a witness; making threats against a witness; maliciously wounding Johnson and Smith; attempted murder for hire; murder for hire of another from a prisoner; and use of a firearm to maliciously wound Johnson and Smith.

Judge Lewis took the motion regarding the mistrial under advisement and said he would rule after the prosecution finished presenting its evidence. The debate about the possibility of a mistrial was not discussed in front of the jury or Steve Lewis, the Eastern Shore Drug Task Force officer who spilled the beans when he was asked by Morgan about his knowledge of the Rogers brothers.

Judge Lewis had the court reporter read that portion of the testimony back to the jury and told them to disregard it. He also struck it from the record. Steve Lewis said the conspiracy charges were brought against the Rogers brothers because of DNA and fingerprint evidence.

Brown argued that reading the testimony to the jury made it even more prejudicial. The defense lawyer said he didn't blame Morgan for the answer

Steve Lewis had given. Steve Lewis also was not present when the jury got the instruction and was brought back into the courtroom to finish testifying.

Thursday, Brown motioned again for the mistrial after a phone call between the defendant and Akeem Rogers (recorded because Akeem Rogers was in jail) was played for the jury. Brown contended that all the cursing in the conversation could prejudice jurors against him. Judge Lewis denied that motion.

Brown continuously talked over others and at one point was so disrespectful to the judge that it appeared he was scolded for it during a sidebar with the lawyers and judge. Brown was keeping true the promise he made at a bond hearing:

"I would tell the court this, we are going to fight this case nail and teeth.

"He's never been in trouble before," he said referring to Roquan Rogers. "That's got to count for something. Attempted to go to school (at the Eastern Shore Community College), that has to count for something."

On Wednesday the day ended in the middle of Cynthia Harmon's testimony. Harmon, 52, of Parksley, now an inmate at Accomack Jail, was also charged in the scheme. She testified that she helped carry out plans for Johnson's murder in conversations and text messages with her boyfriend and drug business associate, Evron Terrell Strand, 43. Strand was an inmate in Accomack Jail when the shooting occurred. Harmon and Strand are also accused of asking Aaron Jamaricus Bowens, also known as Easy and BOBO, 22, of Big Pine Road in Painter, to commit murder. Bowens was charged with being a part of the scheme.

Ironically, Johnson said he called Bowens before he was shot and asked for help because he was being followed. When Jones was still Northampton's prosecutor he publicly accused Bowens of killing Terrell Devone Mason, also known as Juice, a 26-year-old father of eight who was gunned down several years ago through the window of an Exmore shed where neighborhood family and friends gathered to play cards.

That neighborhood in the New Roads area is where the Rogers brothers lived and where Smith's father and grandmother live.

Court records also state that Keenan Jibrel Berry, 26, of Jermaine Lane in Parksley, and Harmon's son, DeBrandon Pierre Harmon, 29, of Dennis Drive in Parksley, were also asked to kill Johnson for $3,000.

Cocaine, handguns, cash, and a digital scale were among the items seized from the house where the Harmons lived. Cynthia Harmon said she was testifying "because it is the right thing to do." She said the prosecution did not make any promises in exchange for her testimony.

It was also disclosed that Johnson was paid for being an informant and was being supported by the police who are constantly protecting him. Smith testified that when she and Johnson were visiting a home in Boston the night of the shooting, Johnson kept asking a man who was only identified as Dewey for "mollies," a drug that Steve Lewis said was like ecstasy. Smith could not remember if she had taken a pill the night the shooting occurred. She also initially said she didn't know who the shooter was because she feared for her life.

Danny Lashawn Campbell Jr., 32, formerly of Wilson Court in Cape

Charles, testified Thursday that he was in jail with Roquan Rogers and that Rogers confided in him details about the conspiracy for murder. Campbell was sentenced to 15 years in prison with all but four years suspended for distribution of cocaine and a third offense of assault and battery of a family member. The offenses occurred in September 2016 and June 2017. He also said no promises were made in exchange for his testimony.

Thursday, Cynthia Harmon was not brought back in to finish testifying. But there were plans for her to do so later in the day.

SUPERVISORS CALL FOR SPECIAL ELECTION FOLLOWING DEATH OF REGISTRAR

By Linda Cicaira

A special election for Accomack Commissioner of Revenue will be held during the November general election with interested candidates having until Friday, Aug. 17, to officially come forward, Voter Registrar Patricia White said Wednesday.

A writ of election named Debbie Midgett of Parksley, a long-time deputy commissioner, to serve in the position until the special election is held. White said Midgett has indicated she will run for the constitutional office. The special election will determine who will fill the unexpired term that ends in December 2019. Another election for the full four-year term would be held in November 2019.

No one has formally registered to have his or her name on the ballot for the special election, White said.

The action comes after the recent unexpected death of Commissioner of Revenue Leslie Savage. Accomack supervisors meet in a specially called session and voted last Thursday to call for the writ. County attorney Celia Burge then wrote the document and it was signed by Judge W. Revell Lewis III of the Accomack Circuit Court.

The supervisors and other officials who gathered for the meeting last week offered their praise for Savage and prayers to her family.

Pony Penning Filled Area Hotels

By Linda Cicaira

Hotels, bed-and-breakfasts, campgrounds, and rental houses were about 96 percent full on Chincoteague for Pony Penning, Evelyn Shotwell, executive director of the island's chamber of commerce, reported to town officials Monday.

The chamber office had 264 fewer phone calls about the event compared to last year and were four percent down on the number of visitors who came to the office. But that was explained.

"They had already gotten their information," Shotwell said explaining online visits to the chamber website were up more than 300 percent. The chamber also reached 500,000 on its Facebook page that week and 1.74 million for July.

A video of the Pony Swim got 176,000 reaches. "It was amazing to watch the numbers go up as people were watching," Shotwell said. "Comments were just flying." There were also 1,900 shares.

Folks also stayed in Exmore, Onancock, Cape Charles, and Pocomoke, Md., and went to events as day trippers. "Sparser crowds could be attributed to fewer day-trippers due to rain," she said.

VDEM Taking Applications Grants to Help Lessen Effects of Disasters

The Virginia Department of Emergency Management (VDEM) announced the application deadline for both the Pre-Disaster Mitigation (PDM) grants and the Flood Mitigation Assistance (FMA) grants is Oct. 12. VDEM opened the application period on March 23, and has been working with localities to develop strong applications for these nationally competitive programs.

While the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) application period has not been announced, VDEM has established the application timeline to give local governments, state agencies, institutions of higher education, and certain private nonprofits additional time to develop applications. VDEM has also restructured its state level peer review process to include representation from each region of the Commonwealth and subject matter experts.

"The time is now, before the next disaster, to apply, as PDM for fiscal year 2018 is projected to be funded at the highest level since its inception," said VDEM State Coordinator Jeff Stern. "The reformed application timeline for these grants has allowed for continual technical assistance to our local and state partners."

Applications are required to be submitted through MitigationVA.org (MitVA). MitVA is a grants management system that allows the mitigation grant to be managed from pre-application to closeout. VDEM will also be allowing for submission of technical support documents that can be claimed as pre-award costs, until Nov. 13. No pre-award costs can be claimed in an application until after the FEMA period of availability is opened.

For more information on how to apply, visit <http://www.vaemergency.gov/emergency-management-community/grants/unified-hazard-mitigation-assistance-hma-grant-program-2015/> or contact Robbie Coates, Grants Manager for Disaster Programs at 804-897-9766.

Family Medicine Practice Moves Into Renovated Cancer Center

By Stefanie Jackson

Riverside Eastern Shore Family Medicine in Nassawadox has moved down the street to the former Riverside Shore Cancer Center building. The cancer center relocated to Onancock when the hospital moved there last year.

"The building that now houses our Nassawadox primary care team is only fifteen years old and was in good shape, so it was perfect for adaptation into a doctor's office," said John Peterman, vice president and administrator for Riverside Shore Health Services.

"We are glad to continue to provide services in a building that has such a rich history of community involvement. The people of the Shore have demonstrated how important health care is to them, and we are proud to continue our commitment to serving them in this renovated facility," Peterman said.

The original building was partly funded by community donations made in 2001 and 2002.

"Providing primary care in Nassawadox as well as Parksley and Cape Charles makes services accessible for everyone on the Shore, and that is part of our business strategy as well as our mission to provide care in a way that we would appreciate for our own family members," Peterman said.

The Riverside primary care facility in Nassawadox is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on the first Saturday of each month from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. On each remaining Saturday the Riverside Cape Charles Medical Center is open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Riverside Eastern Shore Family Medicine can be found at its new address, 10085 William F. Bernart Circle, on the corner of Hospital Avenue and Rogers Drive in Nassawadox.

FINAL SEMESTER BEFORE NEW COLLEGE BUILDING OPENS

Submitted Article and Photos

New students and their parents visiting the campus of Eastern Shore Community College this summer have been treated to a preview of things to come. The progress on the college's new Academic and Administration Building has been immediately noticeable to everyone visiting. Even staff and faculty on campus every day are marveling at the changes as the replacement facility takes shape adjacent to the Workforce Development Services Building on the campus on Lankford Highway in Melfa.

The 47,000-square-foot, new, two-story building will replace the existing academic building with a projected opening in late spring 2019. With this in mind, incoming students will be a part of the final two semesters in the current building, which opened in 1974.

The fall semester begins on Monday, Aug. 20. The final day for registration will be Sunday, Aug. 19 (online). ESCC will offer expanded hours in student services to accommodate registration. Monday, Aug. 13, through Thursday, Aug. 16, the college will be open from 8 a.m.-7p.m. Friday, Aug. 17, will be normal hours of 8 a.m.-10 p.m.

The registration process can be accomplished online as well at es.vccs.edu, in addition to visiting the campus for help and assistance where needed. For more information, please call 757-789-1789.

Conowingo Dam Water Release Could Pose Danger to Boaters, Aquaculture

By Stefanie Jackson

Boaters heading north up the Chesapeake Bay within the next several weeks may wish to proceed with extra caution and remain aware of the possible presence of large pieces of debris in the water from the opening of floodgates at the Conowingo Dam in Maryland, about 10 miles from the Chesapeake Bay, on July 26, following a period of heavy rain.

A U.S. Coast Guard safety broadcast

notice to mariners sent July 27 stated that at 8 a.m. the previous day, 18 to 30 of Conowingo Dam's 53 floodgates were opened, possibly releasing large numbers of logs and other debris. Mariners were asked to use extreme caution when transiting the area.

On Aug. 5, the Coast Guard received reports of a 2-foot or 3-foot-wide log in a channel of the upper Chesapeake Bay, visible 10 or 12 inches above the water's surface, and a 1-foot-wide, 12-foot-long log, both stuck in the mud.

On Aug. 6, the Maryland Department of Natural Resources reported a debris field about 1 nautical mile long and .5 nautical miles wide, consisting of large trees and branches, near the entrance to the Chester River. That same day, the department reported a debris field near Kent Island.

Cape Charles Harbor Master Charlie

Farlow addressed local concerns about the possibility of large trees or other debris traveling down to the lower Chesapeake Bay. "We'll be the last ones to see it if it makes it this far ... hopefully it won't affect us at all," he said.

Farlow said boats going north should take caution, particularly when traveling at night. Any boaters who encounter large debris should slow down or stop until they are able to navigate around it and always report it to the Coast Guard.

"You really should be worried about the aquaculture," Farlow added. "Debris can be cleaned up," but changes in salt levels in the water can be very detrimental to the aquaculture on which Northampton County depends, including crabs, oysters, and clams.

Farlow counted possible water pollution and disease among additional concerns and expected agencies and organizations such as the Northampton County Health Department, the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, and the Chesapeake Bay Foundation to respond to those matters should the need arise.

Thieves Target Copper Wire in Distribution Lines

Submitted Article

A&N Electric Cooperative, like other electric utilities, is experiencing an issue with copper theft in the area. Copper theft is a serious problem in our community that jeopardizes public safety and can lead to severe injury or even death.

Recently thieves have been targeting neutral distribution lines in Accomack County. The method used to remove the copper wire from the cooperative's distribution poles is extremely dangerous. The thefts can also lead to electric service reliability issues.

Isolated, low-traffic areas of the distribution system are being targeted, due to their secluded nature.

The cooperative has reported the incidents to the Accomack county Sheriff's Office.

A&N Electric Cooperative crews in clearly marked yellow trucks or the cooperative's contractor Rock Creek Line Construction Inc., in clearly marked white bucket trucks, are the only ones authorized to work on the distribution lines.

A&N Electric Cooperative reminds our community members to be on the lookout for suspicious activity. If you suspect someone of copper theft please call the cooperative at 757-787-9750 or the Accomack County Sheriff's Office at 757-787-1131. Any information members of the community can provide is appreciated.

Bayside Poker Run Successful in Friendly Seas

Submitted Article

The Pungoteague Ruritan Club's 2018 Bayside Poker Run held on Saturday, July 28, was a great success on a day that provided a break in our rain-soaked recent weeks. The annual event featured small boats cruising the Chesapeake Bay in a navigational competition that included Onancock, Pungoteague, and Nandua creeks. A large crowd gathered to attend the awards celebration on Nandua Creek at the end of the day, where a bayside cookout was attended by captains, crew, and club members. Fun, food, music, and great fellowship abounded.

This year's small boat competition once again included the Chesapeake Challenge in the navigational component of the event. This challenge required the crew of each boat to compete in a physical activity at each checkpoint. This year's activities at checkpoints included a crab pot competition, cornhole, a fish toss event, and a Pungo Pong competition that was held on the lawn at the Eastern Shore Yacht and Country Club checkpoint. When the final points appeared on the leader board, the Some Beach captained by Ryan Custis of Nandua Creek was declared the winner with a score of 163 points out of a possible 195. Captain Tommy Taylor's boat was the runner-up with his crew earning 162 points.

The Chesapeake Challenge prize was $500, and poker hand winner Captain Bo Mason's crew on the Drum Bums won a week-end getaway vacation prize of equal value. Thanks to the generosity of Eastern Shore local businesses. Many hundreds of dollars worth of additional dock prizes were won by various participants.

Very lucky raffle winners Tom Weeks and Matthew Freeze went home with a Turner Sculpture crab and an original Willie Crockett painting respectively. In addition to thanking the businesses for their contributions, event coordinator Paul Custis also expressed appreciation to many other local businesses for helping to make the event possible. Carla Lauer of Hacks Neck received a huge thank-you from the crowd for hosting the awards ceremony at her beautiful home on Bay Breeze Farm overlooking the Chesapeake Bay and Nandua Creek.

The generosity of the events corporate sponsors will help the Pungoteague Ruritan Club build wheelchair ramps for citizens in need in the club's service area as part of its community service outreach activities and also to award college scholarships to local students.

Winning captains and their crew from the Bayside Poker Run sponsored by the Pungoteague Ruritan Club are (from left) Tisha Henderson, Melanie Mason holding winning poker hand, Captain Bo Mason of Drum Bums, Captain Ryan Custis, winning navigation captain of Some Beach, Wanda Custis, Matthew Freeze, Wyatt Henderson, Bonnie Nordstrom, Ray Nordstrom, and Christy Freeze. Fishing from the Shore

By Bill Hall

The eyes of the offshore fishing world have been focused on Ocean City, Md., this week and the 45th edition of the White Marlin Open. Around 382 registered boats, including some of the world's top tournament captains aboard some of the sport's most well-equipped and experienced vessels from up and down the East Coast, are vying for a portion of the estimated $5.45 million tournament purse. The fishing started on the morning of Aug. 6 and concludes on the afternoon of Aug. 10. Offshore action has been on the slow side recently, but if anybody can find the fish and get them to bite, it will be some of these tournament captains.

The vessel Auspicious, out of Palm Beach Fla., took the opening day blue marlin lead with an 881-pound fish. The huge fish was landed by New Jersey angler Joe Rahman and is the sixth largest blue marlin in the history of the tournament. If the catch holds on to the lead, it could earn approximately $700,000.

For those of us who do not have an extra $10,000 or more to fish a tournament, Captain Steve's Bait & Tackle on Chincoteague Island has a youth croaker tournament that runs through Aug. 15, and the Onancock Volunteer Fire Department will host its 2nd Annual Croaker Classic on Aug. 11 out of the Onancock Town Wharf.

Lower Shore – The big news here has been the appearance of Spanish mackerel in the lower bay, some exceeding five pounds. Anglers are catching these tasty fish by high-speed trolling, pulling small Drone and Clark spoons on long leaders behind inline sinkers, and small planers.

Mark Snook, of Chris' Bait & Tackle, reported that croakers have become established out of Oyster and the Little Inlet. Cobia catches were still being made in the areas of buoys 16 and 13, as well as on the Inner Middle Grounds shoals. Spanish mackerel were being caught, with the most productive location extending from just outside the concrete ships down to the bridge-tunnel. The shop weighed in a 4-pound, 2-ounce Spanish for 4-year-old Lliam Behe. Sea mullet catches were coming from just outside of the pound nets off Sunset Beach. Spadefish continue to be caught, but the size class continues to shrink. The State Park pier was producing a few kingfish (whiting) and croaker.

Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle, reported that the weather had made it tough for some anglers to get out, but those who did reported a good cobia bite. Spadefish were landed around Plantation Light and the fourth island of the bridge-tunnel. Catches of spot and small croakers have been made off the Kiptopeke State Park pier in the evenings. The shop weighed in a 5-pound, 14-ounce Spanish mackerel for Max Williams.

Upper Chesapeake Bay – The Onancock Volunteer Fire Department is hosting its Second Annual Croaker Classic on Saturday, Aug. 11. Fishing is from 1-5 p.m., the entry fee is $40/angler, and all entrants will receive a free T-shirt, tournament towel, and entry to the Tournament Deck Party at the Mallards Restaurant, immediately following the weigh-in.

Wachapreague – Captain Lindsay Paul, of Trident Tackle, reported that flounder fishing has been good on the nearshore wrecks, but very spotty inside the inlet. Croaker are being caught inside the inlet, but they are small. A few dolphin (mahi) have been caught from 30 fathoms and deeper, including over the north and south lumps. Best action has been around the lobster pot buoys. Captain Paul said that tuna have been scarce.

Chincoteague – Donna Rae, at Captain Bob's Marina, reported that there were some flounder still being caught in Queen Sound where one angler also boated a small black drum. Flounder catches were also reported from inside the Chincoteague Channel in an area behind the American Legion. Kingfish (whiting) and croaker catches were made near the inlet. Sharks have been the most consistent catches. Flounder action has been good over the subway cars for fish up to 26 inches in length. The same locations are producing lots of triggerfish, a few black sea bass and small gray trout.

Pete Vasilou, at Captain Steve's Bait & Tackle, reported that there are a lot of "toothy" sharks in the inlet. The inlet was also producing catches of croaker and spot. Blackfish Banks was producing a nice class of flounder, but flounder action inside the inlet was much slower and the fish have been smaller. Some tuna have moved inshore and catches were made over the Parking Lot and Lumpy Bottom by anglers both trolling and chunking. In the surf, catches of spot, kingfish, and croaker were being made late in the evenings and early in the mornings.

Camp Based on 'Black Panther' Themes Helps Children Succeed

In Touch Academy, a new local non-profit, has a vision for each child on the Eastern Shore. "We would like to see each child have the resources and skills to succeed in school and in the community," said Pastor Willie Justis, who spearheaded the organization, Justis is also pastor of Holy Trinity Baptist Church in Painter. "Each child deserves the chance to succeed; however, due to circumstances often beyond their control, many children find themselves lacking needed social skills, academic skills, or emotional support," he said. Justis is particularly concerned with the needs of children suspended from or at risk from being suspended from school.

In Touch Academy Summer Camp was the first program offered by the organization. Twenty-six children and numerous volunteers designed a two-week camp around themes found in the hit movie "Black Panther," which included overcoming obstacles, pride in cultural heritage, and learning from heroes. The free camp provided transportation, meals, and activities at Mary N. Smith Cultural Center from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. for children aged 7 to 12.

A field trip to Hampton University was one of the camp's highlights. "We wanted to give the children the experience of being on a college campus and an opportunity to visit the campus museum, which houses a rich display of African and Native American artifacts, paintings, and sculptures," said Justis. "We wanted to give these children the message that they can be there too with perseverance."

For more information visit the In Touch Academy's Facebook page. Anyone who would like to make a donation to ongoing programs may do so by contacting Pastor Willie Justis at 757-787-4345 or 757-709-2275. Donations may also be sent to our nonprofit donation page at www.givelify.com or through the In Touch Academy's Facebook page using the donation button for nonprofits.

James treats patients like family.

THE REVEREND ELWOOD WHITE, MRS. WHITE AND JAMES ABBOTT, RN

And for Reverend White, that made all the difference.

When the Reverend Elwood White required care for a heart condition, James made sure he was treated like family. There were some good reasons. In his role as a minister, Rev. White married James and his wife. Years before that he was James's school bus driver. But making sure Rev. White got the best possible care isn't out of the ordinary for James.

Because as a Riverside nurse, he treats all his patients like family.

At 100 Years Old, Parksley Resident Still Votes

Article and Photos by Al McKegg
Special to the Eastern Shore Post

Using her cane, Emma Frank Edwards — Miss Emmy to her family and everyone in her Parksley neighborhood on Leslie Trent Road — makes her way to the kitchen, where a chicken is thawing in the sink. Her granddaughter Karen White, probably not for the first time, says “Grandma, you really ought to get one of those quad canes.”

“No, I get along fine with this one.”

A scanner radio crackles police and fire calls in her living room. She counts on it to keep her in touch with what’s happening around the county and warns any visiting relative (many visit) “Don’t touch my scanner!”

One hundred years old, Edwards is preparing to vote in November’s election, as she has in every election since 1965. She’s completed her Absentee Ballot application, and a ballot form will be mailed to her.

Edwards has lived her entire life on the Shore. Walking — with or without a cane — was her main way of getting around. Born in Hopeton, and after moving to Mears, she walked — there were no buses for black children — three miles to the two-room elementary school in Macedonia, outside Bloxom. And seven miles to the First Baptist church in Mappsville. And later, after moving to Parksley, walking to services at Adams United Methodist Church.

“Easy” isn’t a word that comes to mind when you listen to Edward’s life. She was born Emma Frank Downing: Frank after her great-grandfather, Emma after her great-grandmother, who was born into slavery. Her childhood homes had no electricity, running water, or central heat. Clothes were scrubbed on a washboard, hung on a line, and ironed with a flatiron heated on the stove.

At age ten, she went to work in the fields, stripping fodder, digging potatoes, picking string beans, strawberries, cucumbers, and tomatoes. The workday was sunup to sundown, 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

If you could do an adult’s work in the field, you earned $3 a day. The children and the babies came into the field with the adults. Children who were too young to work played in the shade. Babies lay in a basket that was pushed along as the rows were worked. Each worker took their own lunch; there were no food trucks.

When Edwards left the fields, she took a job at Jay Cee cleaners, working there until she was 73. Then she worked at the Perdue poultry plant, in the Evisceration Department, where she and another woman gutted chickens coming at them via conveyor belt at the rate of 100 birds per minute.

No, “easy” isn’t the word that comes to mind.

Leaving Perdue, she worked for the Carlton Byrd canning factory, cleaning the facility until it closed, then took a job at the home of D.L. and Elsie Webb. She cleaned for the Webbs until she retired at age 94.

Family is a huge part of her life. The daughter of Sally Warner Downing and Norwood Downing, she’s personally raised four generations, has seven grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren, and 18 great-great-grandchildren, with a 19th on the way. And she’s not the first centenarian in her family: her great-grandmother Emma Warner (“Granny Lady”) a midwife who birthed all Edwards’ children, lived to 106.

Edwards gives credit for her health and longevity to God and to not drinking or smoking. She married Preston Edwards in 1934. Preston died 30 years ago; their three sons are all now dead.

At 100, Edwards has a lot of memories. Some of segregation, when blacks could work in Shore restaurants but not eat in them; when Shore restrooms and movies and buses were segregated; and when Jim Crow restrictions made it virtually impossible for a black person to register to vote. Though John Kennedy is her favorite president, she could not vote for him due to Jim Crow. She cast her first vote as soon as the 1965 Voting Rights Act took effect, and has voted in every election since, usually walking to the polls, often with her children in tow, emphasizing the importance of the vote and the sacrifices it took to achieve that right.

Many of her memories are warm and joyful, of family and a strong supporting community.

At butchering time, an all-day event, the men killed and butchered the hogs while the women cleaned chitterlings, made sausage, cut pork chops and tenderloin and made souse cheese, cooking and talking up a storm. Even today, on Leslie Trent Road, the community watches out for Edwards. If her screen door is banging, someone fixes it. If her lights are on when they should be off (or vice versa) a neighbor notices.

Having lived through Jim Crow, she's very positive about the country today. She says she's been a Democrat "since I could scratch a pencil." Asked about Donald Trump: "I don't look at him."

As the chicken thaws in the sink, White reminds everyone that Edwards still prepares dinner for the family Sundays and holidays. The meat may be turkey or ham or chicken, but the real highlights of the meal are her chicken and homemade dumplings, sweet and white potato pies, and sometimes homemade ice cream. In accommodation to her age, she now uses an electric ice cream churn instead of her hand-cranked one.

"She pretty much does it all. She'll let me bring something if I insist," White said.

Al McKegg is the former editor of the Eastern Shore Democrat, a newsletter of the ESVA Democrats.

Virginia's next general election is Nov. 6. If you cannot vote at your polling place on Election Day, you can vote using the absentee ballot option. Many reasons for voting absentee are recognized (e.g. out of town for business, school, vacation, disability, college students, etc.). Absentee ballot applications are available at any registrar's office. Accomack's is at the Circuit Court Building on Courthouse Avenue in Accomack; Northampton's is on Courthouse Rd in Eastville. Both are available online at <https://www.elections.virginia.gov/casting-a-ballot/absentee-voting/>

Exmore Police Dept. Hosts 3rd Annual National Night Out "Party in the Park"

Submitted Article and Photos

Hundreds of Eastern Shore residents turned out to participate in the Exmore Police Department's 3rd Annual National Night Out in the Exmore Town Park on Tuesday evening, Aug. 7. The ESVA-wide community event was a chance to socialize with neighbors and local law enforcement officials with the purpose of forging more solid networks to fight crime.

The Northampton County Sheriff's office was on hand to provide free IDENT-A-KID fingerprinting to help protect our children. The Exmore Police Department, led by Chief Angelo DiMartino, distributed firearm safety information and gun locks, and the ESVA's most famous canine, McGruff the Crime Dog, passed out hugs. Kids received free books for the Northampton County Library, free toys from Dollar General, and free dance lessons from Exmore Police Sgt. Jason Campbell. J.D. Outten kept the party going with music from his DJ playlist, including crowd favorite, "The Macarena!"

"This is the third consecutive year that our department has hosted this event," said Chief DiMartino. "It is the only celebration of National Night Out here on the ESVA, and Sgt. Campbell and the Exmore Police team deserve a lot of credit for their hard work in ensuring everyone had a good time."

PETA CALLS FOR END TO PONY PENNING AND PUBLIC RESPONDS

PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) recently called on the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company to end its annual Pony Penning, including the swim and auction, following the death of the mare, Butterfly Kisses, in an accident while in a pen on the carnival grounds. The public responded on the fire company's Facebook page and with letters.

Below is PETA's letter to the fire company, followed by a slightly condensed version of responses: a letter to PETA by Lois Szymanski, director of the Feather Fund.

Letter from PETA

I'm writing again on behalf of PETA and our more than 6.5 million members and supporters worldwide, including thousands across Virginia, where our headquarters are, in response to the death of Butterfly Kisses. She died needlessly of a broken neck after being chased into a pen and left behind a now-motherless foal. Once again, we urge you to end the annual pony swim and auction and instead find humane ways to raise funds for the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Department's important work while managing the pony herd's size.

Butterfly Kisses' death is more evidence that penning up wild ponies and auctioning off foals are reckless. Had she not been penned at the carnival grounds after the auction, she would still be alive. This is not the first time that a pony has died at the fairgrounds or the first death that has been written off as an "accident." Reports going back decades discuss how frightening and stressful the ordeal is for these animals and how ponies have been seen penned without access to shade or water and hit with sticks.

While in theory a few auctioned ponies may go to good homes with families who have the money to take care of them, their fate is never certain after they are sold and there is the strong possibility that they may end up at slaughterhouses or neglected and starved as new guardians lose interest in them.

It's time to reconsider what you are doing. Since this event's inception, much has changed in the way that people view animals—who were once seen merely as commodities—and in the development of humane population-control methods. This pony swim is similar to other festivals, such as turkey drops and greased pig wrestling, that have taken their places in the annals of history as examples of the callous disregard of other living, feeling beings. Won't you please choose to raise funds with events that are modern and animal-friendly? We'd be happy to discuss suggestions with you. Thank you for your consideration.

Ingrid E. Newkirk, President of PETA
Condensed Response to PETA

I am director of the Feather Fund, a group that purchases one to three Chincoteague ponies each year during Pony Penning for deserving children in honor ofCarolynn Suplee, who made it her practice to annually purchase a foal for a child until she died of cancer. In that capacity and as an author who has researched and written about the Chincoteague Ponies for over 30 years, I would like to respond to your radical posts and recent press release about the annual swim and auction. Your letter has prompted reactions from others without any knowledge. They are not digging deep to learn the truth.

First, you speak of how the ponies are forced to swim. Do you know that these ponies swim on their own all the time? They swim across the bay and get into the campgrounds or corn fields. I have witnessed more than once, a mare giving her young foal a swimming lesson. Search YouTube for videos of them swimming on their own. Some ponies have even shown us that they enjoy the swim. In 2009, a stallion named Miracle Man sensed that it was around swim time and brought his entire herd across the channel a week early. He trotted down the streets to the carnival grounds and waited to be let into the pens. This started a trend of him coming early five more years in a row.

That last year, more stallions followed him, bringing their mares across early. They knew that the carnival pens would offer huge, round bales of good hay and buckets of cold water to drink, and they could not wait to get there.

The swim is not cruel, and no ponies have ever drowned or died as a result of the swim. The older ponies, the very pregnant ponies, mares with young foals, and ponies with injuries or health issues do not swim. They come to Chincoteague on a trailer.

Many of the things you addressed in your letter happened many decades ago. When you write about things that happened in years long past, you negate the fact that the fire company has evolved and has continuously made changes to better the lives of these ponies and specifically their care during Pony Penning week. Every trailer is inspected before a pony leaves the island. It must meet stringent standards. The fire company now has a list of people on hand who have been charged with animal abuse and who are not allowed to take a foal home, no matter how much they bid. That is why you occasionally see a foal that has been sold come through the sale again. The buyer went to pay and was not approved.

At Pony Penning, each foal leaving the island has a Coggins test (for equine infectious anemia) and the owner is offered shots before it leaves. Foals are handled with care in the sale ring and then returned to their mother if they are too young to leave. In those cases, they remain with their dam until the fall. At the sale, these are called fall pickups. A woman named Darcy Cole hikes all the way north three times a week and records data on every single pony, including the birth date of every foal (never off by more than four days) and she now provides all her data to the fire company in a book (that can also be purchased at Pony Penning). That book gives the fire company the age of the foal so that, unlike in the past, it is not up to the guess of a veterinarian—who is always on hand for the entire Pony Penning week.

Throughout the year, whenever the fire company gets a call from Darcy Cole, other hikers, or the tour boat captains who are always on the lookout that they have spotted a pony in trouble, there is an immediate response. The fire company, this year alone, pulled in horses with cuts from oyster beds, rescued an orphaned foal, and pulled several horses out when they were stuck in the mud (because they are wild ponies). Two of the older ones did not make it, but the third had almost two months of individual care until she was fully healed.

PETA stated some blatant untruths in their recent press release. The mare, Butterfly Kisses, was not "chased into" a pen at Pony Penning. I know because I was there. She was the lead mare for a pony band led by the stallion Riptide. She was trotting through the field and he was following because she was in heat. She happened to slip, and she hit the fence when she fell, breaking her neck. The vet was there within minutes and she did not suffer. When the fire company said it was a freak accident, this was a truthful statement.

This could have happened anywhere in the wild. Even wild ponies are fenced away from the roads and the people to protect the ponies. Unlike the Maryland side, which has had 48 ponies hit by cars since 1982 with 31 of them dying, zero Chincoteague Ponies have been hit on the Virginia side.

An entire community of people does its best to track every Chincoteague Pony foal sold. We have over 5,000 members on the I Love Chincoteague Ponies Facebook site, reporting all bad situations. A recent letter-writing campaign about an abuse case in Frederick County resulted in charges being filed against a woman whose Chincoteague ponies were seized and rescued. In another case, we banded together to rescue a Chincoteague pony found in a sale barn and about to go to a kill buyer. This pony was a solid chestnut—hard to identify—but detective work and help from the Chincoteague Fire Company records helped us identify her. To make this easier in the future, we asked the fire company to microchip all foals sold at auction to make rescues easier. They not only said "yes," they absorbed the cost, announcing this year at auction that all foals will be microchipped going forward.

A few years ago, the fire company built new, larger, double-fenced pens on Assateague and then purchased and erected shade tents, so the horses had more room, better protection from the viewing crowds, and adequate shade. This was no cheap undertaking, but it was for the good of the ponies. They always have large troughs of fresh water and more hay in the pens than they can eat, a fact that is underscored by the uneaten round bales still in the now-empty pens.

Over the long and sometimes harsh winters, the fire company drops hay off at various points on the island, providing extra feed to them. The fire company also spends tens of thousands of dollars per roundup at two more roundups per year, in the spring and in the fall. Ponies get complete vet checks at these roundups, are dewormed, vaccinated for Eastern and Western West Nile disease, have their hooves and teeth checked, and have any cuts or injuries tended to.

Without the care of the fire company and the sale of the foals, the island would be overpopulated and there would not be enough grass to eat. They would starve and die a horrible death.

Please reconsider your attack on the fire company, in the name of all that is good.

Bayshore Concrete: Loss of an Institution

Dear Editor:

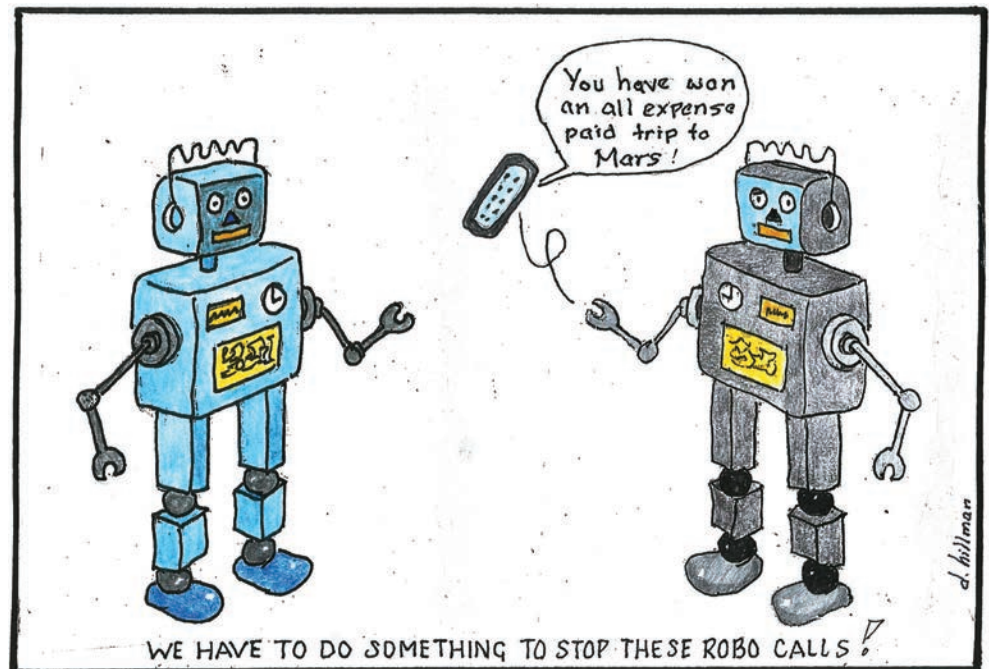

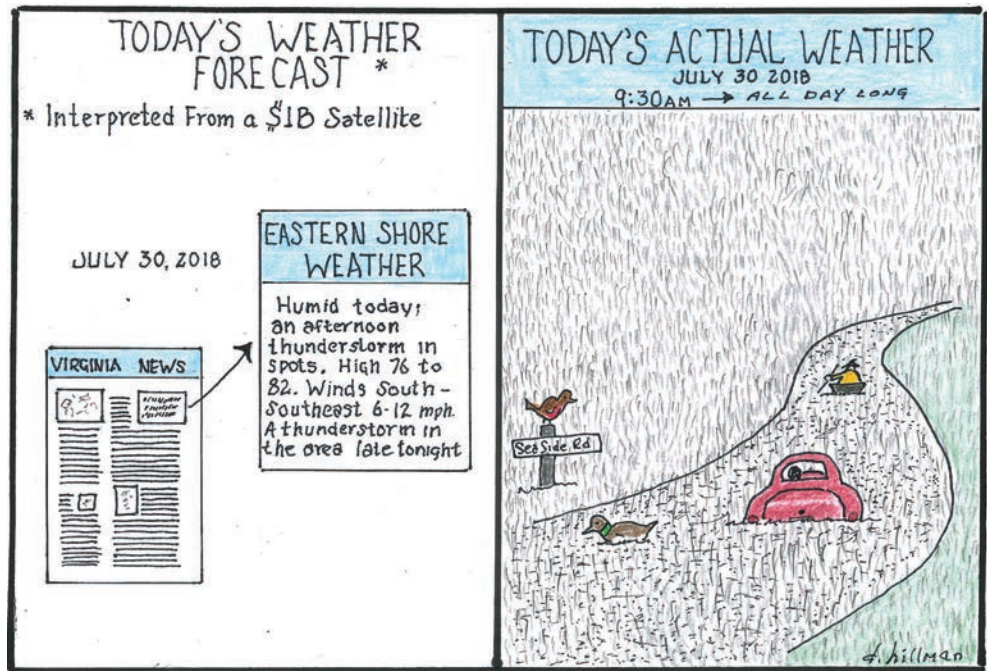

Bayshore Concrete Inc. was an institution for many people of the Eastern Shore for many years. My father worked there for many years (39) until his retirement. I was working there until recently when they closed the gates (19 years).

I also had dreams of retiring from there. For as much as I would like to point the finger at mismanagement, this is the world of construction and there are always going to be peaks and valleys.

I just wanted to acknowledge the passing of a vital part of our community. It will be greatly missed.
